Knell of NRA To Be Tolled In a Few Days By Roosevelt

His Order Transferring Units Will Kill All Revival Hope.

Other Departments Will Absorb Staffs

Action Is Expected to Bolster Promise of 'Breathing Spell.'

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt will issue an executive order within the next few days transferring what is left of NRA to the Commerce and Labor Departments.

The order is expected to mark abandonment of all consideration of revival of NRA in any form and to help bolster the President's promise of a breathing spell for business.

The consumers division, now under Dr. Walton H. Hamilton, will be transferred to the Labor Department, to work in co-operation with the Bureau of Labor Statistics. This division now employs fewer than 30 persons.

The remaining personnel, which, after January 1, will include about 1,000 employes, will be transferred to the Commerce Department, where it gradually will be liquidated.

No vestige of NRA will remain after April 1.

When Congress adjourned last summer President Roosevelt still was contemplating further NRA legislation. He asked the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee to study the subject. The committees have done virtually nothing. There is every indication that there will be no Administration action to bring about new legislation.

1,000 Face Dismissal.

More than 1,000 NRA employes will be dismissed the first of the new year. These will include the complete personnel of the Robert committee, studying changes in employment following the Schechter decision; the group studying possibility of forcing code compliance on Government contractors, the group handling voluntary codes and most of the clerical staff of Maj. George L. Berry, co-ordinator for industrial co-operation.

Most of the employes to be transferred to the Commerce Department are now on the staff of Dr. Leon C. Marshall and are engaged in writing a history of industries under codes. Their task is nearing completion.

The executive order transferring the NRA organization was prepared some time ago. It was approved by Cabinet officials involved, but it has been held up because of an internal row of which Maj. Berry has been the center.

Berry has insisted that his recent business conference was not called for the purpose of continuing the NRA, but behind the scenes he has been working to keep the organization intact at least for a time.

Berry, it was learned, proposed that the organization be continued after January 1 under supervision of a committee of which he would be the chairman and the other members of which would be Secretary Roper and Secretary Perkins.

This suggestion was vetoed. Not only was it vetoed, but orders were issued dismissing 40 of the 66 employes of Berry's office. These employes had been lent him by NRA. The remaining 26 are directly on the coordinator's pay roll, although the funds for their salaries are coming from NRA.

To Meet January 6.

Berry suggested the new NRA setup following resignation of Laurence J. Martin, present head of the recovery organization. Martin will retire to go into private business January 1. Principal opponent of the Berry suggestion was Secretary Roper. Roper already has a business advisory council. Berry is attempting to set up a council of his own on which both

With Senator as He Fights for Life

MRS. THOMAS D. SCHALL, as she waited at Casualty Hospital last night.

Sen. Schall, Still Unconscious, Shows Gain in Fight for Life

Wife, Remaining at Bedside, Pleads With Blind Minnesotan, Injured by Automobile Monday, to Battle on Against Death.

Thomas D. Schall, blind United States Senator from Minnesota, who suffered a fractured skull when he was struck by an automobile while crossing the Washington-Baltimore boulevard Thursday night, still was unconscious early this morning, but there was a "slight" improvement in his condition.

Two women sat on either side of his bed on the third floor of Casualty Hospital. One was a graduate nurse, the other Mrs. Margaret Huntley Schall, his wife.

"Fight 'em, Tom," Mrs. Schall whispered in his ear. "Fight 'em."

She held his hand in hers.

"He must be on the way to consciousness," Mrs. Schall said. "For the first time, he sort of gripped my fingers tonight."

"If he does become conscious again," Mrs. Schall said, "I know he will ask for me. Then, too, I believe I can help him. I won't worry if he regains consciousness. He is a fighter, you know."

Mrs. Schall, a small, gray-haired woman with an abundance of vitality, was cheered by the messages that poured in at the hospital and at the Senator's office on Capitol Hill.

The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, famous radio priest, notified Mrs. Schall he had said a special mass for her husband.

"He also sent me this by a special messenger," Mrs. Schall said, and she exhibited a tiny medal which had been blessed from the Papal bet.

Beck Demands Supreme Court Invalidate TVA

Decision, With 3 Other New Deal Cases, Seen by January 6.

By Robert C. Albright.

Charges of "progressive destruction" and "administrative malevolence" were flung at Tennessee Valley's power yardstick experiment in the Supreme Court yesterday as James M. Beck, constitutional lawyer and member of the American Liberty League, concluded a plea for TVA invalidation.

Beck, a former solicitor general, matched wits against Stanley Reed, the present holder of that office, with nine justices as referees. The fate of the law last night was in the lap of the high court, with three other New Deal cases. A decision on all four is possible January 6, three days after Congress returns.

The Government meanwhile assented to a Supreme Court test of a fifth administration measure—the Guffey coal law. The Carter Coal Co. petitioned the court to take the case, appealing from an unfavorable lower court ruling. Yesterday's Government briefs asked an "early decision by this court of the issues raised in the petition." The R. C. Tway, and 18 other Kentucky coal companies, also appealed from a ruling of a Kentucky Federal court, holding the law valid.

Later in the day, the Government

Tokyo Deplores Pittman's Talk Of Pacific War

Americans, Japanese Hold Senator Is Uninformed on Empire's Aims.

Senatorial Tact: Pittman's Reported Speech—Editorial, Page 8.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Tokyo, Dec. 20.—The address of Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, in Las Vegas, Nev., yesterday, in which he asserted that Japan plans to attack the United States, created "a most painful impression" here.

Both Americans and Japanese deplored the Senator's warlike statement, which was cabled to Tokyo in full, and agreed with Foreign Office Spokesman Eiji Amau, who said that Pittman's arguments "show a complete lack of understanding of the Far West."

American residents were unanimous in the belief that Japan does not intend to attack the United States now and that there is no reason to believe she plans such action in future. They pointed out that Japan's program of foreign expansion has been consistent throughout her history and that it always has been directed toward the adjacent north Asiatic mainland.

Japan feels that her enemy is Soviet Russia and her policy, far from envisaging aggression against the United States, is to work for

Nitrate Explosion Sinks Ship; 31 Workers Believed Killed

By the Associated Press.

Santos, Brazil, Dec. 20.—An explosion aboard a nitrate-laden Swedish ship in the harbor today caused the death of at least 31 persons, including three members of the crew, authorities believed tonight.

The vessel, the 3,019-ton freighter Britt Marie, sank almost immediately after the blast.

So great was the confusion along the wharves hours after the explosion that no accurate check of the death toll could be made.

Port officials said that about 50 stevedores were believed to have been aboard the ship at the time of the explosion.

The force of the explosion hurled sacks full of nitrate through the air to the dock district. Some fell on the roofs of warehouses and set them afire. Such blazes were quickly extinguished.

Several persons about the docks were injured in the disaster by flying fragments. Windows near Pier 26, where the freighter was docked, were shattered and the explosion was heard in the center of Santos.

The Britt Marie had just brought the cargo of nitrate here from Chile and had planned to return to Valpariso with fruit.

Boston Lightship Rammed.

Boston, Dec. 20 (AP).—The British freighter Seven Seas Spray rammed and crippled the lightship Boston today, and tonight was seized to satisfy a Federal claim for $20,000 damages.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Charles W. Bartlett charged negligence to the freighter's master, Capt. W. H. Roberts.

The Boston, leaking badly, was nearby Quincy.

Borah Entry Seen Forcing G. O. P. Issue

Support Given Idahoan From New England to Oregon.

Finances Believed Chief Problem in Drive for Presidency.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Announcement of the willingness of Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, to permit the use of his name for the Republican Presidential nomination in forthcoming State primaries yesterday had the immediate effect of stirring up more political activity than any event within a year.

A probable result of the statements made Thursday night and yesterday by Senator Borah will be increased activity among other aspirants for the nomination to protect themselves against drives of the Idahoan's friends.

Thus the leonine-headed Idahoan, one of the stormy petrels of the Republican Party and one of the most colorful men in the Senate, with a few words, has inaugurated the 1936 Presidential campaign.

Outcome in Doubt.

None could be found who would venture to predict the outcome of what has been started. It may mean the nomination of Senator Borah, or his establishment as an influential voice otherwise within the Republican convention, or the complete rout of himself and his liberal followers. It was certain, however, that he had put zest into the campaign.

Senator Borah's declaration that he would permit any liberal group to set himself up as their standard bearer in the fight over delegates to the Republican National Convention in June yesterday brought results both favorable and unfavorable to his cause.

Word came from New York last night that a wing of that State's Republican Party, under the leadership of former State Chairman W. Kingsland Macy, would soon launch a fight for delegates pledged to Senator Borah. Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, previously had indorsed the Idahoan as the party's best Presidential bet.

Massachusetts Fight.

In Massachusetts Robert M. Washburn, the unsuccessful Republican candidate for the United States Senate last year, announced he would lead a movement to send a Borah-instructed delegation from that State. In Wisconsin, where Senator Borah Thursday night said his name might be used, the first announced candidate for delegate to the Republican convention said he would pledge himself to the Idahoan.

Senator Frederic Steiwer (Republican, of Oregon, asserted Senator Borah's "candidacy will be well received in Oregon and if he enters the primary, he'll come out on top there." Senator L. J. Frazier (Republican), North Dakota, said he was "for Borah," adding that "he will sweep the West and Middle West."

On the other side of the day's ledger, however, was the comment of Thomas M. Duncan, political adviser to Gov. Philip La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, which might be taken to indicate that the La Follette brothers will not be friendly to the Idahoan's aspirations. Mr. Duncan asserted that "Borah has no chance of attracting Progressive voters in this State." He added that the Idahoan had a reputation as a dry, whereas Wisconsin is a wet State.

A less tangible unfavorable factor

Four Indicted In War Sales 'Conspiracy'

Gen. Williams, T. J. Ryan and 2 Silvermans Are Named.

Hid Salesman From U.S. Army Supplies Probe, Is Charge.

Four principals in a Congressional investigation of War Department lobbying were indicted yesterday on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government.

Those named by the District Supreme Court grand jury were former Brig. Gen. Alexander E. Williams, once acting quartermaster general of the Army; Thomas Jefferson Ryan, lawyer and former Representative from New York, and Joseph Silverman, jr., and Nathan Silverman, brothers.

Williams was dismissed from the Army last spring after his conviction by a military court of accepting an improper loan.

Joseph Silverman, jr., son of an immigrant, reputedly became a millionaire through buying War Department surplus goods and selling trucks to the Army.

Parties Charged.

Two years of investigation by the House Military Affairs Committee, indignant over lobbying in the award of Army contracts, brought testimony of lavish entertainments and parties given for officials by the Silvermans.

It was the alleged conspiracy by the defendants to hide Frank E. Speicher, an inner tube salesman, and prevent his questioning by the committee which led to the indictments.

Irvin I. Goldstein, an assistant United States attorney, said he would ask bail of $1,500 in each case and would seek an early trial. All of the defendants were expected to surrender and post bond shortly.

The prosecutor said he knew of no other case in which a defendant was charged with a criminal offense in connection with interference of testimony before a House committee.

McSwain Is Gratified.

Gratification over the indictments was voiced by Chairman McSwain, of the committee involved.

"The indictments," he said, "justify the long investigation we made into the whole situation."

Separate counts charged the quartet with conspiring to conceal both merely "a witness" and a "necessary and important witness."

Joseph Silverman, jr., and Ryan, who was brought into the case as lawyer for the Silvermans, both waived immunity and were permitted to testify before the grand jury.

Confidence he would "quash once and for all" the charges

Truck Hits Pole; Turkeys for Sale

It was five days before Christmas and a load of 8,000 pounds of fat live turkeys and hens were rolling northbound in a produce truck. The truck hit a telephone pole at "Dead Man's Curve" near Fredericksburg, Va. Turkeys flew in every direction.

Fresh killed turkeys—there were more than a dozen killed in the crash—sold for $1 a piece in Fredericksburg—that is, when the owner discovered several being carted away.

Late in the day, the owner and truck driver, B. S. Orrell, was still trying to drive the live birds into a large barn where they could be captured. He said he was forced from the road by two southbound trucks.

Broadcast, Movie Today Offer Child Chance to Aid Toy Fund

Boys, Girls Can Talk Over Radio, See Treasure Island; Play Santa to Needy in Post Campaign—All in a Single Day Devoted to Them.

This is the children's day—

The day when they can broadcast to their pals and parents over Station WRC from 8:30 a. m. to 9 a. m.—

The day when they can play Santa Claus to scores of needier youngsters by bringing a toy or piece of clothing to Loew's "Treasure Island," starring Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper.

This is going to be one of the red-letter days of this year's Post Toy Fund, and the excitement of preparation last night kept painting the anticipatory hues ever deeper. Gordon Hittenmark, N. B. C. announcer and Santa Claus' aid, who will interview the boys and girls coming to the show, was as thrilled in advance as anyone.

The toys kept pouring in yesterday, and the fund came close to the $400 mark.

For the third year in succession, the Sunshine Club, made up of young girls from 10 to 12 years old, has been collecting toys for the fund. Yesterday it sent in two full boxes of toys. Its president, Miss Emily Rose Haas, of the Broadmoor Apartments, said:

"It is a real pleasure to work for The Post Toy Fund. It makes all of us enjoy our own Christmas day more to know that we have helped needy children in this way. I think The Post is doing a splendid work."

There was a Christmas party yesterday in the Oyster School, Twenty-ninth and Calvert streets northwest, and all the children brought toys for the fund.

George Washington University Students Christmas committee obtained more than 600 toys for the fund yesterday. These will be placed in baskets the students are preparing to give to poor families this Christmas.

Committee workers were wrapping and sorting toys until late in the night. All day long, drivers of the Terminal Taxicab Co. had been bringing in the toys—all that donors had to do was to call DEcatur 5130 to secure the services of a driver.

One letter to The Post yesterday inclosed a dollar bill, and the writer said:

"If, on your list of children to receive gifts this Christmas, there is a little girl named Pat, I should like to feel that she was remembered. Use the enclosed dollar as

Britain Asks 5 Nations To Aid if Italy Attacks, Masses Tanks in Libya

Secret Military Orders Dispatch Battalion to Border Zone.

Increased Tension Seen Behind Move

85,000 to 120,000 Men and Many Planes Concentrated.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Cairo, Dec. 20.—A battalion of the British tank corps was rushed to the Libyan border before dawn today in a move many Britishers regarded as reflection of increased Mediterranean tension between Italy and Great Britain.

Following closely after collapse of the Franco-British proposals for peace between Italy and Ethiopia, the concentration of troops along the barbed-wire borderline opposite Air Marshal Italo Balbo's heavy Libyan contingents was viewed pessimistically in the English colony.

Departure of the tank battalion was announced at the military depot but no mention appeared in the closely controlled Egyptian press. The destination was concealed as a "military secret" but it was reported reliably that they were bound for the so-called "forbidden triangle" of northwestern Egypt, near the Gulf of Sollum.

Many Troops Poured In.

A line drawn between the oasis of Siwa on the Libyan-Egypt frontier and Matruh on the coast would form the long side of the triangle. The Libyan frontier and the Mediterranean coast of Egypt form the other sides.

Into this zone Britain has been pouring troops since Italy began massing divisions on the other side of the bristling border—purportedly to control native disturbances in the Cyrenaica section of the Italian colony.

No correspondent may penetrate the "forbidden triangle," but it is reported Britain not only has tanks but airplanes within a few minutes travel from the border.

It is imposible to obtain an official statement of British armed forces in Egypt, but the United Press was informed by well-informed quarters that she has between 85,000 and 120,000 men under arms in the land of the Pyramids, including 35,000 to 50,000 sailors aboard warships and quartered in Alexandria.

This puts British forces in Egypt virtually on a war-time basis. "England is ready," is heard often from British officers in Cairo.

"Feverish Preparations."

In view of British preparations, the arrival of the Duke of Spoletto at Port Said yesterday to assume command of the Italian Red Sea squadron was regarded as significant.

Eyewitnesses from the Sollum district within the triangle informed the United Press that the British have engaged in feverish preparations for weeks. Trenches have been dug in the sandy soil and barbed wire strung along the border. Mechanized units have been assembled at strategic points, including tanks and armored cars.

The variety of uniforms seen daily in Cairo's streets indicates the multitude of troops now stationed here—Scots with plaid kilts swishing over their bare knees, tank operators and members of the Royal Air Force rub elbows in the bazaars with fez-topped Egyptians.

There are scores of aviators. It is reported that Britain now has 900 to 1,000 planes in Egypt.

The Egyptians are inclined to resent the heavy concentrations of British troops but in the final analysis they probably feel more comfortable that Britain is prepared to defend the Suez Canal for them.

The heavy Italian population is jittery. For weeks it has been sending its wealth out of the country or signing it over to Egyptians to avoid confiscation in case of war between Britain and Italy.

Call by League For War Units Is Held Feasible

Request That Powers Other Than England Act Is Suggested.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Dec. 20.—Some international onlookers, moved by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's statement that Great Britain alone has acted to keep peace in the Mediterranean, suggested tonight the possibility of a League of Nations Council request for armed contributions from other powers.

Such a call for [illegible] units to protect the League Covenant would not be for the purpose of aggression against Italy, these persons said.

But, they pointed out, it would serve to reassure Great Britain that her fleet is not standing singly in the Mediterranean to prevent a European conflict.

Under Article XVI of the League Covenant, a request for armed contributions is possible. It was under this article that economic and financial sanctions, now more than a month old, were imposed on Premier Mussolini in an effort to cut short his African war.

Other observers doubted the suggestion would be followed. The Council was convoked today for its session January 20.

Much interest, meanwhile, attached to a decision by the permanent councils of the Little Entente and Balkan Entente that "the League Covenant should be strictly observed."

The councils, under the presidency of Nicolas Titulescu, of Rumania, approved the League Council's action in discarding the Anglo-French peace plan for giving territorial concessions to Mussolini.

Nations represented were Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey.

Titulescu also conferred with the Russian, Valdimir Potemkin, concerning a proposed Russo-Rumanian pact, similar to the Franco-Russian and Russo-Czech mutual assistance agreements.

$100,000 Fire Spreads In Mississippi Town

Roxie, Miss., Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Fire, which already has caused damage upwards of $100,000, was sweeping the business section here tonight. At 10 p. m. firemen said the blaze was spreading. An entire block of the business area had been destroyed.

Citizens were rushing here from the rural areas surrounding the town to aid firemen in fighting the blaze. No loss of life had been recorded.

England Urges Countries on Mediterranean to Support Her Navy.

LoneHandShunned In Sanctions Fight

Air Raids Feared; Fleet May Be Withdrawn if Aid Is Refused.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

London, Dec. 20.—Determined not to oppose Italy alone, Great Britain today dispatched notes to five Mediterranean countries—Spain, Greece, Yugoslavia, Turkey and Egypt—inquiring whether they would support the British navy in case of an Italian attack while Britain was enforcing League of Nations sanctions.

The notes were prepared before the resignation of Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare and reflect the attitude made clear by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and other government members in yesterday's House of Commons debate, that Britain will not "take the rap" alone if Italy retaliates against the League's efforts to halt the Fascist war machine in Ethiopia.

Baldwin and Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain made it plain that Britain will not join a Geneva oil embargo or any other extension of sanctions until assured of military and naval support for her Mediterranean fleet precautions.

If she fails to receive the required assurances, it is believed Britain will reduce its fleet concentrations in the Mediterranean soon. Viscount Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the admiralty, recently was reported to have recommended that the Mediterranean fleet be reduced drastically before Christmas.

Fear Air Attack.

There is a growing feeling among British conservatives that the government should not put virtually the entire British naval force at the mercy of an Italian air attack.

It was understood Britain did not demand that the four countries send their fleets to join hers in the Mediterranean, but might be satisfied if each sent a "sample warship"—perhaps even a single destroyer—as evidence to Italy of how her neighbors stand.

The Greeks, now governed by the Anglophile King George II, already have assured Britain of naval assistance and several Greek ports facing Italy, including the famed Navarino Bay, are being prepared to shelter British ships.

Yugoslavia long has been anti-Italian and probably will support Britain. Turkey, controlling the Dardanelles and Bosphorus, also is opposed to Italian policy in the eastern Mediterranean.

Spain attempts to keep aloof from European conflicts in her peninsular isolation but is believed friendly to Britain in the present crisis. She recently moved troops to the neck of land leading to Britain's Fortress of Gibraltar, presumably to prevent the landing there of any force attempting to seize Gibraltar from its west side.

The note to Egypt differed from the others in view of Egypt's non-

Selassie Formula For Peace Revealed

By the United Press.

Paris, (Saturday), Dec. 21.—A peace plan drafted three months ago by Emperor Haile Selassie, but withheld in deference to efforts of the great powers to solve the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel, was revealed here today by Josef Israels 2d, of New York, public relations counsel for the Negus.

Under the plan the Emperor was willing to cede Italy the section of Tigre Province in the north between Aduwa and Adigrat, excluding the Holy City of Aksum, and a large section of Ogaden Province in the south, Israels said.

The King of Kings also was described as willing to accept League supervision of his ancient empire and to open the country to development by foreigners. However, he would not grant Italy a preponderance of strength or influence.

In return for this cession, Israels, said, Ethiopia wanted either the port of Zeila, British Somaliland, or Assab, a port of Italian Eritrea.

Mercury Touches Season's Low, Colder Today; 12 Perish in U.S.

Winter marched into the District yesterday with a brisk, chilling step—fully 48 hours ahead of its official schedule.

The season's record low of 23, established December 5, was shattered hours before midnight. The mercury started to drop into the 20's at dusk and by 10 last night had slipped to 20. The official Weather Bureau reading at midnight was 18 and temperatures lower than that were expected before dawn.

Early last night the bureau predicted its thermometer would go no lower than 22, just 1 degree below the previous low mark.

The drop in temperature brought firemen out many times. Furnaces were turned on full blast and 12 chimney fires resulted in a six-hour period ending at midnight.

When the thermometer struck 19 degrees above zero, policemen started brushing up on their pinochle. This was because an order to work in "sections" was issued by Inspector William E. Holmes.

When the temperature drops below 20 degrees, it is customary for half of the policemen on duty during the late night and early morning hours to remain in the station while the other half do outside patrol. The two sections reverse the assignment at short intervals.

Promptly at 1:37 p. m. tomorrow, winter will begin officially. Predictions for today were for fair skies with slight change in temperature.

The Associated Press counted more than 12 dead throughout the Nation during the frigid snap. Most deaths were attributed to treacherous pavements and traffic accidents.

New York City shivered in near-freezing temperatures and snow fell

Farmers Seek To Keep Share In Income Gain

AAA Adviser Says Their Problem Is Maintaining Restored Balance.

The farmer today has the same proportionate share in the total national income he had in 1929 and his problem now is "the preservation of this restored balance as further general expansion of industrial activity and a further rise in the national income take place," L. H. Dean, economic adviser to AAA, said yesterday.

From 1929 to the first quarter of 1933, farm income dropped 61 per cent, while the rest of the national income dropped only 43 per cent. Since then, according to Dean, farm income has shown an increase of 86 per cent while income other than agricultural has increased by 25 per cent.

Since the depression's low point the pick-up of retail sales in rural regions has been more rapid than the increase in cities because, since the farmers' fixed expenses such as taxes, interest and other items of production cost, any increase of income results in a proportionately greater income in the money farmers may spend in stores, Dean pointed out.

The Farm Credit Administration coincidentally announced yesterday that the 400,000 farmers who have obtained mortgage loans through this agency had paid 85 per cent of the matured installments up to date on November 30.

This year's gross income from farm production is estimated at $8,110,000,000, which is only 68 per cent of the 1929 figure. But it compares favorably with the farm income of $7,226,000,000 for 1934 and of $5,337,000,000 for 1932. While benefit payments are included in the 1935 figure, they were materially smaller than in 1934.

The result of this improvement has been reflected in the farmers' purchasing power, credited with 40 per cent of the general improvement in retail trade. Rural retail sales have increased 93 per cent from the depression's low point. This picture is the reverse of that which is presented by the period 1929-32, when farm income was declining and when mail order sales and retail sales in towns less than 2,500 declined from $9,200,000,000 to $3,900,000,000—accounting for 23 per cent of the total national shrinkage in retail trade, according to Dean's figures.

won a minor court victory on still another New Deal law—the labor relations act—when Justice Jesse C. Adkins, of the District Supreme Court, refused to enjoin the National Labor Relation Board from holding an employe election at the Gate City Cotton Mills, at East Point, Ga. A stay was granted, however, pending appeal to the District Circuit Court of Appeals.

Showing no ill effects from his recent fainting spell while arguing Bankhead law validity last week before the Supreme Court, Solicitor General Reed yesterday faced another battery of court questioning on legality of the TVA. He contended there was no Constitutional issue at stake—but merely the legality of a contract between the Government and the Alabama Power Co., sanctioning Federal purchase of transmission lines.

Beck, appearing for 14 minority stockholders in the Alabama Power Co., insisted the whole law was at issue, that it was "not a mere question of irreparable damage to stockholders but a question of the complete destruction of the Alabama Power Co."

Before opposing counsel faced the bench, an associate of Beck in another test suit, challenging validity of the securities act of 1933, applied and received admission to the Supreme Court bar. He was Bainbridge Colby, former Secretary of State under Woodrow Wilson.

Beck stepped into immediate questioning by Justice Brandeis, one of the liberal members of the bench, who inquired as to the right of preferred stockholders to bring a suit of this character. Beck passed over the question, referring it to his associate, Forney Johnston.

The one-time solicitor general and member of Congress, discounted claims of the Government that the primary purpose of the TVA act was navigation improvement on the Tennessee, and power generation and sales were only "incidental."

"The statute shows on its face that the purpose was to enable the Government to nationalize electricity in a large area," he said. "It is a Socialistic scheme for the peddling of electricity to a large number of people, under a specific mandate to produce the maximum output of electricity."

David Lilienthal and other TVA officials were charged by Beck with rendering "a veritable hymn of hate" against public utilities before various civic clubs.

"The plan reeks with socialism," said Beck. "The Commonwealth & Southern sold the Alabama power stockholders to the wolves. They did it because they sought a reprieve until Norris Dam was completed, when they believed there would be a return of sanity."

Beck denied Norris Dam was built for "navigation," insisting it was designed "to store water and treble the output of Wilson Dam." He invited the court to read the record for itself and "see the ruthless manner in which TVA tried to destroy investments in these six States—investments amounting to $600,000,000."

He called it "the most humiliating chapter in our history," and referred to a New Orleans circuit court ruling favorable to TVA as "pernicious constitutional heresy."

In the Government's closing argument, Solicitor General Reed asked the court not decide the case on broad constitutional grounds, but granted its right to do so if it wished. He said there was no lower court declaratory judgment on constitutionality.

Insisting navigation aid was the primary objective of TVA, he conceded that "if it was intended primarily for power, that would be an unconstitutional exercise of Congressional authority."

The same liberal and conservative split in the high court's attitude toward TVA legality that cropped up Thursday was again hinted in yesterday's questioning.

Justice McReynolds suggested that it seemed to him "TVA is much more than a plan to improve a river."

"Do you contend the authority can buy all of the transmission lines it sees fit?" asked McReynolds.

"Only those that are reasonably necessary," replied Reed.

In assenting to an expeditious high court test of the Guffey law providing a "little NRA" for the coal industry, the Government pointed out that more than 50 injunction suits against the coal tax are now pending in lower courts.

"It is of public importance to have determined the question whether or not the tax imposed by section 3 of the act can be avoided by the filing of an injunction suit," the Government's brief stated.

While granting an injunction against payment of the tax to the Carter Coal Co., the District Supreme Court has held price-fixing provisions constitutional but wages and hours regulations invalid.

Between You and Me

Borah's Long Awaited Action; Hard to Believe Even Now; $1,000,000 Promised by Couzens.

By Raymond Clapper

At last, the event which politicians have been awaiting for 20 years has occurred. Borah throws his hat into the ring. He is going into the Wisconsin Presidential primary.

It is hard to believe, because we have been told repeatedly that Borah was about to run for President and nothing happened. He always shied at the first jump. Even now some can't believe he means it. They are waiting to see if he follows through in other States. It's a good guess that he will.

Whether Borah goes any further or not, this development makes him a record holder for the longest run in the political news of this generation. Borah has been in the headlines 40 years. Beginning modestly in 1896 with a defeat, Borah's career, 40 years later, is in the midst of a great crescendo which will echo certainly through the Republican national convention next June.

Borah headlines through the years:

1896—Runs for Congress as Silver Republican; beaten.

1903—Misses United States Senate by four votes in Legislature.

1907—Fails to win conviction in prosecution of Big Bill Haywood in labor war case after refusing to use evidence reflecting on defendant's personal life; elected to U. S. Senate; booms Secretary of War Taft for President; mentioned as future Presidential possibility.

1908—Supports Taft for President.

1909-11—Puts through bill creating Department of Labor; supports direct election of Senators; leaves reservation; opposes Taft on tariff; mentioned for Presidency; nothing happens.

1912—Floor manager for Theodore Roosevelt in Republican National Convention; refuses to leave party; stays with Taft.

1913-16—Mentioned for Presidency; nothing happens; supports Taft.

1917-20—Opposes League of Nations and woman suffrage amendment; supports 18th Amendment and opposes Volstead act; starts movement for naval holiday; sponsors senatorial investigation of campaign expenditures which turns up enough evidence to beat Governor Lowden and General Wood for Presidential nomination; mentioned for Presidency; nothing happens; supports Harding; leaves reservation and opposes elaborate inaugural.

1921—Stays off reservation; refuses chance to be Republican leader of Senate.

1924—Forces President Coolidge to throw Harry M. Daugherty, Harding's holdover Attorney General, out of Cabinet; is not exactly mentioned for Presidency but Coolidge calls him in and says "I want you on the ticket with me." Borah asks: "Which place?" Nothing happens; supports Coolidge.

1925-28—Leaves reservation; returns $2,500 pay increase after Congress raises senatorial salaries from $7,500 to $10,000; mentioned for Presidency; nothing happens; supports Hoover.

1929-32—Leaves reservation; opposes Hoover on tariff; recovers from a major operation; mentioned for Presidency; something happens, but not to Borah.

1933-34—Attacks NRA and AAA; gives AAA absolution on potato control; charges Administration has surrendered to Wall Street; hits monopoly; Idaho mountain peak is named for him; leaves all reservations; mentioned for Presidency; something is about to happen.

June—Observes seventieth birthday; says he feels fit.

July—Defends Constitution; says Republicans shouldn't nominate member of Supreme Court; mentioned for Presidency.

August—Borah first in Lucas Republican presidential poll; mentioned for Presidency; there's something in the air.

September—Again mentioned for Presidency.

October—Borah in quandary over Presidency; continues to be mentioned.

November—Announces will force trust-busting issue; returning to Washington, gives impression he intends to seek Presidency; silent as former Ohio Senator indorses him; he's getting important mention now.

December—Borah flings hat into ring; it's happened.

A few years ago Senator Couzens, the richest man in the Senate, is said to have told friends he would put up $1,000,000 if Borah would go after the Presidency seriously. Now it's Couzens' move.

While not wishing to cause family discord, it is necessary to call attention to the situation in the family of William L. Clayton, of Houston, Tex., who is probably the largest cotton broker in the world. He has been a vigorous critic of AAA. What's more, he is a member of the national executive committee meeting of the American Liberty League.

Now Mrs. Clayton turns in a $7,000 contribution to the Democratic campaign fund. She explained it was her way of saying "how much I believe in President Roosevelt's political philosophy and his far-sightedness."

The Democratic national committee, in announcing the contribution of the American Liberty Leaguer's spouse, says it is a "significant contribution."

Here the league apparently has a case against the Democratic national committee for alienation of affections.

Democrats also are trying to alienate the affections of some Republican job holders.

Eight Republican members of the United States Board of Tax Appeals have received by registered mail cordial invitations to buy $50 tickets to the Democratic Jackson Day dinner.

If you are considering allowing the Democrats to alienate your affections, you should know that it will cost you plenty.

Knell of NRA to Sound

business and labor will be included. He has called a meeting of the council for January 6.

Another hitch in liquidating NRA involved the group studying Government contracts. In the last session of Congress a bill was introduced at the request of President Roosevelt providing that all contractors doing business with the Government must certify that the merchandise or materials sold to the Government were produced under conditions provided by old NRA codes or under similar restrictions. Congress did not act on the measure.

Since introduction of the bill by Senator Walsh, this plan has been a subject of violent objection by business organizations. A group within the NRA, now consisting of 57 persons, has been studying the plan. Some experts have reported to the President that enforcement of such a law would require the services of from 2,500 to 5,000 persons.

Nevertheless, some interests within the Government still are insisting upon such legislation. It is possible that the investigation of its possibilities will continue, although the employes who have been making the investigation are now on the list of those to be discharged.

Opponents of the bill have pointed out that it would be virtually impossible for employes engaged in making Government materials in the same factories as they make materials for private consumption to comply with its provisions without operating their entire plants under code restrictions. The law would mean a revival of NRA so far as nearly all Government contractors are concerned.

The government contract bill is on the legislative program of the American Federation of Labor, which plans to work for its passage.

Meanwhile, Secretary Roper announced formation of a new unit in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce for research in the business problems of the construction industry. The studies, he said would relate to private construction in contrast to public works.

One of the studies to be undertaken is that of fluctuations in the demand for industrial and commercial building in relation to other economic factors, such a development of new industries, the volume of manufacturing production, industrial earnings, interest rates and other factors.

Hull Discusses Neutrality Law Revision Plans

Confers With House Chairman of Foreign Affairs on Amendments.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull and Chairman McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, late yesterday discussed the State Department's plans for a new neutrality law at the coming session of Congress.

Details of their conversation, which lasted about an hour at the State Department, were not revealed The parley was known, however, to be one of a series being held by President Roosevelt's chief diplomatic adviser with Congressional leaders preparatory to drafting specific legislation on the subject.

McReynolds advocates certain discretionary powers for the President in directing American neutrality in case of foreign wars. This coincides with what Secretary Hull believes to be essential for an adequate neutrality statute.

The present law, expiring at the end of February, makes it mandatory upon the Chief Executive to embargo shipments of implements of war to both belligerents on the outbreak of hostilities. He is directed also to warn American citizens that if they either trade with or travel on ships of the combatants they do so at their own risk.

It makes no provision for a ban on shipments of such war necessities as oil, copper, iron, steel and cotton, but the Administration has been seeking to prevent abnormal sales of such materials to warring Italy and Ethiopia by means of moral pressure.

Secretary Hull is represented as believing the President should be given discretionary authority to apply an embargo when and on whatever commodities he deems necessary.

The Secretary of State warned yesterday at his press conference, however, against any attempts to predict the final form the new legislation will take. He emphasized that State Department officials were studying the matter closely in conjunction with congressional leaders, but that he could give no indication of what the Administration's proposals would contain.

U. S. Neutral Policy Assailed as Unfair

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Dec. 20.—Charging the United States foreign policy "radically changes the rules of neutrality to the disadvantage of one belligerent—Italy," the League for American Neutrality was launched here tonight by Italo-Americans.

"Measures officially adopted by a nation though applied to both belligerents, which detrimentally affect one and not the other is not the conduct of a neutral," the league declared in a resolution.

The resolution asserted the purpose of the league was "to protest effectively against the policy as enunciated by Secretary of State Cordell Hull."

The league announced its intention of organizing similar groups throughout the country, with headquarters at Boston and later at Washington.

Man Kills Son, Ill, ThenEndsOwn Life

Bedford, Iowa, Dec. 20 (AP).—Will Reed, 50, an Athelston, Iowa, farmer, fatally shot his 16-year-old invalid son in a "mercy" killing today, and then ended his own life.

"This is the best way out," Reed said in a note left for Mrs. Reed and their three other children.

The son, Ray, was brought home two days ago from a St. Joseph, Mo., hospital, where he was operated upon for tumor of the brain.

"The doctors," Mrs. Reed sobbed to Coroner Floyd Shum, "said there was a chance for Ray to get well, but I guess Will thought they were just trying to make us feel better about him."

Hauptmann's Plea Due Within Week

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 20 (AP).—C. Lloyd Fisher, one of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's attorneys, said today the condemned man's petition to the Court of Pardons for clemency will be filed within a week.

In view of Gov. Harold G. Hoffman's statement he would probably convene the pardons court between Christmas and New Year's if the petition were filed in time, Fisher's announcement made it virtually certain Hauptmann would know before the new year whether the State would commute the death sentence, now set for the week of January 13.

against him was voiced at that time by Joseph Silverman, jr.

At the trial the Government will seek to prove Joseph Silverman, jr., paid Speicher $600 or more in 1934 to hide in New York and avoid appearing before the committee to tell how he loaned $2,000 to Williams.

Early this year, however, Speicher appeared before the committee and disclosed details of the loan.

Harold Schnure, a New York lawyer for Speicher, told the committee Ryan gave him several "little blue envelopes" for Speicher which were described to him as containing "circus tickets."

Nevertheless, Schnure testified, he knew the envelopes contained money from the Silvermans paid so his client would "stay away from Washington."

The Silvermans, Schnure related, told Speicher it would be "foolish to get the old man in trouble." By "the old man," Schnure explained, the Silvermans meant Williams.

Ryan appeared before the House committee and confirmed Schnure's statement. Ryan declared the envelopes contained "about $100 apiece."

Committee members subjected Joseph Silverman, jr., to heated questioning about his reputed expenditure of half a million dollars "around Washington" lobbying for Federal contracts.

Overt acts charged in the indictments included telephone conversations between Joseph Silverman, jr., in Washington and Speicher in New York March 15, April 1, April 15 and May 1 of 1934 at a time when the Department of Justice was conducting a Nation-wide search for the missing witness.

The defendants will be represented by the Washington law firm of Palmer, Stellwagen, Scott & Boggs.

Relief Job Goal Is 23,218 Short, Hopkins Shows

Secretary Perkins Reports Private Employment Off 34,000.

The works relief program December 9 still was 23,218 jobs short of its goal of employing 3,500,000 persons, official figures released by Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, showed yesterday.

At the same time, Secretary Perkins released a report showing private employment had dropped 34,000 between October and November and that payrolls had declined $3,400,000. She explained that this drop was less than seasonal.

These figures, together with the recent report showing only a slight decline in the number on relief, gave a gloomy picture of the relief and employment situation as President Roosevelt struggles with the problem of future care for the needy.

The Hopkins figures were the first relief employment statistics released in several weeks. They showed employment of 531,295 persons in the CCC on December 9. This number is being rapidly reduced in line with the President's plan to cut the organization to 300,000. This reduction will mean that more unemployed must be absorbed in other agencies to keep near the 3,500,000 total.

Another surprising element in the breakdown of figures was the fact that only 5,989 persons were being employed under PWA. Activity of this organization, however, is expected to be speeded within the next few weeks.

Employment under the relief program was divided as follows:

Emergency Conservation Work (CCC), 531,295.

Department of Agriculture, 145,193.

Department of Commerce, 2,326.

Department of Interior, 17,326.

Department of Labor, 2,185.

Navy Department, 17,047.

Treasury Department, 8,699.

War Department, 55,701.

Public Works Administration, 5,989.

Resettlement Administration, 10,787.

Rural Electrification Administration, 41.

Veterans Administration, 1,564.

In the District of Columbia, the figures showed a total of 6,934 at work. The total for Maryland was 17,380 and for Virginia, 39,322.

Hopkins played Santa Claus to WPA employes on relief projects by ordering that they should be given half holidays on December 24 and December 31. President Roosevelt recently ordered similar holidays for employes in all Government departments and agencies.

Hundreds of thousands of toys made in WPA workshops will be distributed to children of the needy. Toy making has been among relief projects in most States.

Man Accepts Change Of $100 for $1,000

New York, Dec. 20 (U.P.).—A $1,000 bill went begging in American Airline's ticket office here for three hours today.

At 10:30 a. m., C. L. Toohey, Detroit lawyer, bought a ticket for his home, received a ticket and change for a $100 bill and went to Newark to board a plane.

At 11:30 a. m. the ticket agent discovered he had no $100 bill in his till and was $900 "long" in his accounts. He did have a $1,000 bill. He telephoned the airport. A company representative dashed to the plane and questioned Toohey, who said it wasn't his and he wasn't short $900. So did the other passengers. The plane took off.

At 1:30 p. m. a radio message was received here from the plane that Toohey had counted his money again and decided the spare change was his.

U. S. and Holland Sign Trade Pact

By the Associated Press.

The ninth reciprocal trade agreement consummated under the Administration's foreign trade program was signed yesterday by the United States and the Kingdom of The Netherlands.

The pact, providing for mutual tariff concessions to become effective February 1, was signed by Secretary Hull and Arnold T. Lamping, director of trade agreements for The Netherlands.

Details of the agreement will not be made public until Monday, but an official announcement by the State Department said it would embrace duty reductions by both countries as well as guarantees against tariff increases on certain products and duty-free continuance on others. The department said trade between the two countries decreased from $431,000,000 in 1929 to $155,500,000 in 1934.

Similar agreements already are in effect with Cuba, Haiti, Sweden and Belgium. Others will become operative with Brazil and Canada on January 1, while still others have been signed but not ratified by Colombia and Honduras.

Jury Indicts Blumenfeld as Liggett Slayer

'Kid Cann,' 'John Doe' Are Accused on Evidence of Widow, Salesman.

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, Dec. 20.—The grand jury did today exactly what Isadore (Kid Cann) Blumenfeld said last week it would do—indicted him for first-degree murder in the slaying of Walter Liggett, newspaper publisher.

The same formal accusation, based on the stories of Liggett's wife and Wesley Andersch, a nervous salesman, was returned against an unidentified man, named in the second indictment only as "John Doe."

Blumenfeld, in custody, maintained the confidence after the grand jury's action that he displayed last week when he prophesied its finding and boasted "I'll beat the rap."

Almost the entire day was devoted by the grand jurors to the Liggett assassination.

Mrs. Liggett collapsed as she retold how a leering assassin killed her husband December 9 before her eyes. She was revived in the prosecutor's office. Her story reportedly was virtually that she told police after the crime.

Andersch, who also claimed to be an eyewitness to slaying and like Mrs. Liggett identified Blumenfeld to the police for the slaying, said after appearing before the jurors:

"I stuck to my story. There was no other to tell."

Arrested two hours after the slaying, Blumenfeld, a liquor salesman, has been a prisoner since. He will be arraigned either tomorrow or Monday on the indictment, officials said.

Trial of the case probably will not start before January 6, court being in recess for the holidays.

Myron R. Walker was elected to the presidency of the association for his third term. Irvin L. Chilcote was chosen first vice-president; Frank W. Bright, second vice-president; M. J. Wright, secretary; H. Odus Kephart, treasurer; Henry L. Jueneman, sergeant-at-arms, and Walker and Jeuneman delegates to the Federation of Citizens' Associations.

A resolution approving the present routing of bus lines serving the Glover Park area was adopted. The association voted to give the Industrial Home School $25 for a Christmas present.

Jack Dempsey Testifies In New York Rackets

New York, Dec. 20 (AP).—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion and now a New York restaurant owner, was called as a witness today in the rackets inquiry being conducted by Thomas E. Dewey, special prosecutor.

The former champion was questioned for more than an hour and a half by William B. Herlands, one of Dewey's aids. It was understood he was questioned about the "shakedown" racket imposed on restaurant owners, which, Dewey has said, exacts a toll of more than $2,000,000 a year in Manhattan and the Bronx.

Wardman Properties Win Nassauer Suit

The New York Appellate Division yesterday affirmed dismissal of a $14,525,000 suit of Gustave Nassauer, New York promoter, against Wardman Real Properties, Inc., of Washington, and 15 other persons and corporation, it was reported by the Associated Press.

Nassauer charged conpiracy to exclude him from profits of the financial reorganiation of Wardman real estate interests, contending that he was to have received the entire capital stock of the Wardman firm for alleged services in reorganization about eight years ago.

Friends Call at Hospital

altar of the Shrine of the Little Flower.

Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, taking time out in his drive for the Republican Presidential nomination, telephoned to inquire about Schall's condition. So, too, did a number of other Senators and Representatives.

Mrs. Huey Long, widow of the Louisiana Senator, telegraphed Mrs. Schall to say she was praying for Senator Schall's recovery.

Helen Keller, who, like Senator Schall, overcame the handicap of blindness, was another who sent a message to the hospital.

Gains "25 Per Cent."

From Minneapolis came a telegram from J. L. Sinykin, a dog fancier. It was he who several years ago gave Senator Schall the big German shepherd dog, "Lux," which used to guide him on his walks.

"If Barry of La Salle had been your guide," Sinykin wired to Schall, "this wouldn't have happened."

Barry of La Salle, Mrs. Schall explained, was the name of a dog Sinykin was training for the Senator. Lux died in 1933.

A physicians' consultation was held over Senator Schall at 10:30 last night. Present were Dr. John A. Talbot, bone specialist; Dr. John Shugrue, brain specialist, and Dr. James Lyons, stomach specialist.

The physicians afterward issued the following bulletin:

"Senator Schall is still unconscious and his condition is serious, although there is possibly a slight improvement in his general condition."

Dr. Raymond Marchante, of the Casualty Hospital staff, took over the task of watching Senator Schall after the specialists left.

The blind Senator was struck down as he attempted to cross the Washington-Baltimore boulevard in Cottage City, Md., near his estate at Berwyn Heights, Md.

He was being led across the traffic-filled highway by an employe in his office, Orel L. Leen, 39, of 922 Hamilton street. As the two men reached the white line in the center of the road a car, driven by Lester G. Humphries, of 937 Arundel avenue, Hyattsville, Md., swooped over the crest of a hill and knocked both Schall and Leen to the pavement.

Leen also is in Casualty Hospital where he is under treatment for scalp cuts, minor bruises about the legs and body, and possibly concussion of the brain. He is expected to recover.

The Senator and his office employe were on their way to the Schall residence, Wyncrest, at Berwyn Heights. They were driven by Schall's house guest, Harold Birkeland, a long-time friend from Minneapolis. Also in the car was James Laughlin, of Minneapolis.

Both Birkeland and Laughlin intended to leave for their homes early yesterday morning.

Stopped to Get Groceries.

When the party reached Cottage City the Senator asked the driver to stop long enough for him to cross the road to a grocery store. He wanted to buy sandwich bread and meat so a lunch could be prepared for his departing guests.

He and Leen found the store closed and were on their way back to the automobile when the accident occurred. The blind Senator and his companion were knocked down about 200 yards this side of the Peace Monument at a point where automobiles can be seen for several hundred yards in each direction, according to police.

Shortly after 4 p. m. the Senator's breathing became more labored and it was feared he was sinking. But when his position was moved his respiration showed marked improvement.

Physicians are eager to make another X-ray of his head injuries as soon as he can safely be moved into the operating room. The picure made yesterday morning came out cloudy.

The patient may remain unconscious for several days and still rally, doctors told employes in the Senator's office.

Within a few miles of the spot where Senator Schall was critically injured and approximately 24 hours later, Thomas Boyd, about 55, proprietor of the Autoville Garage at Berwyn, Md., was knocked down and almost instantly killed on the Washington-Baltimore boulevrd near Berwyn last night.

4 Windows Broken, $1,500 Furs Taken

Four show windows were broken early yesterday by thieves who looted show cases of the Samuel D. Zlotnick Fur Shop, 1120 G street northwest, of $1,500 worth of furs.

The robbers, three white men, alighted from a car parked on Twelfth street, hurled bricks at the windows, breaking them, tore the furs from dummies and made a quick getaway in the waiting car. In the car were three women companions, police said.

Samuel D. Zlotnick, proprietor of the store, told police three coats, a wrap and several neckpieces were stolen. The damage to the building amounted to $200, he said.

Bulawayo, Rhodesia, Dec. 20 (AP). The world's third largest single span bridge was presented to the people of Southern Rhodesia today as a Christmas present.

Three Sent to Jail In Tax Fraud Plot

Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday sentenced John W. Hardgrove, Henning R. Nelson and Frank B. McElhill to terms of not less than four months nor more than two years in jail. They were convicted in District Supreme Court of conspiracy to defraud the Government in connection with the 1932 income tax of Thomas N. McCarter, New Jersey utilities magnate. Justice Letts overruled motions for new trials.

McElhill, a New York tax consultant, and Hardgrove and Nelson, former Treasury department officials, were convicted of making approaches to McCarter when he was assessed an additional $149,000 on his income tax. The trio was convicted last week and denied bail by Justice Letts.

Family Prize Seized.

Marseilles, Dec. 20 (U.P.).—The Academy of France yesterday awarded a 20,000-franc prize ($1,320) for big families to M. and Mme. Marechal, parents of 11 children. Today a tax collector seized the prize money for tax arrears.

Norton, SEC Attorney, Falls 7 Floors to Death at Houston

Peter T. Norton 2d, an attorney for the Securities Exchange Commission both here and at Fort Worth, Tex., fell to his death early yesterday from the tenth floor of a hotel at Houston, Tex. His body struck seven floors below, on the roof of a dining room, according to the Associated Press. He died a few minutes later.

Norton, 25 years old, had gone to Houston Wednesday on Government business, his superior, Richard N. Mather, senior SEC attorney in Fort Worth, said. "I talked to the boy about 1 a. m. this morning," Mather told reporters, "and he was in good spirits."

Norton was a native of Calvert, Tex., where his parents, two sisters and two brothers survive. One brother, Hammond Norton, of 2025 I street northwest, had just returned to Calvert for the Christmas holidays. Norton came to Washington seven years ago, after receiving his A. B. degree from the University of Texas in 1928. He was graduated from George Washington Law School in 1929, took his doctorate of jurisprudence from Georgetown Law School in 1934, and was admitted to the bar of the District Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals here and to the Maryland Federal bar. He was a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. He had been with the SEC six months.

F. M. Tompkins Is Fined $1,000 In Auto Death

Family of Woman Killed by Youth's Car Asks for Leniency.

Francis M. ("Tommy") Tompkins, son of the socially prominent Charles H. Tompkins, yesterday in the District Supreme Court paid a $1,000 fine following a plea last week that he was guilty of manslaughter in connection with the traffic death of Mrs. Ruth Storey, 30-year-old District Building charwoman.

Mrs. Storey, it was shown, was standing on a street car loading platform at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, March 2, when an automobile operated by Tompkins crashed into the platform and crushed her to death. Several days after the mishap, young Tompkins broke his back when he was thrown from his mount in a Virginia horse show.

Before passing sentence yesterday, Justice F. D. Letts reviewed at length the history of the case. He said his information was that Tompkins worked hard all day and played around at night when "he was dead for sleep." He said he had looked up the facts to learn whether the boy had been drinking, and that there was no evidence there had been any tippling.

Pointing out financial restitution had been made to the family of the deceased, and that both her husband and mother had written him letters beseeching leniency for Tompkins, Justice Letts said that he would impose the heaviest fine possible and ordered the defendant committed until the fine was paid. Shortly after sentence, arrangements were made for the fine and he was released.

Tompkins has been in the District Jail since he pleaded guilty.

Call for Jobs Data Will Be Delayed

The date for registration of every employe and employer in the District covered by the unemployment compensation act will not be fixed until Federal authorities have worked out plans for national registration, it was said by local officials yesterday.

Lacking funds with which to operate, Federal officials reportedly are proceeding slowly. A plan under consideration calls for registration of all persons covered by the law throughout the country, to each of which would be assigned a number. The number would be kept in Federal files.

Demand for copies of the new regulations continued to pour in at the District Building yesterday. Copies were at a premium. Delivery of an adequate supply has been promised for next week.

Store 'Patron' Pilfers $1,350 Diamond Ring

A diamond ring, valued at $1,350, was stolen from the Shaw & Brown Jewelry Co., Friday, William C. Shaw, president of the company, told police yesterday.

An unusually well-dressed man, accompanied by a neatly dressed woman, asked to see the ring, saying he would come back later in the day to purchase it. After the couple left the store and did not return the loss of the ring was noticed. The ring is a platinum solitaire diamond surrounded by four smaller stones.

Manila, P. I., Dec. 20 (AP).—For the third time in three days start of the return flight of the Philippine Clipper to the United States was postponed today because of a typhoon between Guam and Manila.

Capt. J. H. Tilton said he hopes to take off by 2 a. m. Sunday (1 p. m. Saturday, E. S. T.). Guam is the Clipper's first stop from Manila. The take-off originally was set for Thursday.

Ransom Unpaid In Milne Case, U. S. Agent Says

$20,000 Was Demanded; Kidnapers Held Novices; Victim Recovering.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Dec. 20.—The Department of Justice revealed late today that the ransom demand of Caleb J. Milne's abductors was $20,000. None was paid for his release.

The statement was made by Harold O. Nathan, assistant director of the United States Division of Investigation, at a press conference late today. He did not reveal the circumstances under which the ransom demand was made.

Asked if anyone was in custody or in technical custody in the case, Nathan replied: "No one is being held by us."

Meanwhile, Federal agents divided their forces tonight between a search of secret trails for the kidnapers and plying the young actor with questions.

The scion of a well-to-do Philadelphia family who was abandoned by his abductors Wednesday night in a roadside ditch was stronger today. His mind was clearing, physicians said.

So the agents took him back over the broken, rambling story he told last night of four men who lured him into a car in New York last Saturday and maltreated him in a hideout for four days.

Whether Milne cleared up the angles of which the Government operatives were uncertain, they kept their own counsel.

Neither would they comment on reports that they have found the rural hideout where Milne said he was held captive.

Amateurs Suspected.

Actual search for the abductors centered for the most part in the Philadelphia area. Reliable sources said the agents sought a gang of amateur kidnapers.

They re-checked roads and lanes leading to deserted farmhouses which may have been used as hideouts. A ramshackle two and one-half story farm dwelling off a muddy lane, with fresh ashes in the fireplace and recently opened food cans was a focal point. Some said the place formerly was a gamblers' nest.

Authorities in New York were emphatic in their opinion that the Milne kidnaping was "a bad job—the work of an amateur."

Caleb J. Milne, jr., wealthy retired textile manufacturer of Philadelphia, and members of his family said, after a brief visit to the hospital, that Caleb is recovering. But they said they did not know when he could be removed from the hospital nor whether he would be taken to the Milne estate in a fashionable section of Philadelphia.

Commission Chiefs To Be Reappointed

By the Associated Press.

With President Roosevelt's announcement of their reappointment, Clyde B. Aitchison, Oregon Republican, and Claude R. Porter, Iowa Democrat, last night faced new seven-year terms as members of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Their present terms expire December 31 and Mr. Roosevelt announced he would rename them soon after Congress convenes. The appointments are subject to Senate confirmation. The Commissioners receive $10,000 annual salaries.

Aitchison's work is largely concerned with questions of valuations and rates.

Porter is a member of the finance division, and has consistently advocated establishment of sufficient sinking funds to amortize railroad debts. He is credited by some with responsibility for the commission's present inquiry into the advisability of reducing basic passenger fares from 3.6 to 2 cents a mile.

National Urban League Observes Anniversary

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the National Urban League was celebrated last night at Lincoln Temple Congregational Church, where speakers suggested a branch of the organization be formed here. George W. Beasley, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, presided. Addresses were made by Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, Col. West A. Hamilton, Maj. Campbell C. Johnson and Dean Lucy D. Slowe.

Lester D. Granger, director of the workers' bureau of the league, outlined its methods and policies. Eugene Kinckle Jones told of his experience of a quarter-century as executive secretary of the national body.

'Drunk and Angry,' Slayer's Defense

By the Associated Press.

Warren, Ohio, Dec. 20.—A jury of six men and six women debated tonight the fate of Ray Jutila, 21, who testified during his first degree murder trial that he killed Mrs. Marie Tobin, 20, while drunk and angry and then set fire to the bed on which her body lay.

Common Pleas Judge Dewey McVicker instructed the jurors they might bring in any one of 12 verdicts, ranging from first-degree murder without mercy, to innocent.

Mrs. Tobin's body was found on a blazing bed in her home last May 22. She had been beaten.

Testimony of defense witnesses at the trial pictured the Tobin home as the scene of frequent Saturday night drinking parties attended by young couples. There were interludes, witnesses testified, when the lights in the house were turned out.

Slayer Doomed to Die.

Smithfield, N. C., Dec. 20 (AP).—Marvin Batten, 29-year-old farmer, who killed Mrs. Lyda Daughtry on Friday, December 13, was convicted of murder in Johnston Superior Court today and sentenced to die in the lethal gas chamber at Raleigh on Friday, March 13.

Revolt Threatened By Square Dealers

By the United Press.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 20.—The Square Deal Association, regarded as a belligerent but harmless element in Louisiana politics, today warned it was ready to start a "bloody revolution" at the slightest provocation.

A scorching ultimatum was sent Appelate Judge Richard W. Leche, Long machine candidate for Governor, saying:

"We will muster an army of more than 80,000 fighters who will arise, revolt and fight to the death to restore freedom and justice to the liberty-loving people of this State."

The author was Oscar Whilden, horse and mule dealer, who commands Square Dealers in the first and second Congressional districts, aroused because Leche challenged Representative Cleveland Dear, anti-Long gubernatorial candidate, to a pistol duel. Dear rejected the challenge.

"A duel would be the torch to set off a bloody revolution," Whilden warned.

"The best thing for you to do would be to provide Congressman Dear with a bodyguard, because if any harm comes to him, the leaders of Square Dealers cannot be responsible for what might happen."

Killeen Leaves Only $900 Cash Of Big Fortune

Slain Gambler Won and Lost Riches, Spent His Money Freely.

Edward V. ("Eddie") Killeen, who, as one of Washington's kingpin gamblers, made and squandered several fortunes, left behind a bank account of only $900.

This was revealed in the District Supreme Court yesterday when his widow, Mrs. Florence M. Killeen, filed a petition asking that she be appointed administrix of the estate.

Killeen, who was shot and killed November 23 by Mrs. Lillian Callahan Maddock, left, in addition to $900 in cash, prize chickens valued at $300 and clothes, jewelry and an automobile valued at $1,400.

Mrs. Killeen also disclosed that there was real estate valued at $21,000, but this bore a substantial mortgage. No mention was made of Killeen's 45-foot cabin cruiser. This, it is understood, was in the name of Mrs. Killeen.

The petition listed among the items of the estate a contract which Killeen signed with a brewery to relinquish his beer-distirbuting agency. This was for $100 a week, and had nine months to run at the time Killeen was killed.

Besides the widow, the petition named as heirs, Sue and Mary Killeen and Mrs. John F. Costello, sisters; William P. Killeen, a brother, and two nephews, George E. and John P. Killeen.

Mrs. Maddock, who confessed to killing Killeen after he had beaten her and threatened to shoot her, recently was released on $5,000 bond pending action by the grand jury.

Dollfuss Death Plotter Gets 7 Years in Prison

Vienna, Dec. 20 (AP).—Otto Steinhaeusl, distinguished criminologist, was sentenced today to seven years imprisonment after his conviction on a charge of complicity in the Nazi putsch which culminated in the assassination of former Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss in July, 1934.

Steinhaeusl, once an assistant chief of the Vienna police, pleaded that he had demonstrated his patriotism by frustrating a previous revolutionary plot. He was the last of the prominent persons remaining in police custody for alleged connection with the putsch, but several others still face court martial.

G. O. P. Chiefs' New Deal Votes Are Compared Vandenberg Most Consistent Foe; Borah Upheld Roosevelt Often.

By the United Press.

A box score on 17 New Deal measures reveals Seantor William E. Borah hit .647 for the Roosevelt Administration in 1933, 1934 and 1935. Senator Charles L. McNary, Republican floor leader, hit .563. Sentaor L. J. Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, was next with .315 and Senator Arthur H. Vandenburg (Republican), Michigan, voted more often than the other three against Mr. Roosevelt for an average of .176.

The legislative box score reveals that four Senators high in Republican councils frequently could not agree among themselves which Roosevelt proposal to support and which to oppose.

Here is the record:

	Borah.	Vandenberg.	McNary.	Dickinson.
NRA	Nay	Nay	Yea	Nay
AAA	Nay	Nay	Yea	Yea
Inflation amendment	Yea	Nay	Nay	Yea
Invalidation of gold clause	Yea	Nay	Nay	Nay
TVA	Yea	Nay	Yea	Yea
1934.
Gold reserve act	Yea	Yea	Nay	Nay
Stock exchange control	Yea	Yea	Yea	Yea
Cotton control	Nay	Nay	Nay	Nay
Reciprocal tariff act	Nay	Nay	Nay	Nay
Silver purchase act	Yea	Nay	Nay	Nay
Economy cuts	Nay	Nay	Nay	Nay
1935.
Social security	Yea	Yea	Yea	Yea
Labor relations act	Yea	Nay	Nay	Nay
AAA amendments	Yea	Nay	Nea	....
Holding companies act	Yea	Nay	Yea	Nay
Guffey coal act	Nay	Nay	...	Nay
Works relief act	Yea	Nay	Yea	Nay
	11 Y. 6 N.	3 Y. 14 N.	9 Y. 7 N.	5 N. 11 N.

These votes may exert tremendous influence on the Republican platform. If it looks like Borah when Republicans gather next June, the G. O. P. platform may denounce the late NRA, the agricultural adjustment act, cotton control, reciprocal trade agreements, Roosevelt efforts to cut Federal employes' salaries and the Guffey coal bill. Borah voted against those. But he is recorded in favor of other legislation, such as invalidation of the gold clause in Government bonds and the bill requiring the Treasury to make large purchases of silver. It would be difficult for Borah to remain standing on a platform which denounced either of those Roosevelt acts or others which the Senator supported.

Among the Senators, Vandenburg's record would hinder the Cleveland Republican platform makers least in challenging New Deal legislation.

Toy Imports, Exports Far Above Last Year

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department reported yesterday the value of toy imports from Japan, Germany and other toy-making nations in the first ten months of this year was nearly $2,000,000 greater than in the same period in 1934.

Domestic toy makers who help Santa Claus were expected to do about 15 per cent more business than last year, the department said, adding that American-made toys exported during the first ten months of 1935 jumped 38 per cent over last year, the total value being $1,349,251.

'Progressives' For U. S. Bench Asked by A.F.L.

Labor Heads Urge Liberals for Vacancies, in Visit to White House.

By the Associated Press.

With constitutional challenges of New Deal and labor legislation flooding the courts, the American Federation of Labor yesterday asked President Roosevelt to fill existing vacancies on the Federal bench with men possessing "a progressive point of view."

William Green, president of the federation, carried the appeal to the White House. He was accompanied by Edward Nockles, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, who indorsed Benjamin Goldstein, of Chicago, for the vacancy on the Circuit Court of Appeals there.

The two labor spokesmen also discussed with the President possible candidates for the vacancy on the district bench at Columbus, Ohio, where they said there were several men highly recommended who were satisfactory to labor.

"We talked to the President about several vacancies on the Federal bench," Green told newspapermen. "We urged that men be selected who possess a progressive point of view."

The Federation of Labor has closely watched all judicial appointments for years and led the battle which resulted in rejection by the Senate of President Hoover's nomination of John J. Parker to the Supreme Court a few years ago.

Most of the Senators who voted for confirmation of the Parker nomination have since been defeated. The federation claims to be largely responsible.

Dietrich Finds Living In U. S. Is Too Costly

Hollywood, Dec. 20 (AP).—Marlene Dietrich, blonde German film star, said today life in America comes too high for her.

She said "excessive" taxation, high rents and living costs in general take such a large portion of her salary that she has little left to save.

In February Miss Dietrich will leave for Europe and "very possibly" will stay there—"if I like it well enough."

Help Asked to Stop Gaming by Children

Annapolis, Dec. 20.—Following numerous complaints about the laxity of local police in breaking up the "numbers racket" prevailing among children, Louis J. De Alba, foreman of the Anne Arundel County grand jury, today appealed to the public to assist in overcoming the "game" by supplying testimony for convictions.

De Alba said during the October term the grand jury received numerous complaints citing the laxity of local police in stopping the "numbers game."

In answer to the petitioners, De Alba said: "This body cannot indict on anonymous letters, nor on hearsay. It is absolutely necessary to have concrete evidence from witnesses who can identify the parties to whom they pay their money. Until parties who have such evidence are willing to appear before us and testify, there is nothing this body can do.

Philatelists Soon to Get China Clipper Covers

By the Associated Press.

A cargo of Christmas presents for stamp collectors will land at Seattle, Wash., Tuesday.

The steamer President Jackson, arriving that day from Manila, has the "philatelic covers" carried by the China Clipper on its first transpacific air-mail flight.

The Postoffice Department said yesterday first-flight envelopes sent to Guam would not reach the United States until January 25.

Princess Rospigliosi Seeks 3-Day Divorce

Mexico City, Dec. 20 (AP).—Headed for a possible three-day divorce, the Princess Rospigliosi, formerly Marion Snowden, stepped from a plane here today and said her plans for remarriage were "uncertain."

Her American lawyer, Percy Allen, declined to say where the oil heiress would file for divorce from her Italian husband, but it was believed she likely would go to Cuernavaca, where marriages can be voided in three days.

Borah Stirs G. O. P.

in Senator Borah's prospects was discussion on Capitol Hill of a lack of finances for the Idahoan's campaign. A man of modest means himself, Senator Borah has no wealthy friends and none could guess where he might get financial help for an extensive campaign.

Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, the wealthiest man in the Senate, in 1924 offered to finance the Idahoan for the Presidency, but the friendship which then existed between the two men has long since evaporated and a year ago they were roundly assailing each other.

At that time Senator Couzens said that "for 40 years Senator Borah has had nothing but words and I cannot understand why anyone should take him seriously."

"Who is Senator Borah to shout liberalism?" the Michigan Senator added on that occasion. "Check it up and you'll find he never voted in his life for a liberal for President."

Couzens Silent.

Senator Couzens, whose colleague Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, is also being prominently mentioned for the Republican Presidential nomination, was silent yesterday, asserting he had spent "so much time commuting between the hospital and my home that I have not caught up on political and economic questions."

Moreover, it is clear that Senator Borah cannot expect solid support from the so-called Senate progressive Republicans. Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, and leader of that bloc, some weeks ago declared he favored the re-election of President Roosevelt and that he would have no other candidates.

Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), of California, has not been friendly with Senator Borah for years, probably because the latter failed to support the Bull Moose movement in 1912.

In addition to these obstacles, Senator Borah faces the determined opposition of the Republican old guard leaders, particularly those in the East. Many observers believe it doubtful whether he can obtain the nomination, although they concede he may develop sufficient strength to have an important voice in the Cleveland convention.

The Idahoan's exact status is not quite clear. He said yesterday it "would not be an accurate characterization" to describe him as "an active candidate." Earlier in the day he issued a formal statement to clarify his position in which he said his "primary objective is a convention of liberal delegates which will write a liberal platform and name a liberal candidate.

"To that end," he added, "I shall devote my efforts.

"If in any State or district the liberal forces think it will help the liberal cause to pledge the delegates to me, I shall co-operate fully with that plan. If, however, it is thought better to pledge the delegates to some other liberal, I shall co-operate just as fully. In other words, inflexible as to the objective, flexible as to the tactics."

May Enter in Ohio.

Elaborating on this declaration later in the day, Senator Borah said he would be willing to do whatever the law requires in the way of giving his assent and signing certificates in Ohio "if my friends there regard that as a good strategic move."

He added that "whatever they want I'll do." But it is doubted whether he would permit his name to be filed in contests in Illinois, Kansas or other States where favorite sons are serious contenders for the nomination.

In his formal statement, Senator Borah contended that "a man would be seeking political immolation to take a nomination upon any other than a liberal platform" in view of the present political situation. He added that consequently "the first thing to do is to get a convention committeed to liberal principles" and asserted he did not intend to let "personal matters, either my own or those of others, interfere with the main purpose."

Progressive Drive On.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 20.—Republican Progressives of New York State, led by former State Chairman W. Kingsland Macy, shortly will launch a campaign to win New York's 90 delegates for Senator William E. Borah in the national Republican convention in June.

This became known upon unimpeachable authority tonight, close upon the Idaho Senator's expression in Washington yesterday voicing "no objection" to the pledging of liberal convention candidates in his interest.

Earlier this week in Albany, Macy confirmed reports that he would use his influence actively in shaping a convention delegation pledged to Senator Borah's nomination for the Presidency.

The "Progressive" Borah campaign for delegates will shape up probably after the first of the year in a public announcement of some form from the Macy group, which has waged bitter warfare for several years against the New York "old guard" Republican leadership and purported "utility influences" in previous Republican legislatures.

Macy was ousted from the State chairmanship in November, 1934, by so-called "old guard" Republicans whose leaders he accused of attempting to "sell out" the party.

Borah Boom Starts.

Boston, Dec. 20.—A Borah for President boom was launched in Massachusetts today, shortly after the 70-year-old Idaho Senator had announced he would co-operate with liberal Republicans seeking election of convention delegates pledged to him.

Its sponsor was witty, satiric Robert M. Washburn, perennial Bull Moose Republican, who for years had used his presidency of the (Theodore) Roosevelt Club to badger what he considered reactionary elements in the State Republican party.

France Ready To Back Britain If War Spreads

Laval Aims to Avoid Clash With Italy, but Will Not Abandon League.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 20.—If Premier Laval fails to stave off a European war, authoritative quarters disclosed tonight, France is prepared to defend herself and aid Great Britain in the event of an Italian attack.

Recent movements of French troops, ships and airplanes were disclosed as significant in responsible circles, following a disclosure in London that Britain has asked Mediterranean powers what precautions they have taken.

The British questions were directed primarily at eastern Mediterranean countries, it was said, since France already had advised London she is ready to aid her in case of an Italian attack.

Official circles disclosed they are considering the danger of war through some desperate move by Premier Mussolini.

The newspaper l'Ordre asserts that Il Duce would "be glad to see the colonial war degenerate into a general war" because he realizes it "will finally alienate the Italian people" from Italy's former allies.

Envoy Visits Laval.

Vittorio Cerruti, the Italian ambassador, visited Laval tonight with the usual secrecy. It was believed in some circles that he brought Mussolini's reply to the Anglo-French peace plan.

Laval decided to stake the life of his cabinet on a policy of keeping France from war with Italy.

After conferring with President Lebrun, Laval decided he would not resign. He indicated he would seek a vote of confidence from the Chamber of Deputies next week on his policy thus far, which he previously had described as doing everything to prevent the Ethiopian conflict from spreading to Europe.

"Europe is facing the unknown," was the keynote of the French press in an atmosphere of anxiety following the burial of the Anglo-French peace plan.

Diplomatic sources said Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia have indicated willingness to take military and naval precautions against any possible Italian attack because of sanctions.

French officials would neither confirm nor deny that they had been asked whether they had taken precautions against attack. France, however, has already pledged aid to Britain if it is needed.

Cabinet Firmer.

The danger of Laval's overthrow because of his part in the Anglo-French peace plan dwindled because of the apparent reluctance of anyone else to tackle his problem.

France is worried over the possible resurrection in Geneva of an oil embargo against Italy after Congress decides what position the United States shall take about oil.

France, said the newspaper Intransigeant, "cannot indefinitely retard the operation of full coercive measures by the League."

Laval, during his talk with President Lebrun, was quoted as having said:

"There may be an epidemic of resignations, but I do not feel affected by the contagion."

The Chamber of Deputies is to debate foreign policy December 27, and Laval's fate may be decided on that day.

Pittman's Talk

American friendship so that she can at least depend on a friendly American neutrality when her "inevitable conflict" with Soviet communism flares into war, it was asserted.

"I am certain that Senator Pittman, who is chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Upper House in Washington, is well informed about conditions in the Americas and Europe," the foreign office spokesman said, "but he cannot know much about the Orient. His arguments are not worthy of serious discussion. We are disappointed that a statesman in such a responible position should advance them."

The spokesman feared that Pittman's assertions were motivated by his membership in the "silver bloc" in Congress and a desire to impress his constituents. "The Senator's statements simply reveal a lack of common sense," Amau said.

Saito Cables Report.

By the United Press.

Japanese Ambassador Hirosi Saito has cabled to his government a full report of the speech Thursday night at Las Vegas, Nev., of Senator Key Pittman regarding the possibility of war with Japan, the embassy disclosed last night.

Saito acted shortly after the National Council for the Prevention of War called on the Administration to disavow Pittman's "jingoistic" statements.

Presumably Saito's report was to permit his government to decide whether to make a protest.

Heretofore foreign governments have not protested the remarks of Representatives or Senators, on the ground that they are not Government officials. Pittman, however, is chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and has an influential voice in foreign policy.

Quoted in Dispatches.

Pittman was quoted at Las Vegas as charging Japan with "ambitions similar to those of the former Kaiser," with world conquest an ultimate objective. He said conquest of China was the first move, according to the dispatches, and that invasion of America's Pacific Coast would follow.

President Roosevelt was asked at his press conference yesterday for comment, but said he had not read Pittman's speech.

The War Prevention Council, in a statement issued by Dr. Frederick J. Libby, executive director, said Pittman's "jingoism is a menace to our national welfare."

Il Duce Sends for His Own Gas

Italian tanker Stelvio being loaded at San Pedro, Calif., has sailed for Italy with 75,000 barrels of gasoline—whether for planes in Africa could not be learned. It was first Italian tanker to visit West Coast in years. Meanwhile, oil embargo question threatens to cause more serious crisis in Europe, with Britain set to fight.

Italian Forces Mop Up Enemy West of Makale

Bayonet, Tank and Airplane Attacks Break Morale of Ethiopians.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

With the Italian Northern Armies, via Asmara, Dec. 20.—With cold steel, tanks and airplanes, Italian troops today "mopped up" Ethiopian detachments in the Tambien sector west of Makale, Italian advanced post.

In three bombardments of Ethiopian forces, Italian airmen discovered a detachment of Ethiopian cavalry southwest of Selaclaca, 10 miles west of the occupied Ethiopian holy city of Aksum.

This is the first time Ethiopian cavalry have penetrated north of the Takkaze River. The presence of this unit so close to Aksum was a surprise.

Ethiopian Morale Broken.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio announced at military headquarters that the Ethiopians were fleeing with "notable losses" after suffering defeat in a "lively fight" south of Addi Ambi in the heart of the Tambien sector.

"Our casualties were one non-commissioned officer and one Askari (native Eritrean soldier) killed and 15 soldiers wounded," Marshal Badoglio reported.

The Ethiopians retreated so fast before the bayonet charges of the shouting Askaris they were unable to remove their dead and wounded from the field of battle.

As in recent engagements south of Aksum, the Italians used "flea" tanks with tremendous effect. Rumbling over all obstacles and spitting fire from two machine guns in their turrets, the tanks broke the morale of the Ethiopians, whose flight was turned to rout when the Askaris charged with bayonets.

Planes Hit But Go On.

Airplanes then roared low over the retreating columns, showering explosives.

The bombers discovered large groups of Ethiopians on both sides of the Takkaze River where it bites through deep gorges on the southern fringe of Tambien. The aviators reported heavy Ethiopian losses. The planes returned with bullet holes through their fabric but none was injured.

Marshal Badoglio also reported receiving a message from Gen. Rodolfo Graziani, commander of the southern armies, announcing that "chiefs and notable men of all extractions of the Ogaden and Rer Abdullah tribes met at Gorahai for their traditional assembly and reiterated before the royal residence a pledge of complete submission to Italy."

Armed contingents of Ogaden warriors have been incorporated in Italian Dubat contingents, it was announced.

Nation Called to Cause.

Addis Ababa, Dec. 20 (U.P.).—Emperor Haile Selassie's 10,000,000 subjects were urged tonight to make unprecedented sacrifices to throw the full strength of their ancient kingdom against Fascist Italy in the long-awaited mass offensive.

The Abuna of Addis Ababa, high priest of Ethiopia, issued a proclamation rallying the nation to a week of prayer and fasting, starting December 23, "to show our fathers, brothers and husbands that we, too, are behind them."

"Our soldiers in the north will go through the burning days and freezing nights and experience hardships of all kinds because they are willing and glad to pour out their blood against the invaders," the proclamation said.

Announcement that southern Ethiopian tribesmen met "before the royal residence" at Gorahai and pledged submission to Italy conflicts with recent Ethiopian advices, which said Gorahai had been abandoned by the Italians and that it is nothing but a fortified camp without important residences.

Son-in-Law of Mussolini Named to Grand Council

Rome, Dec. 20 (AP).—Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian air hero and son-in-law of Premier Mussolini, was named a member of the Fascist grand council tonight immediately before it met to discuss the Anglo-French peace plan.

Ciano returned from his "fighting vacation" Wednesday to reassume his duties as minister of press and propaganda. He will take a seat in the council alongside his father, Count Costanzo Ciano, president of the Chamber of Deputies and a naval hero in the World War.

Italy to Push on to War Goal; Council Ignores Peace Plan

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Dec. 20.—Premier Mussolini, through the Grand Fascist Council, tonight announced he would go straight ahead toward his "goal" in the East African campaign.

Virtually ignoring the Anglo-French plan for peace in Ethiopia, Il Duce announced Italy would achieve her objective and end the struggle on her own terms.

The only reference to the peace plan was the statement that Italy "is firm" in her rights in the face of differences and contradictions in the sanctionist countries.

The Grand Council adjourned after a three-hour session without accepting or rejecting peace proposals and announced it would meet again January 18, 1936. Before adjourning the council declared the Italian people are solidly organized against "this vain attempt at suffocation" by countries enforcing League of Nations sanctions.

A communique announced the Grand Council "examined the political situation which has developed since the British repudiation of Paris proposals born of French initiative, which the Grand Council examined in its meeting December 18."

The Italian people, it added, will remain "unshakably united in the face of the disorganization and contradictions shown by sanctionists."

While the Council deliberated, Fascists expressed confidence that with the Anglo-French peace plan dead, sanctions are dying, and that they have only to beat Ethiopia to make their own terms in Africa.

Although the peace plan was killed in Geneva, a spokesman said Italy still regards Great Britain and France as bound by it.

Showing that he meant business in Africa, Mussolini sent 4,000 additional Blackshirts there today and 800 workmen aboard the steamer Lombardia.

Embassy Under Guard.

Rome, Dec. 20 (U.P.).—Extraordinary precautions were taken to guard the British embassy tonight. Besides the usual police patrol around the embassy, a company of soldiers mounted guard in a nearby street. Several other companies of soldiers were ordered near the Piazza di Spagna, where the British consulate is situated.

Some reliable quarters believe the additional guards were ordered to frustrate any possible demonstrations against the abrupt demise of the Anglo-French proposal for peace between Italy and Ethiopia.

Officials would not explain the measures.

British Plea

membership in the League, but also requested assurance of assistance in case of an attack upon the British fleet. Most of the British ships already are harbored at Alexandria, Egypt, or are patrolling the Suez Canal and Red Sea along Egypt's shores. The note apparently is a gesture toward Egyptian Nationalists who recently forced reinstatement of the 1923 independence constitution and complained of Britain's military steps, which they said had been taken without proper consultation of the Egyptian government.

It was notable that France was omitted from the poll, although the French, next to the British and Italians, are the biggest Mediterranean sea power. Apparently the assurances of Premier Pierre Laval to Sir Samuel Hoare several weeks ago are regarded as sufficient—notwithstanding the reported hint of Laval recently that the French fleet was unprepared for active warfare in the Mediterranean.

The French, it is believed, fear to weaken their North Sea squadrons in view of Germany's naval rearmament condoned by Britain in the Anglo-German naval treaty negotiated earlier this year.

Minister for League Affairs Anthony Eden, one of the three leading candidates for successor to Hoare, arrived from Geneva today and visited Baldwin for a half-hour at No. 10 Downing street.

Hoare's successor may be announced tomorrow. Neville Chamberlain now is regarded as strongest candidate, with Sir Austin Chamberlain, who led the anti-Hoare revolt, a close second. Eden would be a popular choice, but Baldwin is understood to feel he is valuable at Geneva—and after the blunder caused by Hoare's visit to Paris, Baldwin wants to keep his foreign secretary close to home.

Manchukuoans Resist Mongol Encroachment

'Force Will Meet Force,' Says Rengo Agency; Battle Described.

Tokyo, Dec. 20.—Manchukuo is prepared to meet force with force on the Mongolian border, said a Rengo (Japanese) news agency dispatch today from Hsinking, capital of the Japanese-fostered state.

Officials of Manchukuo are determined to meet Mongolian "encroachments" with armed resistance, the dispatch added, in describing a frontier clash yesterday between Japanese-Manchukuoan soldiers and a Mongolian force.

A communique issued by the Japanese army headquarters in Manchukuo said a force of Manchukuoan soldiers guarding the border and under the command of a Japanese officer was encountered by 70 Mongolian soldiers, armed with machine guns, on the Manchukuo side of the border.

Fighting ensued, the communique continued, but when a Japanese cavalry detachment rushed to the aid of their fellows the Mongolians fled, abandoning 20 rifles. No Japanese-Manchukuoan casualties were reported.

"Outer Mongolian complaints of any incident at that point are likely to bring further trouble," said a spokesman here for the Japanese Government.

(The official Soviet news agency Tass reported yesterday in a dispatch from Ulan Bator that 200 Japanese-Manchukuoan troops invaded the Mongolian peoples republic and killed several Mongolian soldiers. The minister of war of outer Mongolia and other high officials are now at Moscow conferring with Soviet leaders, following the breakdown of a conference with Hsinking officials seeking to solve border incidents. Soviet reports said the Mongols were threatened with an invasion if they did not recognize the Manchukuoan government.)

Shanghai, (Saturday) Dec. 21 (AP). Reports from Hong Kong today said newspapers there were giving prominence to a report that Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, Japanese military strategist, is plotting the restoration of Henry Pu Yi to the Dragon throne of the defunct celestial empire at Peiping.

Pu Yi, now Emperor Kang Teh of the Japanese-sponsored State of Manchukuo, as a baby of two was called to sit on the gorgeous dragon throne. But three years later China became a republic and he was evicted. In March of 1934, at the age of 28, he became ruler of Manchukuo.

Doihara also was reported to be considering the proposal of North China leaders that the East Hopei autonomous government merge with the newly inaugurated Hopei-Chahar council, a semi-autonomous set up for the two states.

New Soviet Hotel Has Private Baths

Moscow, Dec. 20 (AP).—The Moscow Soviet Hotel—radio and private bath in each of the 1,200 rooms—threw open its doors today to a curious but appreciative public.

Completion of the hotel was hailed as the second big step in the building of "New Moscow," the other being the recently built Metro subway system.

Soviet officials, foreseeing a great and beautiful city in the future, are tearing down old buildings in the center of Moscow to be replaced by monumental public buildings.

London Naval Conferees Take Holiday Recess

Japan Seen Weakening in Demands; Parley Will Resume Jan. 6.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 20.—The International Naval Conference recessed today until January 6 without an agreement, but some authoritative observers reported belief they discerned a slight weakening in Japanese demands for equality with Great Britain and the United States.

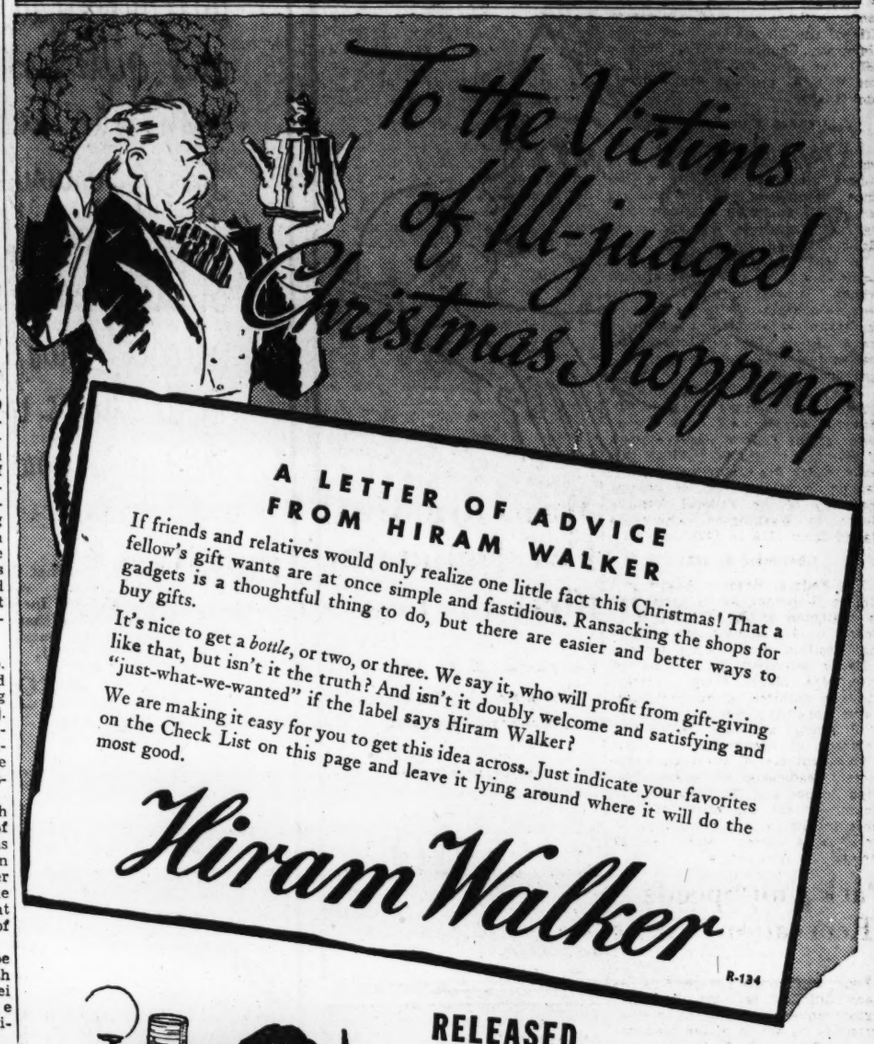
This view was not shared by all delegations and the Japanese representative reiterated to the press that they must have fleet equality.

In some high quarters, however, it was pointed out that the Japanese told the conference in recent sessions they felt there was room for adjustment above or below the proposed common tonnage level according to the vulnerability of each power. These quarters take this as an indication the Japanese are prepared to take less than equality rather than see the conference break up.

When the conference quit work for the Christmas holiday a British proposal for a new treaty still awaited definite action.

The conference will re-convene in an effort to devise a limitation treaty to replace the Washington and London pacts, expiring at the end of next year.

Admiral Osami Nagano, chief of the Japanese delegation, continued his critical analysis of the British scheme, but, it is understood, has not rejected the proposal definitely.



A LETTER OF ADVICE FROM HIRAM WALKER

If friends and relatives would only realize one little fact this Christmas! That a fellow's gift wants are at once simple and fastidious. Ransacking the shops for gadgets is a thoughtful thing to do, but there are easier and better ways to buy gifts.

It's nice to get a bottle, or two, or three. We say it, who will profit from gift-giving prominence to a report that Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, Japanese military strategist, is plotting the restoration of Henry Pu Yi to the Dragon throne of the defunct celestial empire at Peiping. like that, but isn't it the truth? And isn't it doubly welcome and satisfying and "just-what-we-wanted" if the label says Hiram Walker?

We are making it easy for you to get this idea across. Just indicate your favorites on the Check List on this page and leave it lying around where it will do the most good.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 20.—William Winslow Hoxton, chairman of the board of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond and Richmond agent of the Federal Reserve Board, died tonight at his home here. He was 64.

Widely known in banking circles, Mr. Hoxton was one of Richmond's most distinguished citizens, and was a member of a family long prominent in the social and educational life of the State. He was born in Jefferson County, W. Va., May 20, 1871, the son of Col. Llewellyn Hoxton, C. S. A., and Mrs. Frank Robinson Hoxton.

When the Federal Reserve Bank system was founded in 1914, Mr. Hoxton was chosen deputy governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. After holding this position for five years, he was advanced to the position of general secretary of the Federal Reserve Board in Washington, where he stayed from 1919 to 1923.

Park Unit Speeds Recreation Works

Four recreational projects in as many different sections of Washington moved closer to completion yesterday by action of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

A plan of developing the Canal street reservation as a playground center for Southwest children was approved, completion of land purchases for the Palisades Playground was reported, advice was given the committee studying the projected stadium and sport center at the foot of East Capitol street and the acquisition of additional land in the Fort Reno area was reported.

The Canal street program will be submitted to the District Commissioners, whose approval is necessary for certain street closings that are contemplated. The Fort Reno property is in the vicinity of Woodrow Wilson High School. Its development as a play area will be under jurisdiction of the office of National Capital Parks.

The commission adopted a resolution calling upon the National Parks Service to apply for funds to build a road connection between the George Washington Memorial Parkway and Lee boulevard.

Woman Given Bail In Death of Baby

A Whitesburg, Ky., Dec. 20 (AP).—Mrs. Helen Mahan, who was jailed without bond Monday in connection wtih the death of her 9-month-old son, Thomas, was at liberty under $10,000 bond today. She is to be given a hearing in juvenile court Monday on a charge of neglect of the baby.

Mrs. Mahan was arrested after she testified at the hearing of her husband, Robert Mahan, 22, who is held without bond on a charge of murder in the child's death. She accused him of having held the baby's feet against a stove as punishment for crying.

County Judge Sandy Adams will decide whether to place Mrs. Mahan under juvenile court or turn the case over to circuit court. Mahan's case will be considered at a grand jury session January 6.

"Smoking his pipe of clay.
"Mother takes in washing;
"So does Sister Ann.
"Everybody works at our house—but my old man."

Father died last Thursday night. The word came to Washington yesterday, and in show business there was mourning. Everybody in show business knew Charlie McClintock—Charles Warren McClintock, the files say that was his right name.

And it was Charlie, who, with Jean Havez, dead these many years, wrote the old song that Lew Dockstadter's minstrels spread around the country.

Charlie McClintock was one of the grand old men of theatrical advance agents. Thirty-five years he'd been in show business—he was about 55 years old. He knew baseball; he knew newspaperdom; he knew the theater world. He started out as batboy for the old Pittsburgh Pirates, and he was the committee of one that welcomed Rube Waddell to baseball in Pittsburgh. He used to go in training with John McGraw's Giants every springtime.

He started out as advance man for a wagon show; then he got in with the circus; he rose rapidly, and now, going through the files for his obit, time says he hit the highway in advance for just about the whole of "Who's Who in the Theater"—

George M. Cohan, Ethel Barrymore, Cornelia Otis Skinner, Katherine Cornell, the Duncan sisters, Helen Hayes, Billie Burke, Ina Claire, Eva LeGallienne, Otis Skinner, Raymond Hitchcock, Douglas Fairbanks, and others.

It was about three months ago, while acting as business manager for Miss Barrymore's revival of "The Constant Wife," that Charlie fell ill—cirrhosis of the liver. He had four blood transfusions, one from another veteran publicity man, Beauvais Fox. Late Thursday night, at St. Clare's Hospital, in New York, he died.

A brother and sister survive, in McKeesport, Pa.

Army's Oldest Man To Be Retired at 70

A soldier almost 70 years old will be retired from active duty by the Army December 31. Retirement orders were issued by the War Department yesterday.

He is Sergt. John Hoover, oldest man in the Army and a member of the Service Company, Eleventh Infantry, at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. He enlisted originally from Union, Ohio, in 1889, and served ten years. Then he was out of the service for 15 years, and re-enlisted in 1914.

At Indianapolis Hoover told the Associated Press that despite his retirement he is "far from through," and wants "to keep busy at something."

He said he "figured" he and former President Hoover are second cousins.

Mansion Ball For Debutante First in Years

Governor Will Introduce Daughter to Richmond Society Thursday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Dec. 20.—The first debut ball for a daughter of a Virginia Governor to be held at the mansion for more than a half century will take place next Thursday evening when Gov. and Mrs. George C. Peery will introduce their daughter, Nancy Letitia Peery, to Richmond society.

Eight Governors have occupied the mansion between the administrations of Gov. Peery and the late J. Hoge Tyler, but none of them had a daughter to reach debutante age while in office.

Three seasons ago former Gov. John Garland Pollard gave a "coming out" party there for his great-niece, Miss Gertrude Murrell, now Mrs. Alfred Rhett DuPont, of New York, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Murrell, of Richmond. Thirty-one years before that event, the last debutante daughter of a chief executive of the Old Dominion, Miss Lily Tyler, daughter of former Gov. Tyler, made her bow, but there was no party for her at the mansion.

Miss Peery was born in Tazewell, Va., and attended school there until, at the age of 7, she moved with her family to Washington, where her father represented the Ninth Virginia District in Congress. She was a pupil at Friends School and later at Gunston Hall.

Miss Peery is now a sophomore at Hollins College. She will arrive home tomorrow.

New Stamp Urged To Honor Finland

A special postage stamp should be designed as a tribute to Finland, the only country that is keeping up payments to the United States on its war debt, a Washington patent attorney believes.

Accordingly, James F. Duhamel yesterday wrote Clinton B. Eilenberger, Third Assistant Postmaster General, as follows:

"In view of the fact that we are continually issuing stamps for postage and to celebrate important events, I wish to suggest a postage stamp commemorating the payment of its $230,453 debt to the United States by the Republic of Finland.

"First, as a gratuity to this thrifty little nation for the payment of this debt that may be regarded as a mark of commercial and national honor.

"Secondly, to show the world that we can appreciate and applaud the payment of money by a nation that was willingly advanced by us in a time of urgent need by the borrower.

"Let us have a 5-cent postage stamp for foreign use, elongated and showing at the left our eagle bearing a horn of plenty in his talons and soaring toward the Finnish griffon with outstretch paws and sheathed sword."

Eugene H. Taggart, Here 36 Years, Dies

Eugene H. Taggart, 59, real estate salesman, died at his home at 1724 Seventeenth street northwest yesterday. He came to Washington in 1899, as a student in the Columbian Law School. Later he went into the real estate business here, first for himself, and later as a member of the firm of McKeever, Inc. He was a member of the Akron, Ohio, Masonic Lodge, and a member of the University Club. He is survived by his wife and daughter.

Funeral services will be held today at 2 p. m. in the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, at Kalorama and Columbia roads, northwest. He will be buried in the Rock Creek Cemetery. Friends and relatives are invited.

West Virginia Apple Rust War Begun by WPA

Work Is Expected to Stop Damage That Costs $300,000 a Year.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 20.—Fruit growers here were advised today by West Virginia WPA Administrator F. Witcher McCullough at Charleston that projects for elimination of apple rust in Jefferson, Hampshire, Berkeley, Grant, Mineral and Morgan Counties were started Wednesday. This work was in response to the petition of apple growers' associations and independent growers of the counties and the State Department of Agriculture.

Growers, supported by Department of Agriculture, contended rust caused $300,000 damage this year and at least $150,000 annually prior to 1935.

"These projects," says Waldo F. Craig, assistant entomologist, State Department of Agriculture, "have their justification in the financial return to the communities. The apple industry, in these counties, has produced commercial crops with an average yearly farm value of $2,573,000 for the last six years. The average farm value of the total crop for this same period is estimated to be $3,468,000.

The rust, the department says, is propagated by red cedar trees.

Mrs. C. H. Wright Is Dead in Georgia

Mrs. Laura Mitchell Wright, the wife of Col. Clement H. Wright, U. S. A., and the sister of Col. Harry D. Mitchell, who is on duty here in the office of the adjutant general in the War Department, died yesterday at Fort Benning, Ga.

Mrs. Wright, who was well known in Army circles here, had been in failing health for several months. She and Col. Wright made Washington their home from 1923 to 1932, while her husband was on duty with the general staff at the War Department.

Mrs. Wright was a native of Springfield, Ohio, the daughter of the late Dr. Frank Mitchell, a Methodist minister, and Mrs. Mitchell, who survives in Urbana, Ohio. Other survivors are a daughter, Mrs. T. J. Conway, the wife of Lieut. Conway, who also is stationed at Fort Benning; a sister, Miss Kate Mitchell, of Urbana, and a brother, Frank Mitchell, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 2 p. m. in the Fort Myer Chapel, Chaplain Ralph Deibert, of Fort Meyer, and the Rev. Z. Barney Phillips, pastor of the Church of the Epiphany, officiating. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Borah Casts A Shadow.

Republican leaders who were beaming when the national committee met in Washington earlier in the week are probably more troubled today. For Senator Borah has sprinkled a little cold water on their rising enthusiasm. The Senator from Idaho has his own ideas as to what course the Republican Party should follow, and undeniably they vary from the policies of Eastern leaders. His bid for the Presidential nomination is a warning of the internal conflict that must be fought out before any Republican candidate can attain the right to oppose President Roosevelt.

Mr. Borah's statement indicates that his own candidacy is not to be taken too seriously. His primary objective is "a convention of liberal delegates which will write a liberal platform and name a liberal candidate." He will not let "personal matters" interfere with this "main purpose." The Senator realizes, of course, that his many years of political activity of themselves tend to eliminate him as an eligible candidate for a post demanding so much physical vigor. Nor can he be unaware of the specialized character of his following. It seems clear that he is making a bid for leadership within the party rather than for the position of standard bearer.

Instead of clarifying the atmosphere, however, this attitude tends to add to the tension. As a contender for the nomination Senator Borah might be easily defeated by a candidate more acceptable to both wings of the Republican Party. But as a politically astute champion of a "liberal program," whatever that may come to mean in 1936, he can expect a substantial and enduring following. And therein lies a very interesting problem for the G. O. P.

Senatorial Tact.

It is difficult to believe that Senator Pittman, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Upper House, was correctly quoted in his speech before the Rotary Club of Las Vegas. For a man in his position actually to assert that "the present militarist government of Japan plans conquest of the entire world," and to predict a Japanese invasion of the United States, would be such loose and provocative language as to cast the gravest doubts on the orator's fitness for the important committee chairmanship he holds.

Yet these remarks, attributed to Mr. Pittman, differ only in degree, and not in kind, from the utterly tactless and gratuitous observations which members of Congress, particularly some Senators, are continually casting forth. For a body which seems to believe it can keep the United States at peace more successfully than the Department of State, the Senate certainly contains an astonishingly high proportion of irresponsible trouble-makers.

Now that Senator Pittman has given what Japan will doubtless regard as a deliberate affront, it will be particularly interesting to follow his attitude on the pending neutrality legislation. Will he now dare to argue that the Department of State cannot be safely trusted with the conduct of our foreign relations? Incredible as it seems, it is not at all impossible that Mr. Pittman and other Senators will take just that position. And in the meantime Secretary Hull's hard-pressed division will be working overtime to assuage the justified antagonisms with which loose-mouthed members of Congress impede our diplomacy of peace.

Another Terrible Accident.

The shocking accident in which Senator Schall was struck down while crossing the Baltimore boulevard at Cottage City must spur Secretary Roper's accident-prevention conference into even greater activity. Yet even without this unhappy reminder the delegates who met in Washington earlier in the week were fully aware of the urgency of the Nation's call for an effective curb to the soaring toll of the highways.

The conference, of course, has more to consider than automobile accidents. Avoidable injuries from whatever sources on land, sea and air come within its scope. Already committees have been appointed to study the many divisions of the general problem. But far and away the greatest single field for action lies on the highways. The figures there are all too well known: 288,000 men, women and children killed since 1920.

How to stop this national suicide is the most baffling problem. Perhaps a good hint may be found in the words of Admiral Grayson, who suggested to the conference that the solution might lie "in self-education and self-discipline;" high-sounding words, perhaps, but not necessarily empty words. For, as the highway fatality graph shoots up to its annual peak, it becomes increasingly clear that regulations and conferences can of themselves avail little.

If tragedies such as befell Senator Schall and his companion are to be avoided, it will be only through a better comprehension on the part of each individual driver. Death lies under his hood, and those who cannot control the forces too easily placed at their command have no business to be at the wheel.

Alternatives To AAA.

It is not surprising that Republican leaders are seeking expert advice on the development of a substitute for the AAA. Secretary Wallace's experiment ranks high in popularity among the New Deal ventures. Farmers will not readily abandon the benefit checks flowing from Washington at regular intervals. To make real headway in the agricultural sections the Republicans will have to offer the farmer a convincing alternative.

Politicians interested chiefly in defeating the Administration in the farm belt may be tempted, therefore, to pledge their support to panaceas carrying even more liberal rewards than the AAA can offer. Already a considerable list of expedients has been suggested, including direct subsidies, price-fixing and sabbatical leave for all farmers. Other nostrums will be added to this list in increasing volume with the approach of the Republican national convention. If that party is to rise above mere expediency, a prerequisite to taking a position is that the basic principles of a new farm policy be carefully analyzed by a group of practical farmers, economists and administrators whose chief interests are not political.

To evolve a substitute for the AAA will be the more difficult because of the generous subsidies granted during the last two and one-half years. Any convincing program will necessitate some degree of retreat from that policy. Indeed, the AAA reduced its benefit payments last season and permitted some expansion of basic crops. The need of the hour is a constructive long-term program that will consolidate the unquestionable gains made under the AAA while at the same time eliminating its demonstrable weaknesses. The party that finds such a formula will thereby gain a distinct political advantage.

Defects in the plan of paying farmers to grow smaller crops are obvious. By raising prices this scheme tends to cut off important export markets heretofore supplied by American farmers, and to diminish home consumption. By sales-tax methods, bearing most heavily on poor consumers, it subsidizes many farmers who need no governmental aid. Ten individuals are said to have obtained a total of $562,000 out of the processing taxes in 1933. At the same time, the program tends to keep inefficient farmers producing. And it can never be healthy in a democracy to make the individual a direct beneficiary of governmental aid.

From the administrative viewpoint, other difficulties arise. Control of one large crop leads to a progressive regimentation of all agriculture. Basic commodities named in the act have been steadily increased until they are now 15 in number. A tendency to control processing industries from Washington is apparent, with implications for industry as a whole. Moreover, voluntary restriction tends to break down and to be replaced by more rigid governmental controls. In shaping a permanent policy this centralizing trend demands far more serious consideration than has yet been given.

Can the Republican Party work out a farm program that will be economically sound, fair to both producers and consumers, administratively practical and free from coercion? Its attempt to do so will be attentively watched. And, in view of the approaching Supreme Court decision, the endeavor may have far greater significance than any mere platform plank.

The Bonus Vs. Neutrality.

Lobbyists for the veterans' organizations and vote-seeking Congressmen are trying to maneuver the bonus into first place on the legislative calendar. Their purpose is obvious. If the bonus can be railroaded through at the outset of Congress, before the difficult fiscal problems confronting the Administration have been thoroughly aired, it may meet with more sympathetic response and political embarrassment at the start of the 1936 election could be minimized.

In reaching this conclusion, however, a number of important factors have been overlooked. It happens that other issues of far greater importance than the bonus must be considered during the early part of the session. Most significant of these is the neutrality legislation. With the present act scheduled to expire at the end of February, and with the situation in Europe becoming daily more grave, first attention must be given, under any reasonable arrangement, to measures that will strengthen the position of the United States in the face of this international crisis. No organization could possibly call itself patriotic if it were willing to place a raid upon the Treasury ahead of the urgent need for intelligent neutrality legislation.

Aside from this dominant factor, consideration of a bonus bill would be highly improper until the appropriation measures have been passed and emergency needs for 1937 determined. To pass the bonus first and then turn to the relief problem would be a shameful betrayal of the unemployed. Congressional leaders must show sufficient interest in the general welfare to head off such a blunder, even if individual members are willing to sacrifice national needs to fancied political advantage.

The bill which is the spearhead of this latest bonus drive is some improvement over the Patman measure. Nevertheless, it proposes to pay within two years obligations that will not become due until 1945. Its gratuitous elements are cleverly camouflaged by a provision to date the bonus certificates as of 1918 instead of 1925. That would seem reasonable, since the war ended in 1918, were it not for the fact that Congress added 25 per cent to the original bonus for the specific purpose of compensating veterans for the lapse of time between the end of the war and the effective date of the act. It does not appear, however, that the new scheme as yet makes the necessary provision for deduction of this 25 per cent.

Current payment of interest that cannot be accumulated until 1945 is completely unwarranted, regardless of how it may be camouflaged. Should Congress even consider such a measure while really vital issues are pressing for attention, it would be a rank betrayal of duty.

Not A Servile People.

Those who are closely watching Japan's piecemeal conquest of China may well give more attention to the slowly gathering tide of resentment among the Chinese masses than to such incidents as the bombing of Kuyuan or the seizure of Tangku. The soul of China has been stirred. The humble masses, unable to organize military resistance, are nevertheless being goaded to desperation by the steady encroachment of the Japanese.

The student riots in Peiping and other cities are one clear manifestation of the gathering wrath of the Chinese people. Anti-imperialistic demonstrations of this kind were a common spectacle in China a decade ago. Under the Nationalist Government, however, the students have been encouraged to work quietly for the peaceful consolidation of their country. It is a significant development that they now apparently despair of achieving unification unless mass opposition to the Japanese first can be aroused.

The student movement, moreover, dramatizes the issues which the Japanese generals are trying to keep under cover. Where officials at Nanking feel compelled to suffer the invasion in virtual silence because they lack money and organization for self-defense, the students cry their denunciations and announce their indignation from the housetops. Their voices reverberate through the country because the traditional respect for the leadership of scholars is not yet dead in China.

Significance may, for the same reason, be attached to the decision of the military clique in charge of the Peiping-Tientsin area to expel Dr. Hu Shih, China's most widely known philosopher, and Dr. Chiang Mon-lin, president of the Peiping National University, as obstructing the autonomy movement. Dr. Poling Chang, another noted educator, has already scorned Japanese overtures and left the contested area. A camouflaged autonomy movement which is spurned by Chinese leaders of this type can only sustain an uneasy life while ringed by Japanese bayonets.

Hope of effective military resistance from the government at Nanking is faint as the Japanese tighten their grip upon the strategic northern provinces. President Chiang Kai-shek no doubt realizes that open hostilities would be suicidal. But this will not quell the bitterness nor end the stubborn passive resistance of the Chinese people. They are a peace-loving and unaggressive race, but they are also far from servile. A few leaders may be suborned, and the populace may be temporarily terrorized without making any really effective progress in the subjugation of China to Japanese control.

Gen. Dolhara, as Japan's most active agent in the attempted destruction of China, might do well to brush up on his Chinese history. It shows a long record of desperate mass risings when this patient people have had their endurance to alien exploitation overstrained.

The Postoffice Department has ruled that the words "Merry Christmas" may be written on third and fourth class mail matter without subjecting it to first-class postage rates—probably on the theory that these words don't mean anything anyway.

"Americans are at the crossroads" shouts a political orator. Perhaps so, but to some of us it seems more like we're on a detour.

Out Against The Spoils System.

From the Kansas City Times.

The National League of Women Voters is doing an urgently needed work in its two-year campaign to arouse public sentiment to the dangers of the spoils system in governmental affairs and to bring about, so far as it is humanly possible, adoption of the merit system. More than ever before in its history, America now is confronted with these dangers. People who are called upon to support government must demand unceasingly not only the elimination of useless bureaucracy, but the administration of that which is by necessity retained through the use of trained and efficient personnel.

The spoils system is an old and deeply intrenched evil in America. The country is increasingly unable to bear the waste and inefficiency of it. It must be rooted out if government is to perform its needed service and is to command the confidence and support of the people. Education and appeals to public officials, methods adopted by the league, must be depended upon to bring the required and the irresistible public demands for a change.

European countries have discovered they cannot afford poorly trained or inefficient administrators. Neither can America.

Advance Publicity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Far be it from me to waste any tears on that utility magnate who put the country's holding companies on the spot by his subpena dodging, but it is interesting to point out the members of Congress, in charge of utility investigation, are busily engaged in trying the man in the press of the country.

It seems that Chairman O'Connor and Chairman Black, with a nice eye to their own publicity, have all kinds of releases ready to offer to make sure that when they finally bring the accused to the bar, the country will be pretty well saturated with hostile propaganda and Messrs. O'Connor and Black will be the cat's meow, so far as public benefactors are concerned.

Very nice for the publicity seekers, and evidence of their delicate finesse in political matters of this type, but after all what do intelligent citizens think of capers of this kind? It is a crime to influence a judge or jury in advance of a trial, but so far as Congressional investigations are concerned this rule is evidently "out."

It seems to us that if the utility lad is such a very bad boy, that fact in itself ought to be sufficient to convict him, without dragging in all this advance publicity. Maybe the two chairmen are not any too sure of their case, and have resorted to packing the jury in advance!

Cheerless Yule.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of December 16 appeared the headlines: "Tree in Park to Symbolize Yule for All." How can it symbolize Yule for all when 10,000 families formerly on mere subsistence budgets have had their budget allowances cut 25 per cent? Does the community realize that mothers with babies in their arms and young children by their sides are going to relief offices for help that cannot be given and are sitting there for hours because the offices are warm and there is no fuel for fire at home? Sick men in one free clinic are asking for letters to their case workers saying they are able to work because the relief allowance for a single has been cut to $12 a month.

I am quite sure the community does not realize these things or it would go in a body to Commissioner George E. Allen and ask him to rescind his order of 25 per cent cut of relief knowing that he can spend the appropriation he has for this purpose, trusting that Congress does not want suffering and starvation in the National Capital and will make further provision when Congress convenes.

Roosevelt In '29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to reply to M. A. Hulswitt's letter published in The Post, December 11. If President Roosevelt had been in office from 1929-1933, the situation which confronted him on March 4, 1933, would never have existed. His constructive reforms would have been started in time (1929) so that all of us wouldn't have been forced to suffer from the depression. The great paper profits on the stock exchanges would have been limited, because marginal trading would have been curbed. The SEC introduced by President Roosevelt would have helped to avert this wild speculation. The FDIC insures our bank deposits now up to $5,000—if they had been in 1929-1933 many of us wouldn't have lost our hard-earned savings.

The farmer wouldn't have starved for so many years; industry wouldn't have come to almost a dead stop. At least, President Roosevelt gets action and would have been alert in helping the masses and not just big business alone. He wouldn't have sat by and repeated "prosperity is just around the corner."

It is ridiculous for Mr. Hulswitt to say that President Roosevelt had everything in his favor on entering office. On the contrary, all conditions were against him; it is only through the New Deal agencies that we have been able to rise from the depths into which the Hoover Administration had thrown us.

The Annual Carnegie Exhibit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The free public exhibits of the Carnegie Institution's research activities graphically present the chief scientific achievements of its experts and, accompanied as they are by popular lectures and explanations, have a large educational value for the intelligent layman as well as for the student of science. Each year I am impressed by the apparent indifference of editors and educators to this splendid educational opportunity.

Superintendents, principals, and teachers generally are either unaware of the splendid opportunity at their very door or are buried alive in the tombs (or tomes) of the past and have no interest in the light and warmth of current progressive thought, otherwise the 15,000 or more senior high school students in the city and its immediate environs would be eager to see and study the exhibit which always is open to the public for three afternoons and evenings. These schools might well close their doors on the last day, always on Monday, and accept a visit to the Carnegie Institution in place of attendance at school. Three hours spent in studying the exhibits would be worth more as an educational stimulus to an intelligent high school boy or girl than a whole week of the usual classroom activities.

My plea is that all educational agencies, newspapers included, give a little more attention to such educative programs as the Carnegie Institution offers the public each December. O. J. SCHUSTER.

Through Traffic Routes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We hear again the discussion of converting the right of way of the W. B. & A. Railway into a super highway. This is desirable, but this highway should be used by interstate truck and bus traffic. The greatest impediments to speed on through highways are large interstate trucks and buses. These should be compelled to use special highways and charged for the service given.

As was proposed by Mayor E. C. Davidson of Alexandria, Va., a high level bridge should be constructed from Alexandria over the Potomac River and continue on Southern avenue to Seat Pleasant, Md., where the connection with the new highway over W. B. & A. right of way could be made. The grades on this right of way are very low and are ideal for heavy commercial vehicles. The bridges are designed for heavy loads and will carry the heavy truck.

This will keep the interstate commercial traffic and other through traffic out of Washington, which will reduce our traffic congestion and protect the properties contiguous to our arterial highways.

To the Editor and Staff of The Post: In appreciation of your good paper which I read daily, I take the liberty of sending you the following lines:

That nothing ever shall befall

Analyses of Main's Victory in Michigan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your news account of the Third Michigan District by election does not compute the shift.

Of the Republican and Democratic votes combined, Mr. Main received 68 per cent, as against 55 per cent for the Republican in 1934 and 51 per cent in 1932. The Republican-Democratic vote, however, dropped from 95,476 in 1932 and 74,515 in 1934 to 36,468 in the bye-election. If the Townsend plan debate got to the polls some who in its absence would have abstained from voting, it would seem to be good psychology to guess that substantially more of these were pros than antis, the latter traditionally harder to rouse. As Senator Vandenberg remarks, many anti-New Dealers may have preferred to accept Mr. Main in spite of the astronomical pension mathematics rather than send the Democratic New Dealer to Washington.

Under these circumstances how much of a scare is justified from an election in which the Townsend organization polled only 24,837 votes in a district which gave the Republican 49,383 in the Roosevelt landslide of 1932?

FRANK W. NOXON.
Washington, Dec. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An analysis of the vote in yesterday's special election in the Third Congressional District of Michigan is very interesting. The district is composed of five counties—Branch, Calhoun, Eaton, Hillsdale and Kalamazoo. Main, the Republican candidate, received a total vote of 24,686, and Cavanagh, Democrat, received a total vote of 11,342, giving Main, Republican, a plurality of 13,344.

In 1928, Hoover received a total vote in these five counties of 71,598, while Smith received only 17,159, giving Hoover a plurality of 54,437. In 1932 the same five counties gave Hoover a total vote of 51,221 and Roosevelt a total of 48,523, or a plurality for Hoover of 2,698.

The total vote cast in yesterday's special Congressional election in Michigan was 36,028, which is only 36 per cent of the total vote of 99,744 cast in the Presidential election of 1932.

I am submitting these figures to enable some political mathematician to analyze their significance. They are too much for me. Page Charlie Michelson. W. A. R.

The Post Impressionist

England's Mark Twain

Post Office, Saturday.

AN overrated British wit once said of his fellow-countrymen and us Americans:

"We have everything in common—except, of course, the English language."

He was wrong—as usual. He should have added many exceptions to his one. He should certainly have added the differences between Albion's and our own manner of observing a hero's centennial.

Those differences were—or are—particularly evident in the celebration of the hundredth anniversary of Mark Twain's birth. Our celebration is over; Britain's is still going on.

Samuel L. Clemens' hundredth birthday occurred—though you've probably forgotten it—November 30 last.

The past week's library records show that, in America, demands for "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn" had become normal again—which is nevertheless to say large. The same records show that normal, too, were the demands for "The American Claimant"—which is to say zero. We understand that the only call made, this month, at the Congressional Library for "Pudd'nhead Wilson" came from a misinformed Central High School girl who said she was writing a composition on the Presidents of the United States.

Whereas, look at England: Over there people are keeping right on contributing recollections of Mark Twain to the Times. The Poet Laureate proposes "an anniversary memorial."

Take Sir Buckston Browne.

He, if we mistake not, was an eminent surgeon—before he retired to become an eminent literary amateur. He has combined a vice presidency of the solemn British Association for the Advancement of Science with a vice presidency of the frolicsome Dickens Fellowship. The few remaining readers of George Meredith may recall that "Lord Ormont and His Aminta" was dedicated to Sir Buckston.

Well, he thinks that Mark Twain's humor doesn't appeal to the young of today. But he thinks this is all wrong.

He writes of one encounter with Clemens:

"He convulsed us with laughter as, affecting great nervousness, he over and over again stammeringly attempted to address us. Among many stories, he told us of the young lady whose breath was so sweet it made her teeth decay, and finished up with a story on the lines of the old one of little George Washington, who cut down his father's favorite cherry tree, but could not tell a lie.

"Twain said that a similar story was going around about Gen. Butler. Gen. Butler's son cut down his father's favorite cherry tree. When taxed with the crime, the boy replied: 'Father, I cannot tell a lie—Jim Smith did it.' Gen. Butler replied: 'George, I had rather you told a thousand lies than cut down my cherry tree.'"

Sir Buckston doubts if "such jokes would go down nowadays, when not even 'Pickwick' is universally admired." We are sure it would anyhow be necessary to explain, in America, that the first name of the general referred to was Ben—not Smedley.

However, J. B. Booth, dramatic-critic and author of "London Town," is no skeptic. He tells how Clemens visited, in London, the father of a young American friend of Booth's, and how the hero-worshiping boy Booth there met the humorist:

"'Say,' he drawled, 'you don't know me as a poet, do you? Well, in Sydney, a cub reporter—guess he was trying for a scoop—asked me for a few lines of verse. I liked his infernal cheek . . . So I thought of topics of local interest: dodos, boomerangs, moas, larrikins, kangaroos, laughing jackasses . . . I paralyzed the cub with this.'

"And he handed me a cutting.

"Here it is, for all I know Mark Twain's only poem:

"'Come forth from thy oozy couch,
Oh, ornithorhynchus dear,
And greet with cordial cheer
The stranger that lingers to hear
From thy own, own lips the "tail" of thy origin all unknown,
Thy misplaced bone where flesh should be, and flesh where flesh should be bone."

John Masefield's proposal notes that "some of his (Mark Twain's) happiest days were passed upon a great river." So, with all the influence of his honorary office, the Poet Laureate asks:

"Might we not help to keep his memory green by placing on or near the London River, on Bridge or Embarkment, some bust or medallion of him? I feel sure that for many years to come such a memorial would be kept decked with flowers by those grateful to him."

But we wonder whether the Poet Laureate had read the ornithorynchus "poem" before making that suggestion. And we wonder whether were Mark Twain himself consulted, which he would prefer: to have the bust set up or to have the poem destroyed.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

He's The Last Word.

Rome, Dec. 20.

AFTER a while you begin to realize, perhaps with extreme reluctance, why the Italians regard Mussolini as the greatest man in the world.

Mussolini works. Mussolini is afraid of nothing. He takes full responsibility and makes no alibis, and his worst enemy cannot claim that he ever took a cent of graft for himself or knowingly permitted any grafter in a subordinate position in his government to get away with anything even remotely comparable to the notorious jobs of political larceny which adorn the records of the Tammany administrations in New York, the Thompson regime in Chicago or Warren G. Harding's rule in Washington.

If any of his appointees were to undertake anything like that, and Mussolini were to catch him, there wouldn't be any long Seabury investigation or "hung" juries. Mussolini would send him off to some island and keep him there as an enemy of Italy. In time of war Mussolini might shoot him.

• • • •

MUSSOLINI has no friend but Italy, and he sets a personal example which, if it were followed by every man and woman in the country, would make Italy the strong, brave nation he wants her to be. He doesn't smoke, and he has absolutely no use for alcohol, except an occasional glass of wine. He sleeps eight or nine hours a night, eats very little, gets plenty of exercise in the park which surrounds his house and wastes neither time on social idling nor nervous energy on hangovers. He absorbed about a pound of scrap iron in 50 some fragments all in one burst when he was serving as a private in the big war, and he was shot right through the nose by a wild Irish woman who drew a bead on him from the cover of the crowd one day. It must have been a terribly painful wound, but Mussolini gave the crowd a big wave of his hand, averting a wild riot or lynching and didn't even send the woman to jail. He just shipped her back to Ireland. He didn't go to bed to be sick but went on with his work.

Mussolini makes a one-man band look like a milk weed tramp scratching himself in the shade of a water tank and waiting for the freight train to come through. He is Premier, Foreign Minister and the last word in everything in Italy. He finds time in addition to attend to his baby-kissing and handshaking and to receive in the course of every year the most exasperating assortment of foreign sightseers, souvenir hunters and muscle feelers, most of them bores, that it would be possible to inflict on one man if you were to comb the world for them.

IN fact, they do represent the combings of the world, particularly of the United States, and they wriggle through his defense somehow for no more important purpose than to ask him stupid questions that have been answered a thousand times in his own speeches and writings and in his biography or to ask for his autographed picture. He gives away a lot of pictures, too—big ones on expensive paper about two feet square—charging it up to exploitation like any ham in Hollywood.

Fluttering, prattling females, the kind who are always going to carry a message back to America to second string politicians who would have a hard time getting into a first-class hotel in Rome, and assorted dopes and imposters drawn from all nations who manage to get through to Mussolini somehow each consume from five minutes to half an hour of this busy man's day.

And yet he gives them civil treatment and sends them away happy, futile and more garrulous than ever when it must take the entire supply of his self-control to refrain from punching the buzzer and ordering one of his wrestlers to toss this pest downstairs and then lock the door.

• • • •

TO be sure, fascism is wrong if you don't like fascism, but this is Italy and there is abundant evidence that Italy likes it. In Italy, therefore, Mussolini is a great man, who knows he is great and who has the bland self-appreciation to set himself up as a model and to say to the Italians:—"Be like me and you are all right."

But the trouble is nobody can be like Mussolini. Millions of them try, but the most that the very best of them can do is to resemble him slightly around the edges. His successor isn't even in sight, and Mussolini knows it as well as anybody.

So he is preparing to succeed himself after he is dead by setting up his own character as the ideal of the Italian nation—an ideal of true service, work, self-denial, patriotism and strength.

The Santee Project

Iowans Pour Letters Into Ickes' Office Protesting Ruination Of Vast South Carolina Game Refuge For Political Purposes.

By Hilding Siverson.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Des Moines.

GARDEN CLUB officials, Audubon Society folks, members of the Wild Life Institute and of the Izaak Walton League here and there all over the country are taking up cudgels, corncobs, brickbats and rusty tin cans to hurl in the general direction of Secretary Ickes because of his presumed defense of the Santee River project in South Carolina. They are interested in it because it is a refuge for millions of wild ducks and other forms of wild life, and the project threatens their destruction.

Secretary Ickes, in turn, has become as irritable as a bear with a sore nose after a hard winter and is writing the most extraordinary long letters to those who criticize his policy.

His irritation doubtless is due to the fact that he has caught his pants on political barbwire and is having trouble in going over the fences. It seems that President Roosevelt has laid out a course for him in the Santee project which is based entirely upon politics, and, of course, that would irritate any true conservationist like Secretary Ickes, but when he has to face the barrage of his old pals, the dyed-in-the-wood conservationists who come snorting in hundreds and thousands, and when he must front for an obvious political deal, it wears his nerves ragged, and who can blame him?

Those who have been fighting the battles of wild life conservation in and out of season for decades seem to be practically unanimous against the Santee project, unless they belong to the New Deal organization. At least, if any conservationists outside the New Deal setup are in favor of it, they have kept mighty quiet.

• • • •

AMONG those who are writing unsympathetic letters to the long-suffering Secretary are Mrs. Fae Huttenlocher, secretary of the National Council of Garden Clubs, and Jay Darling, former chief of the United States Biological Survey. Both happen to live in Iowa. It should be said, however, that Mr. Darling's letter was merely a reply in self-defense to a bitter one of Secretary Ickes. Darling's heavy work opposing the Santee project had been done previously, while he was in Washington attempting to co-operate with the Secretary. But even in self-defense, Mr. Darling writes an entertaining letter. Like others, it has been mimeographed and sent broadcast, so is really a matter of more or less public knowledge. Here are excerpts:

"I didn't promote or 'allow' my name to be used in connection with the Santee-Cooper letters. I have had too much experience during the last year and a half in Washington in my own department trying to keep up with the mail to inflict any postcard campaign on you. I am, however, proud to be quoted as openly and violently opposed to the Santee-Cooper project, and my opposition is not based upon sentimentality for the ducks. It is based upon repeated examinations and investigations, both biological, ecological and economic, selections from which you have in your files and which have been plastered in every department of Washington where they might have any effect.

"If they want South Carolina to have $25,000,000 to satisfy their congressional delegation and elect Jim Byrnes, why don't they give them the $25,000,000 for free distribution to their constituents instead of building a power plant which they don't need and which will destroy 105 square miles of the most productive biological area remaining on the Atlantic Coast? Or, if they want to control the electric supply, they can buy up the existing power plants for less money than it will take to complete the Santee-Cooper project.

"Why don't you get mad at the people who are responsible for this damned thing instead of excoriating the conservationists who are making the only kind of protest they know how?"

• • • •

THE original letter from Mrs. Huttenlocher which so stirred up the Secretary was of the usual type, urging conservationists to write him in protest against the project. John H. Baker, executive director of the National Association of Audubon Societies, and J. N. Darling were quoted in support of her stand, which was entirely nonpolitical in tone, though sharply critical.

Mr. Ickes wrote Mr. Darling in peevish vein, and also dictated a long letter to Mrs. Huttenlocher, containing such passages as these:

"I am particularly interested in the statement that you urge your correspondents to repeat to me, to wit, 'You cannot very well stand before the country as a conservationist and at the same time approve any such project.' This strikes me not so much an argument against the project as it is a deliberate, malevolent attack upon me.

"Your letter also assumes that I am responsible for the project and have it within my power to prevent its going forward. What is your authority for such assumption as that? . . . May I ask whether you think that it is fair to attribute blame to another before first assuring yourself that blame is due? . . .

"This constitutes a poisonous attack upon me as a conservationist much more than it does a protest against the Santee-Cooper project . . . I will say, however, that I am too truly a conservationist to join in a carefully planned plot to tear down by insinuation and innuendo another conservationist, who, within the limits of his ability, has done and is doing everything that he possibly can in the interests of conservation."

IT may be read between the lines that possibly Mr. Ickes, because of his devotion to conservation, doesn't approve of the Santee project, after all, but what can the poor man do when a $25,000,000 project is to be built to give employment to people so that Senator Jim Byrnes, devoted New Dealer and applauder of President Roosevelt's famous horse-and-buggy statement, might win the nomination instead of one of the Blease boys (not Cole) who started on Byrne's trail to vindicate South Carolina's traditional loyalty to States' rights?

That's what all the shooting is about, gentlemen. Choose your weapons and name your poison. All American taxpayers are interested in whether $25,000,000 of Federal money is spent for the sole purpose of renominating an Administration henchman, and they also are interested in maintaining the final refuge of the wild turkey, a great sanctuary for bear, deer, ducks and other wild life, which will be destroyed or practically driven out if the Santee project is completed.

It would be worth $10 of any man's money to know Mr. Ickes' actual opinion of President Roosevelt's boondoggling political machinery. But let's be patient with him, for he is thoroughly unhappy.

Grandson of 'T.R.' Hurt in Auto Crash

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Dec. 20.—Kermit Roosevelt, jr., 20-year-old grandson of former Theodore Roosevelt, and a companion were injured in an automobile accident today.

Both he and William Burnham, his 20-year-old classmate at Harvard College, suffered slight concussions of the brain when their automobile skidded into a tree and was demolished.

Roosevelt and Burnham were taken to the latter's Brookline home after several hours in a hospital.

Two months ago Kermit protested to newspapermen covering his arraignment for speeding at Worcester that he didn't believe he deserved "a lot of publicity" because of the auto mishaps of those "other Roosevelts."

The "other Roosevelts" to whom Kermit referred are the Harvard student sons of President Roosevelt, John and Franklin, jr.

Tampa's Tactics

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

The Boys Went Too Far

JOSEPH SHOEMAKER called himself a "Modern Democrat." Had he lived in California instead of in Florida, the meeting which he and his friends were attending one day might very well have been for the purpose of discussing Upton Sinclair's utopian plan for ending poverty in California. Instead, they sat around, formulating plans for better treatment for the unemployed of their neighborhod, many of whom were subsisting on WPA wages of $7.50 a week.

Being human, they thought this rather unnecessary in a city where thousands of dollars change hands almost daily over the roulette wheels which, as well as the climate, attract Northern visitors to the land of the palm. These "Modern Democrats" dreamed of social reforms and were moved by moral indignation, rather than any keen understanding of the economic setup under which they lived.

Because, like other minorities in history, they made themselves heard, the Babbitts of Tampa were distinctly annoyed. So they spread the word around that these "Modern Democrats" were undesirables, were communists, in fact, and shoud be driven out at the end of a lash. On the day of this meeting, in a private home, the feeling against them was running high, but they felt fairly secure, for they knew they were violating no constitutional law by getting together and talking things over. And then the cops broke in.

JOE Shoemaker, Sam C. Rogers, and E. F. Pulnot were taken to the police station, charged with "suspicion of communism," questioned, and quickly released. As they left the building they were "invited" into automobiles, one driven by a city detective, on the ruse that they would be taken home. One refused. There was a struggle. A crowd gathered. The three, were taken to the woods near Tampa, beaten with rawhide whips and chains, tarred and feathered. Not a very nice thing to have happen, savoring, as I have heard many say, more of sadistic Germany than of progressive America.

Had Shoemaker been a Negro the indignation that has been reported as being expressed even in Florida might have been somewhat tempered, but he was not. And so six policemen are now being held on a charge of murder. The reason is not hard to find. William Green threatened to withdraw the A. F. of L. convention from Tampa if "something was not done." Others, including Norman Thomas and the pesky Civil Liberties Union, have made a lot of noise. So far the American Liberty League has not offered its services, even if the invasion of the house where the meeting took place was seemingly ag'in the Constitution.

PERHAPS Florida has really been stung into action. It seems incredible, but so far the moves against the vicious mobsters have taken a more direct course than is usual in the semitropic climate of that State. It is smarting under the attacks from the rest of the country, being as far, as criticism is concerned, more tender-skinned than one of its own oranges. So upset were some of Tampa's ministers that, last Sunday, they held a "service of public penitence" in their churches, a fine and honorable and Christian thing to do.

Had poor Shoemaker not died of his lashings, the policemen perhaps would not have been held to account for their unlawful and indecent part in the vicious attack. Cynically, the Fort Meyers News Press remarked, before death healed the "Modern Democrat's" wounds, that the public outcry demanding punishment for the perpetrators "was for the record." Magnanimously the voice of Fort Meyers added that "the boys went too far."

• • • •

BUT Shoemaker is dead. And the cops are charged with his killing. And America looks toward Florida, wondering whether punishment will be meted out to them as inexorably as they stood that day and watched three men dragged to the tar pot. Sergt. C. A. Brown and Patrolmen Bridges, Switzer, Crosby, Carlisle and Chappell—their names should be remembered as those who, sworn to uphold the law, let the sadists rule with chain and whip.

Istanbul Darkened By First Air Drill

By the Associated Press.

Istanbul, Dec. 20.—Lamps ornamenting minarets and mosques in celebration of the fasting Mohammedan month of Ramazan were snuffed out tonight and Istanbul was plunged into darkness for its first air-raid drill.

Strident blasts from sirens preceded the blackout and ambulances dashed through the streets to pick up the imaginary "wounded."

Fire companies clattered to points where fuses, representing incendiary bombs, were dropped from the airplanes.

(Diplomatic circles in Paris reported today that Turkey had assured Great Britain, along with Greece and Yugoslavia, that it would adopt precautionary military measures against any possible Italian attack because of sanctions.)

Longshoremen Score a Victory In Strike Vote

Stevedores at Mobile Ballot to Let A. F. of L. Unit Arbitrate Dispute.

By the United Press.

Mobile, Ala, Dec. 20.—The International Longshoremen's Association today won a sweeping victory in its three-month labor strife, when Mobile stevedores voted, 961 to 19, to permit the American Federation of Labor affiliate to represent them in contract negotiations.

The vote virtually wrote the final chapter in labor unrest which has gripped this and other east Gulf ports since the I. L. A. strike was called October 11.

Following the election, agreements were signed by the Mobile Steamship Association, the I. L. A. and the Mobile Benevolent Association, independent union, which formerly held contracts with shippers here.

The balloting today was supervised by Dr. George S. Stocking, of Texas University, chairman of a Federal mediation board, and by Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Under the new agreement, members of the independent union will be absorbed by the I. L. A.

Dr. Stocking said tonight that the I. L. A., chosen in the balloting, has agreed to contract with shippers on the same terms as formerly in effect with the Benevolent (Independent) group.

The new contract, he said, will run for two years with the stipulation either shippers or labor representatives may bring up any controversies for discussion at the end of the first 12 months.

Uniform Interest Is New Bank Plan

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation will issue shortly new regulations fixing maximum interest rates for insured banks the same as those for the Federal Reserve System.

After a meeting of representatives of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks, officials of the insurance corporation said yesterday its membership would make interest payments at the new rates.

Federal Reserve regulations now fix these maximums:

Two and one-half percent on savings deposits; time deposits having a maturity of six months or more, and on postal savings which constitute a time deposit.

Two per cent on time deposits, except postal savings, having a maturity date less than six months but not less than 90 days.

One per cent on time deposits, except postal savings, having a maturity date of less than 90 days.

Key Men Watched In Mexican Crisis

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, Dec. 20.—The government of President Lazaro Cardenas drew a tight ring of surveillance tonight around former President Plutarco Elias Calles, and Luis Morones, labor leader and close friend of the one-time "iron man," to forestall any possible action following the seizure today of large quantities of arms and ammunition in a house owned by Morones.

Both Calles and Morones denied again tonight they had any revolutionary plans, but it was announced that Morones admitted possession of the arms, including 24 machine guns, saying they were to be used in anticipation of a possible attack during a scheduled anti-Calles demonstration Sunday.

Six men were arrested following the seizure of the weapons and ammunition. One of them was reported carrying machine guns into the house.

Bonsal Dips Into Past To Picture Lawrence

Great War Correspondent Delves Into Memories of Stirring Days to Conjure Up Mental Snapshots of Mighty Man of Arabia.

Luncheon was over and the tall man at the host's left lighted his cigar; not the cigar his host had offered, but one he had brought with him. He explained, in a rich and cultured voice, that he had been partial to that type of cigar ever since the Philippine Insurrection and could smoke nothing else.

"The habits of an old man," he said, a smile lighting his dark, lean face. Involuntarily he reached for his left eyebrow, tugged at it for a moment. When he let his hand drop one saw that it was an eyebrow that looked as if it had been continually tugged at, by a man who had spent his life in a library poring over books. But, when he spoke, one knew instinctively that there was a man of action, and no bookworm—one who had seen things in his day.

He had been asked to that luncheon to talk about Lawrence; to tell, in his old-school words, of that little man of mystery who had spurned the world for fighting, who was always battling for a cause, who had helped shape the destiny of nations through his warring, and who had died, one day, from a minor accident that happened while he was riding a bicycle along a hedgerowed path in England.

Three Snapshots.

Lawrence of Arabia became a living person again from the lips of Stephen Bonsal, last (one might say) of the great war correspondents, at least the last of that school which followed the fighting and saw the blood and thrilled to all the action and smoke and crying in wars that may have had some meaning.

He saw that great, meaningless World War, too, but as an officer and not as a reporter. No, the days of his questing were in simpler times, when he could follow the armies hither and yon and write of the movements of troops and the commands of officers and not be worried by what lay behind it all.

When Stephen Bonsal talked one saw Lawrence thrice. That is, one saw him when he was an unknown clerk; when he was sitting with the mighty men forming the peace that is now ending; when he was asking nothing and was just a small man in a shiny blue suit walking on St. James street in London. Three snapshots and yet, in their way, a portrait.

Bonsal began his long trek that was thrice to cross the path of Lawrence of Arabia. He would not say how many years ago. But he was young then, not long out of St. Paul's School in New Hampshire, studying and dreaming and drinking Munchener in Heidelberg, Bonn and in Vienna. Even then he had his hope of following armies and writing their news. He had known and talked with his hero—now hardly a name—Aloysius MacGahan, perhaps the greatest of American war correspondents, whose words had flared between '71 and '79 and who had died of typhus that later year while watching the Russian army fighting for the Czar.

19 Years' Service.

James Gordon Bennett, known as The Commodore or as Tiger Jim—depending upon his mood—was at that time owner of the New York Herald, that penny paper which loved war and action, the same paper that sent Stanley into darkest Africa to find Livingstone. Bonsal wrote for this journal, hoping that the word might come, some day, that would let him follow the footsteps of the great MacGahan. It arrived at last. When feeling between the Bulgarians and the Serbians flared into warfare, he was sent to cover the fighting.

From then on in the Balkans, in Spain, in Cuba, in the Philippines, in France, in the Far and Near East, he has seen the violence of nations.

"I guess the South African war is the only one I missed," he said, the other day, sort of sadly.

Those sharp brown eyes of his, so alive under the shaggy eyebrows, watched the hordes of battle face one another on fronts in Morocco, in Macedonia, in Mexico, in Cuba and in the Philippines between 1885, when he filed his first war dispatch, and 1904, when he covered the Russo-Japanese conflict.

He literally jumped from one uprising to another, and learned the histories and languages and the national hatreds of East and West. He became intimate with the troublesome Balkans, scurrying from Albania to Macedonia to Montenegro with his notebook. In 1907 he saw revolution in Russia, which he was to see again in 1931 over a 10,000 mile Soviet front.

The West Indies and most of South America came into his ken, too, and for more than a year he followed the course of the Madero revolution in Mexico for the New York Times. Then for awhile, beginning in 1893, he was in the diplomatic service at Pekin, Madrid, Tokyo, Korea. Later he was to serve his government in the Philippines and it was on his way back from that outpost, whence he had gone on a special mission to Mexico, that he found himself in Egypt.

He was coming home. Collier's magazine had called him and he was again the newspaperman, headed this time, in 1915, for the Eastern front. There he was to serve for months as a correspondent. It was in Cairo that he met a man with shining eyes. This man was only a clerk. For the British intelligence service he was editing, if you could call it that, the "Arab Bulletin," which meant that methodically he was collating information from the Arab sectors.

Bonsal got to know him fairly well. Not intimately, mind you, but well enough so that years later and miles away Lawrence was to remember him.

"I knew then he was going ahead," says Bonsal. "He was an impressive, simple soul. I only saw him two or three times, but we had much in common, especially Morocco and the Moors."

With the A. E. F.

Well, that impressive simple soul did get far ahead, and many things changed, and back from the Hindenberg front came Bonsal to go, a year later, back into Europe with the A. E. F. as a major. And then the war ended. What part in this ending the military genius of Lawrence of Arabia played the historians have not yet decided, perhaps never will.

In 1918 Bonsal met Lawrence once more. He tells of this second meeting in his own words in the article accompanying his hitherto unpublished letter from the mystery man of Arabia. It was perhaps their most dramatic and colorful meeting, there at the peace conference. But perhaps the most significant meeting was four years later.

Bonsal was walking along James Street one day. He was alone. A little man in a shiny and thin blue suit was walking on that street. He was so small as to be lost, almost, among the others there. But he was a big man, and Bonsal, who says he could not at that moment possibly help Lawrence or his Arabs in any way at all, as he could in Paris, was rather startled when this man about whose exploits all the world was talking stopped to greet him.

Bonsal was pleased, flattered, even, to be hailed by this shabby man. And so they stood there, and talked, and recalled the past in Cairo and the past in Paris, and then they went their ways. Lawrence went on to his studies, to his recollections, to his translations, to his death. Bonsal was to come back to America, to Washington, to his memories and his work.

Most treasured of his memories are those three of Lawrence. He does not boast about them, but they are vivid. And sometimes he will say, not because Lawrence has reached fame (for Bonsal has known all the famous warriors of his day) that perhaps the greatest man he has ever known and loved was Lawrence.

He says that, because Lawrence, upon three occasions, outshone his fellow men in very human ways before that other adventurer with the shaggy eyebrows, who has spent a lifetime watching heroes amidst the violences of the world.

Treasury Lists Pay-Roll Data Needed for Tax

No Special Form of Records Required by Unemployment Levy.

By the Associated Press.

The figures the Government requires from employers in connection with collection of the 1 per cent Federal unemployment insurance tax on pay rolls, effective January 1, were prescribed yesterday by the Treasury Department.

"No special form of pay-roll records is prescribed," the department said in explanation of its order.

"Records must be maintained, adequate to show the gross pay roll and the total taxable pay roll, as well as the number of persons employed from time to time.

"No records of amounts paid to particular employes are required. Employers claiming to be exempt from the tax should keep records to establish their exemption."

Social Security Board officials have said that no tax will be collected before January 1, 1937. Up to 90 per cent of the Federal tax may be deducted to cover payments to State unemployment insurance plans.

Keep Permanent Records.

"(a) Every person subject to tax under the act shall, during the calendar year thereafter, for each such calendar year, keep such permanent records as are necessary to establish:

"(1) The total amount of remuneration payable to his employes in cash or in a medium other than cash, showing separately, (a) total remuneration payable with respect to services excepted by section 907 (c), (b) total remuneration payable with respect to services performed outside the United States, (c) total remuneration payable with respect to all other services.

"(2) The amount of contributions with respect to employment during the calendar year paid by him into any State unemployment fund showing separately, (a) payments made and not deducted (or deductible) from the remuneration of employes, (b) payments made and deducted (or deductible from the remuneration of employes, (c) payment made with respect to services excepted by section 907 (c).

"(3) Such other information as will enable the commissioner to determine whether such person is subject to the tax and, if subject to the tax, the amount thereof.

Method of Accounting.

"(b) No particular method of accounting or form of record is prescribed. Each person may adopt such records and such method of accounting as may best meet the requirements of his own business, provided that they clearly and accurately show the information required above, and enable him to make a proper return on the prescribed form.

"(c) Records are not required to show the number of individuals employed on any day, but must show the total amount of renumeration actually paid during each calendar month and the number of individuals employed during each calendar month or during each lesser period as the employer may elect.

"(d) Any person who employs individuals during any calendar year, but who considers that he is not an employer subject to the tax, should be prepared to establish by proper records (including, where necessary, records of the number of persons employed each day) that he is not an employer subject to the tax."

U. S. Mistakes of Boom Years May Recur, Siegfried Warns

Conviction that the American crisis is over was voiced yesterday by Andre Siegfried, one of the foremost French economists, whose book, "America Comes of Age," produced a genuine sensation on both sides of the Atlantic a decade ago.

The tide of optimism seemed to him to be running so strongly that he ventured a doubt as to whether the old mistakes might not be repeated in a new era of prosperity.

Prof. Siegfried, who is a member of the faculty of the College de France, will speak at the Town Hall on Sunday night. Long recognized as a leading authority on economic questions, not only of his own country, but of Great Britain and the United States, he attracted widespread attention and interest a few years ago by a series of articles upon British economic conditions published in the Times of London.

In response to a question as to contrasting British and American methods of dealing with depression, Prof. Siegfried said:

"Personally, I feel that an unbalanced budget is dangerous. On the other hand, however, I feel that America is sufficiently strong economically to withstand the strain and is, in fact, already coming out of it. In direct contrast to the American way is the fashion in which the British have handled their problem. They have balanced their budget and established the dole for the unemployed.

"Like you, the British have, to a certain degree, also experienced a recovery. But they have to a large extent lost their foreign markets, and this fact sets a limit to the extent of any possible recovery for them. America, by contrast, has always her own vast home market, which she can expand.

"Fundamentally, I do not believe," continued Prof. Siegfried, "that the present crisis in your country has ever had as much significance as has been attached to it both here and abroad. Your country is still so young that it is able to take up the slack and go forward under conditions which would break down older countries having to go through your experiences of the past five years.

"I have been traveling throughout your country for the past two months and I have everywhere sensed a feeling of recovery. To be sure, I do not know whether this is a genuine recovery or whether it is an improvement induced by vast Government expenditures. But everywhere I have been, in the industrial East, in cities like Detroit, in the farming belts of the Middle West, the spirit of optimism manifestly prevails."

This is Siegfried's sixth visit to the United States. He came first in 1898, when he was traveling around the world, studying the United States, Canada and the Far East. On a later visit he came with his father, who was, at that time, a member of the French Cabinet. During the war he crossed the Atlantic as secretary general of a French Mission headed by Gen. Pau, who had commanded a French army at Alsace, whence Siegfried's family came from originally, in the early days of the conflict. Upon his last visit in 1925, Siegfried toured nearly every State in the Union for the Musee Sociale, at whose request he wrote "America Comes of Age," as a part of a series of volumes analyzing post-war conditions in the leading countries.

Radio Returns 19 Boys, Girls To Homelands

Sons and Daughters of Diplomats Are Made Happy.

Radio got 19 boys and girls back to their homes in distant foreign lands for Christmas yesterday.

They were the sons and daughters of diplomats in Washington who broadcast Christmas greetings to the United States and the world from the Mayflower Hotel in the National Broadcasting Co.'s annual international children's party.

The program was arranged by the Greater National Capital Committee and the Board of Trade. It went to the Nation on the standard broadcast band and to Europe and South America and across the Pacific by short wave. The children were dressed in native costume, they spoke in their own language and in English and the Marine Band played national anthems of all nations represented.

Olmedo Alfaro, son of Senor Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, Minister of Ecuador, slipped into his Christmas message a plug for improved trade relations between his country and the United States. It was:

"You American boys and girls are very fond of chocolate and it will interest you to know that my country produces the best quality of cocoa with which it is made . . . On the other hand there are many things manufactured in the United States. I wish you a very happy Christmas."

Teresa de Yrujo, daughter of Senor Don Luis M. de Yrujo, Minister of Spain, hoped Santa Claus would forget none of "his little children, including my new puppy for whom I have asked a baby bottle and a basket where he can sleep tight," to which she added a word of warning:

"You better not eat too much candy so that you may not regret it afterwards and spoil everybody's holidays."

Charles Francis Lombard, son of Lieut. Col. Emanuel Lombard, military attache of the French Embassy, sang a French song; Mark Mark-Wardlaw, son of assistant Naval attache of the British Embassy, Commander A. L. P. Mark-Wardlaw, told of coasting on Washington hills, skating on the Lincoln Memorial reflection pool; Sakiko Saito and Masako Saito, daughters of Hirosi Saito, Japanese ambasador, wishes everyone good luck and the "best Christmas yet."

Other nations were represented by Gloria Finot, niece of Enrique Finot, Minister of Bolivia; Pola Fotitch, daughter of Constantin Fotitch, Minister of Yugoslavia; Camilla Torr, daughter of Col. W. W. Torr, Military Attache of the British Embassy; Peter Sokolowski, son of Wladyslaw Sokolowski, Counsellor of the Polish Embassy; Charles Mahoney, son of Merchant Mahoney, First Secretary of the Canadian Legation; Yalonda Alfaro, daughter of Senor Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro, Minister of Panama; Melba de Bayle, daughter of Senor Dr. Don Henri de Bayle, Charge d'Affaires of the Nicaraguan Legation; Lottie Leitner, daughter of Herr Rudolf Leitner, Counsellor of the German Embassy; Mary Recinos, daughter of Senor Dr. Don Adrian Recinos, Minister of Guatemala; Guillermo Castillo Najera, son of Senor Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera; Marjorie Bertha Morgenstierne, daughter of Dr. Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, Minister of Norway. Man of Steel

By Mary M. Colum

A Review, Reprinted From The Forum.

NO DOUBT there will be found among the Marxists some who will have a word of praise for Henri Barbusse's "Stalin," for that the author was a sincere Communist will be weighed as sufficient reason to have his book praised. But if it is strange that an able journalist like George Seldes should write such a simple-minded work as "Sawdust Caesar" it is even stranger that the author of "Le Feu" should have produced this book.

The figure he presents is that of a robot, a party machine, and that the actual Stalin is no such thing is very evident from some quotations that are given from the dictator's letters. Very adroit, very clever indeed, are these letters written to the then dictator, Lenin—very adroit in their undermining of Trotzky, in the flattery of Lenin. If the reader will turn to page 137 and peruse the letter that Stalin wrote in March, 1921, about Lenin's plan for the electrification of Russia, he will get a very illuminating sidelight on the character of Stalin and his enmity to Trotzky.

• • • •

TROTZKY may be the rancorous and vain man described in this book, or he may be the brilliant, creative and self-sacrificing intelligence described by his own followers, but you have only to look at the two pictured faces, his and Stalin's, to perceive that Trotzky could never have a chance in the world against the possessor of that powerful, resourceful, unswerving, cunning face. But not a revelation of the character behind that tremendous countenance comes through in this book; it is all words, words—a eulogy that at times becomes almost satire, and it is not only a eulogy of Stalin but of his adherents, including that sinister personage, the head of the Ogpu, Menjinski. If the page in which Barbusse describes his discourse with this personage were removed from the context, one would really regard it as satirical. The head of the Ogpu explains how unjust, how absurd, in fact, it is to tax communism with indifference to human life, since its ultimate aim is to bring everyone in the world together and work for universal peace.

And, as for the treatment of prisoners,

Communists start from the double principle that transgressors of the common law are people who do not understand their own interests and are ruining their own lives and that the best thing to do is to impress this upon them.

• • • •

THIS is exactly what the Grand Inquisitor mournfully said to the heretics he was condemning or Cromwell said to the anti-Puritans; this is what Mussolini said to the anti-Fascists, what Hitler is saying to the anti-Nazis—the heads of these organizations seem of necessity to be convinced that everyone who does not adhere to them is a heretic and for his own good he has to be liquidated. Formulas and objects change, but the human mind and its workings remain as always.

• • • •

THE revelation of Lenin that comes out of Barbusse's "Stalin" is that of a man inflexible in defending the gospel he had received from Marx against all heretics and unbelievers. He had determination to suppress heresy at all costs in a manner that reminds one of the protagonists in the early Christian controversies: he split the Communist party in Russia in the interest of Marxian orthodoxy and he warred upon the Mensheviks as he warred upon the bourgeoisie.

But let us not delude ourselves: this is the type of man, this has always been the type who wins causes—this thoroughgoing dogmatist, endowed with high executive ability and a genius for leadership. Marx and Engels wrote the "Communist Manifesto," but Lenin implemented it. He was but 17 when his family received the news of the hanging of his brother for conspiracy, yet this youth perceived at once that the vague revolutionary program of the terrorists would lead only to failure, and so he adopted the hard-and-fast program of Karl Marx and in his miserable exile in many countries he worked out the application of the program.

Postlude . . . . By Ray C. B. Brown

Washington Choral Society presents its annual candlelight Christmas concert in the Church of the Epiphany, Friday afternoon, under direction of Louis A. Potter. Program: Portions of Bach's Christmas Oratorio, preceded by motets and carols. Chorus assisted by a chamber orchestra from the National Symphony and Adolf Torovsky, organist.

In the Church of the Epiphany at the twilight hour an audience assembled yesterday afternoon on the occasion of the Washington Choral Society's annual presentation of a musical service perparatory to the celebration of Christmas. Those who attended came in the spirit of reverence, and while they waited in the dimly lit edifice, illuminated only by flickering candles, their mood was deepened by the strains of carols and songs of worship from the organ.

The singing of "Holy Night" in the vestry by the chorus before its entry into the choir stalls, the intoning of carols and motets were but the preparation for the selections from Bach's Christmas oratorio, one of the earliest and loveliest compositions of its kind. Many are the composers who since his day have written oratorios of various types and on various subjects, but none ever has been able to reproduce exactly the same atmosphere of devotional joy.

From his deeply religious nature, Bach drew the power to impress upon his music the traits of sincerity. His writing was naive in sentiment, if masterly in technique, and this child-like simplicity, utterly without self-consciousness, entreats the heart of the listener. No one can hear his devotional music without being stirred by it, for its speaks with the absolute voice of conviction and faith.

The chorus sang the music honestly with a forthright earnestness. Of its merits or defects this is not the time to speak. One was gratified to hear as one of the soloists Charles Trowbridge Tittmann, who sings the music of Bach with understanding and authority.

Peak Appointment Urged by Lido Club

Appointment and promotion of local residents to District jobs was urged in a telegram sent the District Commissioners yesterday by the Lido Civic Club, urging Col. William L. Peak as Superintendent of District penal institutions.

Signed by Dante Galotta, secretary of the club, the telegram read as follows: "We advocate the appointment and promotion of local citizens for local positions. The Lido Civic Club of the District of Columbia indorses Co. William L. Peak for the position of general Superintendent of District of Columbia penal institutions."

The position now is held by Capt. M. M. Barnard, whose replacement by Harold E. Donnell, Maryland State Superintendent of Prisons, has been urged by the Board of Public Welfare. Col. Peak formerly was superintendent of the District Jail.

Murder Charged To 3 U. S. Sailors

By the United Press.

Balboa, Canal Zone, Dec. 20 (U.P.).—Authorities today announced filing of second-degree murder charges against three United States Navy enlisted men in connection with the beating to death of Corpl. James Wilton Ausborn, United States Marine Corps, December 7.

The sailors, who have been held aboard the U. S. S. Trenton, are C. M. Welbron, J. R. Cunningham and W. R. Ellis. Admiral Albert W. Marshall, chief of the Fifteenth Naval District, wrote civil authorities the men would be surrendered to Canal Zone police immediately.

Ausborn, whose home was at Henderson, N. C., died from a beating administered by the three sailors, who tried to escape while he had them under arrest following a drunken brawl in Panama City.

50 to Receive U. S. Jobs Here In Civics Study

Rockefeller Group Backs Project of Public Affairs Institute.

To permit 50 young university graduates each year to come to Washington to work in Government departments and learn the technique of administration, the Rockefeller Foundation has given the privately-organized National Institute of Public Affairs an $80,000 income for three years.

The gift was revealed last night by Frederick M. Davenport, chairman of the institute and former Republican member of the House from New York.

It followed by less than a week a $2,000,000 endowment to Harvard by former Representative Lucien N. Littauer to found a graduate school of government there.

Frankly jubilant, tall, brown-eyed Davenport, who left the House in 1933 after four terms, said:

"It seems to be a rising trend. Throughout the nation, people appear to be coming to the conclusion that the increasing complexity of government is requiring greater capacity for administration—and, therefore, greater technical training."

Davenport announced that trustees of the institute, in existence a little more than a year, would meet Monday at 11 a. m. at Investment Building headquarters to discuss ways of selecting the graduates to come here.

$10,000,000 Borrowed By New York for Relief

New York, Dec. 20 (AP).—The City of New York today borrowed $10,000,000 for relief purposes from the Chase National Bank at the lowest rate of interest so far obtained on such loans.

The issue of two-month certificates of indebtedness was sold at an annual interest rate of eight-tenths of 1 per cent. Earlier in the year similar certificates had been sold with the city paying at the rate of 1¼ per cent annually.

Toy Fund.

you think best, of course, but since it is sent in memory of a 5-year-old Pat, let it bring a touch of Christmas to some little girl.

"All good wishes for a successful campaign on behalf of the children, and the season's greetings to those who are running it."

With all the gifts, there is still urgent need for at least 2,000 more dolls, if the demand is to be met. Gifts should be sent to Post Toy Fund headquarters in The Post Building.

A woman of evident refinement and education came to the headquarters yesterday, tears in her eyes, saying:

"I am asking for the first time in my life, but I cannot bear to think of my three little girls going without a single toy this Christmas. Heretofore we have had a merry Christmas, but my husband died last spring, I lost my house, and I've had only partial work since that time."

Knew Joy of Giving.

She went away smiling:

"Thank you so much. In other years I knew the joy of giving. Now I find there can be an equal pleasure in receiving."

And yesterday came this letter:

"Since you are playing Santa this Christmas, please may we add just one more to your list. It is the first Christmas we've not been able to provide for our children.

"My husband is a painter and is out of work. I have two children, a boy 2 years old, and a little girl, 3 years old. My boy is in the Childrens' Hospital at present, but we are in hopes that he will be home by Wednesday.

"We are on the relief, so anything that you could send us would be more than appreciated."

Another family: Nine persons. Its income—$11 a week. And the oldest of the children, Nellie, 16, wrote to say she wished for help for Christmas gifts—anything at all—"that would make the children happy."

Washington has a full heart. May it overflow for Christmas.

Council Holds Budget Hearing At Alexandria

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Alexandria City Council last night held a public hearing on the tentative budget for 1936, in the corporation court room, with a small gathering of interested citizens. Practically all the city employes were present.

No action was taken. The proposed budget calls for $860,780, as against the budget for 1935 of $722,504. This means an increase of $138,276.

Attention was called to the increased valuation of real estate, amounting to $990,804.

The tax rate of $2.50 on real estate and $2.80 on personal property is expected to remain the same. Judge Lewis C. Barley suggested a reduction and asked City Manager E. C. Dunn to work out the estimated city expenses to permit it.

Apparent salary increases in the city working forces are in reality the restoration of cuts several years ago. There is no provision in the tentative budget for the restoration of the salaries of members of the city council. City Attorney Carl Budwesky called attention to the fact that city revenues last year exceeded the estimates by $35,000.

The Methodist Episcopal Church South will hold an impressive service at 11 a. m. tomorrow when 400 new hymn books will be dedicated as a Christmas memorial. The books will be presented at the chancel for dedication by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. John Paul Tyer, and will then be distributed throughout the church for use by the congregation.

The new hymnals have been given by individuals and also by a number of church school departments.

Each book bears an attractive decorative book plate and as the hymnals are presented, each group coming forward will sing a Christmas hymn.

John C. Cox was elected worshipful master of Andrew Jackson Lodge, No. 120, A. F. and A. M., at the annual convocation Thursday night, in Masonic Temple. He succeeds William H. Wood, who will be presented with the past master's jewel at the Andrew Jackson banquet next March.

William Lewis Allen was elected treasurer for his thirty-third term, while Oliver S. Stone was elected secretary for the fifteenth consecutive time.

Other officers elected were E. Gorman Ridgely, senior warden; H. W. Reid, junior warden; Harry P. Shaffer, senior deacon; Leonard Roland, junior deacon; Ray B. Cobean, senior steward; Robert C. Leachman, junior steward; W. D. Wicker, tiler, and John H. Trimyer, chaplain.

District Deputy Grand Master E. J. Zalanka, of District No. 1, paid an official visit to the lodge.

Howard Richardson, principal of Jefferson School, inaugurated a movement within that school for pupils to donate food for Christmas baskets to be given to 26 needy families. The names of the families were furnished by the Salvation Army and that organization will deliver the food.

A moving picture was shown at the school with a contribution of food as an admission ticket, each room making up a basket.

All schools here closed yesterday for the holidays, the public schools to reopen January 2.

The Episcopal High School, St. Mary's Academy, St. Mary's Parochial School and St. Agnes School will reopen January 6.

Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, will follow the established custom of placing a community Christmas tree at Prince and Washington streets, to be lighted Christmas Eve and remain lighted each night during the holidays.

A special feature this year will be singing of Christmas carols at the tree at 6:30 o'clock Christmas Eve, as the lights are turned on, by the Glee Club of Jefferson Elementary School, with selections by the Citizens' Band.

Commander Harry N. Jones, of the post, heads the committee, the other members are Past Commanders Sidney Weil and Everett Hellmuth.

Mrs. Louise R. Humphries, 38, wife of G. W. Humphries, died on Thursday night in the Alexandria Hospital. Besides her husband she is survived by one daughter, Miss Louise Humphries. The funeral will be at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the home, 426 Queen street, conducted by the Rev. Norman Roberts, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church. Burial will be in Bethel Cemetery.

Louis D. Bliss, School President, Weds Suzanne Warren in N. Y.

Founder of Electrical College Marries Business Associate, Former Registrar, in Simple Ceremony at Little Church Around the Corner.

Louis Denton Bliss, founder and president of the Bliss Electrical School at Takoma Park, Md., was married in New York City yesterday to Suzanne Warren, his business associate for more than a decade.

The bride for ten years was registrar of the school. Her age on the marriage license, according to the Associated Press, was given as 53, and his, 64.

It was Bliss' second marriage, his first wife, Mabel Stickney Bliss, having died three years ago.

Friends living in Takoma Park said last night they understood the ceremony was performed at 4 p. m. yesterday in the Little Church Around the Corner.

Bliss, the father of two children, is well known in Washington and in engineering circles throughout the country. He is a member of the Cosmos Club here, and for 12 years taught the Vaughn Bible Class of the Calvary Baptist Church. He held a directorship in the Takoma Park Bank and has served on the Takoma Park town council.

Before becoming registrar, Mrs. Bliss was employed for a number of years in the office of the school. She attended George Washington University and is a member of the Business Women's Club in Takoma Park.

Friends said they expected Mr. and Mrs. Bliss to return to Washington about January 1, after the wedding trip, and make their home in the Bliss family residence in Takoma Park.

Marriage plans were guarded from all but a few intimate friends. Miss Warren went to New York several days ago. Bliss left yesterday morning.

Wilkins Prepares Plane for Search

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, Dec. 20.—Sir Hubert Wilkins today supervised at Rio Gallegos the equipping of his plane for a search in the Antarctic for Lincoln Ellsworth, missing explorer.

The plane, flown from the United States by Dick Merrill and William Klenke, will have both floats and skis when it takes off from Magallanes, en route to Antarctica where Ellsworth dropped from sight nearly a month ago.

Sir Hubert expressed hope that Ellsworth will be found, calling attention to the fact that the explorer carried a food supply for 60 days.

Traffic Gains 24% On M.-K.-T. Railroad

New York, Dec. 20 (AP).—Matthew S. Sloan, chairman and president of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Lines, told directors at their meeting here today that December revenue is running 24 per cent ahead of last year.

Sloan, who has just returned from an extensive tour of the Katy System, said the average revenue per car is higher than it has been since October, 1931. This, he said, is due to the fact that "we are having a heavier movement of high-class commodities than we have had in years."

B. & O. Gross Makes Big November Gain

Baltimore, Dec. 20.—Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's gross revenues for November are estimated to have registered an increase of approximately $1,500,000 over the $10,306,319 reported for the corresponding month of last year.

Net operating income for November is expected to show an increase of around $500,000 compared with the $899,419 reported for the 1934 month. If maintenance expenditures had not been stepped up, the B. & O. would have carried through to net a larger percentage of increase in gross.

Million-Bale Limit On Cotton Contracts

New York, Dec. 20.—The board of Managers of the New York Cotton Exchange has voted to set the maximum limit of interest by any member, firm, or corporation, and his or its affiliations, at 1,000,000 bales for delivery in December, 1935, and in all months up to and including November, 1936.

Democratic Dinner Price Row Denied

By the Associated Press.

Democratic national committee officials acted last night to combat reports that Democratic clubs were objecting to paying the prices asked for the Jackson Day dinners to be held throughout the country January 8.

They issued a statement quoting Roger Taylor, of Jefferson City, Mo., as saying there would not only be a dinner that night in Kansas City but it would be one of the largest political rallies of its kind ever held in the State.

Previously, George B. Freeman, charter member of the Young Democrats of America, was reported to have objected to paying the $10 a plate charge suggested for Kansas City by the national committee on the ground the young people there could not afford it.

The high prcies were proposed by the national committee so that a part of the proceeds could help pay off the party's campaign deficit. Chairman Farley denied he knew of any "unfavorable" reaction to the high prices and said plans were going forward for dinners in more than a thousand cities.

Seven More Admit Guilt in Bombing

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 20.—Seven more men involved in acts of violence during a summer quarry strike here pleaded guilty in circuit court yesterday, making 14 in all, so pleading.

Nine of the 14 men received penitentiary sentences of 1 to 10 years, two were given six months in jail and three are yet to be sentenced. Those pleading guilty yesterday or earlier in the term but sentenced at this time, were Bernard Whittington, felony, one to ten; S. D. Santmeyer, felony, one to ten, out on bond until January 4; Dan Keyton, misdemeanor, six months in the county jail; Noah Burker, misdemeanor, six month; S. D. Santmeyer, misdemeanor, six months, out on bond until January 4; Bryan Foreman and Clarence M. Wood, each a misdemeanor, out on bond until January 4 for sentence.

The 16 men were involved in one or more of four explosions and bringing stolen dynamite into the State. Most of them are said to have been previous employes of a quarry company here, going out on a strike with a number of other employes some months ago. The bombings were directed at the plant through attempts to dynamite transmission lines.

Winchester Drops Tax Rate 15 Cents

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Dec. 20.—Boasting a $94,000 surplus accumulated during the last four years, this city will end the year in excellent financial condition, it was brought out during a discussion of the levy for next year by members of the city council. The budget was tentatively adopted Tuesday night.

It was agreed to lower the tax rate to $1.20, a reduction of 15 cents. Final approval of the budget was delayed until assurance was given that an item for traffic light maintenance, which had been killed, would be left open for further consideration at a public hearing January 7.

The budget provides for expenditures of $275,100, an increase over last year. After allowing for the reduced levy and transfer of $33,000 from the surplus, the city will start the new year with $61,000 surplus.

Uniform Allowance Urged for Attendants

Baltimore, Dec. 20 (AP).—Establishment of a uniform standard of maintenance allowance for attendants and other employes at State institutions is being considered by Col. Harry C. Jones, State employment commissioner. He said today he has asked heads of institutions for their views on establishing uniform schedules.

Willis R. Jones, counsel for the Maryland Classified Employes Association, has written the commissioner protesting against fixing a $15 maintenance rate for attendants at the Springfield State Hospital. The attorney contended that if such a ruling were allowed to stand, hundreds of employes at institutions would be deprived of protection of the merit system and "wholesale political appointments" would result.

Italian Consulate Saved.

Lima, Peru, Dec. 20 (AP).—An attempt was made to bomb the Italian consulate in Callao today. A policeman saved the building from damage by picking up the bomb, which exploded in his left hand. He was not seriously injured.

Welles Upholds Roosevelt Rule At Hyattsville

Cites Employment Gains, Farm Income Rise at Club Rally.

A strong defense of the policies of the Roosevelt Administration was advanced by Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles in an address before the Young Men's Democratic Club of Prince Georges County, Md., Thursday night at Hyattsville.

Pointing to the sharp gain in employment since 1933 and the large increases in farmers' income during that period, Welles declared that the country is now intrenched on a solid basis of recovery. Above all, he said, the American people now possess an optimism and a new psychology that could only have come from an inspired leadership.

Welles, in referring to the expenditures of the Administration, compared the economic depression with the crisis of a great war, and insisted that drastic means were necessary to cope with the situation.

Cites Instances.

"Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt and Wilson all were accused of putting the country in bankruptcy and disregarding the Constitution," the speaker declared. "Only those men who have sat in the White House and supinely watched the stream pass by have escaped this condemnation."

Welles praised the Civilian Conservation Corps, the security bill and the banking act, and delivered a scathing attack on the activities of the American Liberty League.

State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Prince Georges County, president of the Maryland Senate, spoke of the strong condition of the Democratic Party in the county and the valuable work of the various clubs.

Other speakers were M. Hampton Magruder, collector of internal revenue for the Maryland district; T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, and T. B. Cash, president of the Young Democrats' Clubs of Carroll County.

Delegation Introduced.

All six members of the county's delegation in the House of Delegates were present and introduced. They were Kent R. Mullikin, Democratic floor leader; Charles C. Marbury, Lansdale G. Clagett, Egbert F. Tingley, L. Harold Sothoron and John S. White. County Commissioners James B. Berry, Vinton D. Cockey and Harry W. McNamee also attended.

In submitting the report of the membership committee, Chairman Tingley said that 15 new members recently had joined the club. Chairman R. Earle Sheriff, of the social committee announced the next dance would be held Saturday, January 18, at the Beaver Dam Country Club.

Nominations of officers for 1936 as submitted by the nominations committee, Dr. John T. Maloney, chairman, were as follows: President, H. Winship Wheatley, jr., Hyattsville; first vice president, E. Nelson Snouffer, jr., College Heights; second vice president, Judge Louis Kutsch, Lanham; secretary, W. Waverly Webb, Hyattsville; treasurer, J. Robert Sherwood, Mount Rainier. Since no other nominations were made, the proposed group will be automatically elected at the January meeting. Snouffer and Kutsch will be the only new officers.

Wheatley presided over the meeting, which was attended by approximately 200 persons.

The first Christmas tree celebration of the Ardmore Community was held last night under the auspices of the Ardmore Improvement Association at the school.

Two Scientists Generate Virus Of Encephalitis

Discovery May Be Step for Control of Sleeping Sickness.

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 20.—Successful experiments in the propagation of encephalitis (sleeping sickness) virus by two bacteriologists of the University of Rochester School of Medicine and Dentistry was announced at the university here today.

Outcome of the research conducted by Dr. George Packer Berry, professor of bacteriology, and Dr. Jerome T. Syverton may be a significant step in combatting the disease which three years ago caused a serious epidemic in St. Louis, university authorities said.

The process is described by the two scientists in an article in Science, a medical publication, appearing today.

Dr. Berry said he and Dr. Syverton over a period of 18 months, have grown in living cells the virus of human encephalitis, termed the St. Louis type, "daily" strain. Conducting similar series of experiments in their laboratories at the Strong Memorial Hospital here, the two scientists successfully propagated the virus or germ for the first time outside the human body.

Dr. Berry described the work of himself and Dr. Syverton as merely "a first step." The experiments were conducted, he said, by obtaining virus from human patients and transferring it into tissue culture made with the tissue of mice.

Both scientists declined to predict what, if any effect, their discovery would have in the long fight to control or eradicate "sleeping sickness." According to the article in Science, their experiments are regarded by the medical world as "extremely significant."

Dr. Berry and Dr. Syverton both formerly were associated with the Rockefeller Institute in New York. Dr. Berry graduated from Princeton University in 1921 and from Johns Hopkins in 1925. He served at Johns Hopkins as resident house officer and assistant resident physicial and as an associate at the Institute of Medicine until he went to Rockfeller Institute in 1929. He joined the staff of the University of Rochester Medical School here in 1932.

Dr. Syverton was graduated from Harvard Medical School in 1931, was an interne at Duke University and spent two years in study of pathology and bacteriology at Rockefeller Institute. He joined the university staff here last year.

Hoover Supporter Denies Any 'Stunt'

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Dec. 20.—Leo Weinberg, Republican attorney of Frederick, today said his mention of Herbert Hoover as a possible candidate in Maryland's Presidential primary next May was "neither for self-glorification nor embarrassment of Mr. Hoover."

He answered a suggestion from Lawrence Richey, secretary to Hoover, that Weinberg's indorsement looked "like a stunt to get Mr. Hoover involved in the primary."

Weinberg said in answer:

"My letter was written as the expression of my personal opinion, and to register my dissent from those who oppose Mr. Hoover.

"At this time of national distress, my sentiments are such as to demand expression. The gravity of the situation justified me . . . in an attempt, feeble as it may be, to arouse public opinion in Maryland in behalf of that ideal statesman. . . . Herbert Hoover, whom I regard as one for our deliverance from irretrievable ruin."

Earl Maxwell Braves Snows To Aid Sister

Secures Affidavits of Two Denying She Menaced Life of Father.

By Virginia Lee Warren,

A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., Dec. 20.—Back to the Blue Ridge hills, hampered by driving storms that brought 8 inches of snow into the mountains and blocked the roads, Earl Maxwell returned today.

Four days of conferences with Richmond physicians, whose testimony, he hopes, may save his sister, Edith, from the 25 years in prison she now faces, lay behind him.

Late this morning, he saw again his sister in the gloomy jail cell that even his plentiful gifts have not been able to brighten.

"Edith was in as good spirits as you could expect," he reported.

Then again he took up his wearying task of collecting material for submission in an appeal to set aside the circuit court verdict that condemned Edith Maxwell to 25 years in prison for the murder of her father.

He was seeking affidavits from 14 neighbors, on one angle and another. Two affidavits, he disclosed today, would come from women who could deny that the girl ever threatened to kill her father. Both women, he said, were present at the moment when, according to the circuit court prosecution, Edith was supposed to have made the assertion that she could kill Trigg Maxwell.

Back to the home of his uncle, W. W. Dotson, defense counsel, went Earl Maxwell, the modest home that, in this little area, must of necessity be in the center of the town where the people still resent Earl's efforts in behalf of his sister.

He locked the doors of his uncle's sedan, in which he had driven from Richmond, and he said he did not know when he might return to the State capital. With him returned his aunt, Mrs. Flora Bryington, of Big Stone Gap, Va., and his cousin, W. W. Dotson, jr.

Edith Maxwell was still in jail last night, facing a Christmas in prison, an appeal that could not be filed earlier than mid-January, and time dragging on. The fund for her defense, being received by The Washington Post, rose to $734.08, with receipt of a $5 contribution from Spencer S. Wood.

Rates' Spread On Goods Cut By I. C. C. Order

North-South Differential of 10 Per Cent Allowed Under Ruling.

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized a broad readjustment of rates on cotton, woolen and knitting factory products in all territory east of the Rocky Mountains.

Of primary importance under the order were new rates authorized from Northern and Southern points to Midwest destinations.

The commission, in a 101-page opinion, allowed a general rate level from the South to Midwest points 10 per cent higher than the Northern level. It expressed the opinion that a differential relationship between Southern and Northern rates was not prejudicial to interstate commerce.

New England mills had challenged the 10 per cent differential as an unlawful rate disadvantage to them, contending it should be even greater in their favor. The majority I. C. C. opinion discussed the broad North-South rate question, but said that evidence showing the South had lower production costs on cotton textiles was excluded because it was a "part of the industrial problem as distinguished from the strictly transportation problem with which we deal."

The commission divided on the case, with Commissioners Lee, Mahaffe, Miller and Caskie dissenting.

In his opinion, Commissioner Miller said the spread between Southern and Northern rates should be "materially wider than those prescribed."

Under the commission's ruling, the carriers are not required to institute the new rates, but may do so if they desire.

Generally, rates nearer parity than those now in operation were provided.

On cotton piece goods, specifically, the spread between Northern and Southern rates was narrowed from 3 cents to 1 cent, with the order allowing an increase in the Atlanta-to-Chicago rate from 83 to 96 cents per 100 pounds and an increase in the Boston-Chicago rate from 86 to 97 cents.

For both Southern and Northern carriers, the commission authorized interterritorial rates 10 per cent lower for unfinished articles, or "gray goods," than for cotton piece goods. Formerly, no such reduction was authorized.

Browns Plan An Old-Time Yule Holiday

They Will Hold Program for Colored Children on Their Estate.

Katherine Carl, Artist, Will Be a Guest at 'Hollow Tree.'

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

An old-fashioned Christmas in the country is planned by Col. and Mrs. Wrisley Brown and their daughter, Miss Katherine Brown. They will spend the holiday at their country place, Hollow Tree Farm, in nearby Maryland. Col. and Mrs. Brown make quite a feature of Christmas in the country, because many colored children, born and raised on their place, look forward to the fun and the presents that are showered on them after the manner of the old plantation days.

With Col. and Mrs. Brown for the holidays will be Miss Katherine Carl, of New York. Miss Carl is an artist of note. Among her paintings, the most remarkable one is probably that of the Dowager Empress of China, painted some years ago. Miss Carl will spend only a few days here, for on December 27, Col. and Mrs. Brown and their daughter will leave for Canada to be at the famous Seignory Club until after the New Year. The club makes a great feast of the Yuletide season, for at that time the winter sports are at their best. Skating, tobogganing and other sports are pastime of the guests, and ice-skating carnivals are arranged.

The club itself is a great structure of logs, with six fireplaces in the lounge where guests gather in the evening for cards, or to dance. Others own cottages built like Swiss chalets in the mountains which surround the club.

It was in one of these chalets that Miss "Sunny" Robbins, daughter of the late United States Minister to Canada, Mr. Warren Delano Robbins, and Mrs. Robbins, and her husband, Mr. Alexander Cochran Forbes, spent a part of their wedding trip two years ago. The Minister and Mrs. Robbins were frequent visitors at the club, the distance from Ottawa being short.

Also spending Christmas at the Seignory Club will be Mrs John Henry Dwight and her daughter, Miss Mary Dwight, who left Washington yesterday for the holidays. They will return to their apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue on January 6.

The U. S. S. Helm is under construction at the Norfolk Navy Yard, and will be launched during the latter part of 1936.

Miss Belle Worth Bagley, of 2153 California street, has been named as sponsor for Destroyer No. 386 to be christened U. S. S. Bagley in honor of her brother, the late Ensign Worth Bagley, U. S. N.

No date has been set for the launching of this destroyer, which will be the third vessel named for Ensign Bagley, who was killed during the attack on the batteries at Cardenas, Cuba, May 11, 1898. He was the first officer to lose his life during the Spanish-American War.

Snappy Lining For Fall Coats Practical Gift

Sew on a Few Buttons and Presto!—You Are Ready for Winter Winds.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE CHRISTMAS season isn't just exactly the perfect time for being practical, but there are those of us who are just the same. We turn from foolish, frivolous gifts and choose instead something durable and usable.

One suggestion, which is bound to win the approval of the practical ones is nothing less than a coat lining. It's made of a gay plaid blanket material and has buttonholes all around the edge. The recipient has merely to sew buttons inside her coat and button on the lining. When bitter cold weather blows in upon us, the contributor of all of this will be the recipient of many grateful thoughts.

There are lots of heavy tweed fall coats that will be plenty snug enough for wintry days, when they've been buttoned on to a cozy lining.

Incidentally these little inside comforts cost but $2.95. You can buy silk ones with lambs' wool interlinings for $3.95.

Rain or Shine.

IT'S ENOUGH to make you bow and scrape to a rain god with earnest pleas for rain, those umbrellas in a local store! Believe it or not, they have a dual personality, not the Jekyl and Hyde kind that's a combination of good and bad. On the contrary, both personalities are equally to be applauded. On rainy days the umbrellas are just plain umbrellas, a little more attractive than most.

On other days a hard-cover composition material slips over the whole thing, leaving only the handle exposed. Now you have a peach of a walking stick!

At least a few of you must have put off that Christmas shopping till now and of course you're frantic. Maybe the fancy umbrella will be just the thing for somebody!

Novelty Hankies.

CHILDREN are likely to regard such gifts as socks, gloves, or handkerchiefs with a tinge of disappointment, whereas they will will clap their hands gleefully over a funny balloon, a musical top, or something of the kind.

It was theorizng along such lines that finally led a manufacturer to promote children's hankies in a way he knew would be appealing. So, out came the kiddie kerchiefs. They're attractively boxed and included with them is a folder of "Mother Goose" stationery. On the hankies themselves you'll find all sorts of animals appliqued.

Everything Plus!

A CERTAIN English cosmetic concern that has a far-flung clientele in this country reaches a new high in kits this season with one containing every thing but the kitchen sink.

There is a delightful face cream in an ivory container, a cleansing cream, a milk of lavender lotion for the hands, a wicker-covered bottle of lavender eau de cologne, a little bottle of smelling salts, talcum powder, skin tonic, bath tablets, sachets, a jar of sachet powder, rouge, powder, lipstick, compact, a wave set lotion plus an atomizer for spraying it on.

All these lovely things come in an ornamental blue figured box almost as large as a small bungalow itself.

Venetian Glass Toilet Set.

AN ARISTOCRAT of the toiletry world is the set of two creams and skin lotion put up in Venetian glass containers of a luscious powder blue. This is the holiday offering of a certain beauty specialist who caters to the woman with luxurious tastes.

After the creams and lotions are gone, remember you've still the beautiful containers to use however you please.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

A Modern Christmas Greeting

Artist Group Creates New Mode In Distinctive Christmas Cards

Reproductions of Famous Paintings Used to Symbolize Yule Spirit; Washington Cathedral Leads Way in Reflecting Spiritual Aspect of Season.

By Vylla Poe Wilson.

IT IS a far cry from the first Christmas cards of the early nineteenth century, hand-made by school boys with elaborate pen flourishes—and from the conventional Kris Kringle scenes of feasting and jollity which succeeded them, to the 1935 Christmas card designed by artists of distinction and given wide-spread circulation in the cause of promoting interest in American art.

Some time ago a group of American artists formed themselves into what is known as the American Artists' Group for the purpose of popularizing American art. It was felt that one way to achieve this was by the distribution of reproductions of worthy originals. The Christmas season, with its traditional association, seemed an appropriate time to institute this interchange between the American artist and the public.

Collection Stimulated.

Each year greeting cards are sent and received by millions of people, embracing every class and including many whose activities and interests are of such that they seldom come in contact with the work of artists. By making greeting cards which carry reproductions of significant American art to the public, it was the hope of the American Artists' Group to establish a contact beneficial to both.

The response to this new idea in Christmas cards has been gratifying. A unique development has been that many persons have taken up collecting of Christmas cards. The craze is spreading until it rivals that of the philatelist whose interest extends even to the lowly legal potato stamps. Perhaps some day an American will rank with the Englishman, Jonathan King, who, between 1862 and 1894, collected 700 volumes containing 163,000 varieties of Christmas cards, the whole collection weighing between six and seven tons. His collection now presents an illustrated history of the subject.

Noted Paintings.

Paintings of noted American women artists are included in the set distributed by the American Artists' Group. These range from the peaceful Christmas night scenes of Victoria Hutson, the "Circus Rider" card of Mabel Dwight, the mystic "Christmas Tumble Timbers" of Wanda Gag, to the ultra-modern trend in Peggy Bacon's "Belinda." Among other women artists represented in this year's Christmas cards of the American Artists' Group is Agnes Tait, whose paintings are widely sought.

Cards which draw their inspiration from the deeper spiritual significance of Christmas appear in increased numbers this year. In wide variety there are exquisite cathedral etchings and water colors, jewel-toned designs of medieval suggestion, including famous Madonnas.

Cathedral Sets Example.

The example in this direction was set by Washington Cathedral, which in the last ten years has distributed more than 7,000,000 Christmas cards reflecting the spiritual aspect of Christmas in picture and legend. It was inaugurated by Washington Cathedral after a conference of laymen with Bishop James E. Freeman, who called attention to the pagan character of subjects almost entirely unrelated to the true spirit of Christmas. The first year 25,000 cards were sent out as a test. This year more than 500,000 cards have been sent to friends of Washington Cathedral in all parts of the country and requests for them have come from most parts of the world.

A special demand has been for cards showing scenes from the cathedral itself. This Christmas card distribution has made possible the employment of many persons to handle the details and a special house had to be built to accommodate the Christmas card department of the cathedral offices.

One of the most popular of the Washington Cathedral Christmas cards this year displays on its cover the reproduction of the first bars of music of the hymn "Adestes Fideles." Other attractive cards in this year's collection of 12 are reproductions of Raphael's Sistine Madonna, Perugino's "Madonna in Adoration," Raphael's "Madonna Granduca," and his "Madonna Terranuova," Botticelli's "Madonna and Child," "The Nativity," by Fra Angelico and "The Birth of Christ," by Pederigo Barocci, while one cathedral card depicts the belfry of the Church of the Nativity at Bethlehem under which is the grotto where the Christ Child is said to have been born.

Parents Urged Not to Destroy Child Illusions

By Alice Clarissa Richard.

"DO you believe in Santa Claus, Sally?"

Six-year-old Sally squirmed uneasily and hesitated in replying. She had lately begun to realize that no matter how eagerly she watched, she never saw the old gentleman or his reindeer, nor any sign of reindeer hoof marks; that the hay which she put out for the reindeer every Christmas was untouched next morning; that daddy and mother gave to other people parcels suspiciously like those said to have been brought by Santa Claus. And yet she wanted to believe in the existence of such a wonderful being, wanted to most desperately.

Pinned down to a statement of fact, however, what could she do but answer "No," and with that denial of belief her faith was finally shattered.

It does not harm a child to keep the illusions of childhood as long as he will. There is no need to foster them and artificially cultivate faith in fairies and Santa Claus. But why deliberately stamp them out? Surely the world is better for a little mist of illusion when one is young and has not yet begun to see the sharp outlines of reality.

Many children like to believe in Santa Claus long after they know deep down in their hearts that he is only a charming figment of fancy. Forced by some adult's impertinent question, however, to face the facts, they must discard their cherished dream.

Why discuss it at all until the child himself asks for the truth? And even then the parent might often say with perfect sincerity: "Well, I like to believe in him, and so I do—and so he is real."

Who is to deny the reality of a being who, though never seen or felt, has yet ruled the children's Christmas for so many generations?

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THE HOSTESS who invites us in for eggnog or cooks our Christmas goose will not hold us responsible for a gift of gratitude. But when we share cordial hospitality we usually feel a genuine and spontaneous urge to express our appreciation with a remembrance. Since she is obviously a home-loving person or she couldn't and wouldn't go to the trouble to entertain us, we will be most likely to cast our eye among the more festive of tablewares in searching out a gift for our holiday hostess. These are our suggestions . . . If she has a placid early American house, give her something nice in pewter, pressed glass, simple old-time scenic porcelain, primitive jugs for flowers. If her home is more in a modern mood, she will appreciate smart spun aluminum ware for serving—tumblers, a beverage mixer, an hors d'oeuvre tray, an ice bucket or a salad bowl. If her household is big and genial and not in any particular style, she will like things of enduring charm—a piece of sterling silver, a set of crystal goblets, a dozen Dresden service plates, a pair of pretty little figurines. If she has a formal eighteenth century house, give her Sheffield silver or a Wedgwood vase.

Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Boykin for her bulletin, "Things to Know About Glass."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Like thousands of other young girls, I suppose, I believe I am the unhappiest human being in the world. But even though I feel this way, I still believe I have many things for which to be thankful. I firmly believe the one and only way to forget unhappiness is to find some work which will keep one's mind so occupied that there is little time for reminiscing. I am coming to you in the hope you will be able to help me find such work.

* * * *

For many years I have wanted some sort of position in an orphanage or home for little children. I adore children and I think that by being with them, doing things for them, I could forget my troubles or at least make myself believe I had. I have sort of lived from day to day the last few years, but it has got to the point now where life seems only pointless existence, with nothing to look forward to.

* * * *

If I don't do something soon I shall certainly lose my mind, as I can't sleep and every mouthful makes me feel it is the last. I sometimes even pray it is. I don't care to discuss my troubles with my friends, as they laugh and say that in a few years I shall look back and think how very foolish I was to let such things worry me.

* * * *

I should like to give my late afternoons to working with children. I should not expect any compensation whatsoever. The only thing I ask is that it be near enough so that I could use the street cars for transportation. Surely you will be able to find some solution to my problem. I shall appreciate your very earliest consideration in this matter. Very sincerely yours,

UNHAPPY.

Call Mrs. Montgomery.

DEAR UNHAPPY: After the Christmas holidays, get in touch with Mrs. Ruth Montgomery, director of the volunteer bureau of the Council of Social Agencies. Her office telephone number is Metropolitan 2284; her home telephone number, Wisconsin 4090. If a job of the kind you are looking for exists, she will know of it; and if you have any qualifications for the work, she will be glad to employ your services. Just now Mrs. Montgomery is up to her ears in work with the Central Toy Shop of the Council of Social Agencies—a collecting and distributing agency for Christmas toys for underprivileged children. This special work began nearly a month ago and will continue through Christmas Day, and for that reason I suggest you postpone your approach to her until after the holidays.

When a person complains of sleeplessness and loss of appetite, thinks (if your statement is to be taken literally) there is danger of losing his mind, and looks upon death as preferable to living, it is high time to take his troubles to the ablest diagnostician he can find. Work alone will scarcely effect complete restoration to physical health and mental serenity.

* * * *

One who finds himself unable to adjust himself, in time, to any great grief or secret unhappiness is one who needs the services either of psychiatrist or physician and a good diagnostician can say authoritatively which he needs. Excellent physical health is the best safeguard against morbid introspection, and when one's health has suffered as a result of unduly prolonged and self-aggravated sorrow, one's first business is to tone the body while diverting the mind and adjusting the spirit.

Helen Hayes' Proudest Role Is That of Wife

Noted Actress Says Career Not Enough, Home Is More Important.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

HELEN HAYES, the actress who has portrayed virtually every type of woman from Madelon Claudet to Queen Victoria, is proudest of all of her off-stage role—that of Mrs. Charles G. MacArthur, wife of the widely known playwright and mother of a 5-year-old daughter, Mary MacArthur.

She said as much yesterday after her matinee performance. She had found a few minutes of freedom from the crowd that swarmed backstage for another glimpse of the woman who had brought an English Queen back to life on the stage.

Once you are seated in her dressing rooms she begins to answer your questions, to tell you how she mixes marriage, motherhood and a career and makes a success of each. As she talks you take an inventory of the face that has been so many faces across the footlights. You make a mental note of her strong chin, her rather large mouth, her brown hair, and her fine nose with its well-curved nostrils. You wonder how such a slight, fragile woman can be such a regal and commanding person. Before the end of the interview, you will realize it is her dignity, her poise, and the way her head sits on her shoulders.

Family Most Important.

First of all she makes it plain that "There's nothing, nothing in the world so important to a woman as having a husband and a family. A career—no matter how satisfactory—is not enough. If I had to make the choice, I'd give up my stage life any day to keep my husband and my home."

This from the Washington-born woman, who made her first appearance on the stage at 6 and was already an established little actress at 8.

"You see, I've been at it long enough to realize the make-believe world of the theater is no substitute for the more normal life that results from having a real home. This, of course, is no indication I'm dissatisfied with my career. I love it. And I'm thankful I don't have to choose between it and my husband; that he is in sympathy with my work. But I'm also equally thankful that my career doesn't absorb me to the extent I have no time left for him and my daughter."

She mentioned that her work does, however, keep her away from the other two MacArthurs a good deal. "But that's not as bad as you might think," she said. "I believe being away from both of them is good for all of us. Frankly, I think it stimulates interest between me and my husband. And I firmly believe it's a good thing I don't have more time to give to my daughter. In my opinion too much mother love and mother presence presses in on a child. I want Mary to develop according to her own aptitudes, rather than my ideas. Then, too, since I can't be with her constantly, the problem of discipline has to be left to someone ese who is much more capable of 'keeping her in line' that I, as her mother, would be."

Clothes Weakness.

Discussing other of her off-stage interests, she mentioned that she had "a weakness for pretty clothes," coupled with some pretty definite ideas as to how short women should dress. She favors simple necklines, few "flossy touches" even in evening dresses, tailored attire for daytime wear, and outfits in solid colors rather than fashioned in contrasting shades.

She is also interested in interior decoration and got a big thrill out of "doing over" the rambling mid-

Enjoys Domesticity.

HELEN HAYES.

Victorian house in Nyack, which she now calls home.

She credits what success she has attained in the theater to "working like a galley slave and never knowing what freedom is."

But that she doesn't mind. "Work," she said, "is one of the most satisfying things in the world; and who is really free—or really wants to be?"

Mental Strains Hold Menace To Girls During Adolescence

Wise Parents and Teachers Discern Symptoms and Adjust Study and Other Requirements to Avert Effects Upon Growing Child.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WE differ from one another in varying degrees. Jones is tall; Smith is short; Brown has a good disposition, while Green is often petulant. Furthermore, dispositions and temperaments may change.

Some children are exceedingly sensitive. They can be made unhappy by petty annoyances; by scolding, by too many "don'ts." If this type of repression continues, self-confidence will be destroyed and school tasks will become increasingly difficult. A certain few of these youngsters may break physically under the strain.

Most Critical Period.

Girls, particularly from 12 to 14 years of age, are called upon to contend with powerful glandular changes that occur during adolescence. From every point of view this is a critical period and the influences at work may make for a stable nervous system or quite the reverse. Extra strain of any sort, heavy school work, worries, or even the social ambitions of a mother may lay the foundations of ill health. If there is a time in the life of the developing girl when mental strain should slow down this is the one. School tasks should be lightened, the hours of home study lessened, and even a vacation of six months to a full year insisted upon for the girl who presents undue nervous symptoms.

What are the effects of burdensome home lessons? In a recent study of several thousand physically fit boys and girls of adolescent age, it was found that 60 per cent of the girls required more time than was considered necessary for the preparation of home work. Following a reduction in home study assignments there was a prompt gain, not alone in weight and general physical appearance, but in happiness. Furthermore, the average grades rose between 10 and 15 per cent.

In a fair number of the girls slight enlargement of the thyroid gland was present and in nearly every case in which swelling was observed there was some increase in excitability. As age increased (past 15) the gland enlargement receded or disappeared altogether.

Should Watch Grades.

Teachers of experience are quick to recognize the symptoms presented by the adolescent, but not so some parents.

Parents must maintain an understanding attitude toward the child who drops from the first rank to the middle of the class or even below during adolescence.

Informal Kitchen Supper in Order After the Tree Is Decorated on Christmas Eve

After Children In Bed? What Have a Party!

More the Merrier for Holidays; Here Are Ideas for Gifts.

By Dorothea Duncan.

AFTER THE youngsters are tucked in bed and the Christmas tree is decorated, what next? Something to eat, of course. The more the merrier, so why not invite all the other young couples in the neighborhood who have just finished with their Santa Claus preparations to come over and spend the rest of a jolly Christmas Eve. Call your party a 10 o'clock buffet supper or a Christmas Eve spread or any other appropriate name. Have light, Christmas refreshments, but be sure that they are easy to prepare.

If all your tables are laden with gifts and your breakfast table already set for the first Christmas meal, have a kitchen party. Cover the kitchen table with your gayest print or plaid cloth. Use paper napkins, if you like, but be sure to have several for each person for the refreshments will be the kind that make messy fingers as everyone is going to join in and help with the preparation.

A bread board tray of various types of breads already sliced and buttered, an assortment of cold meats and cheese, and small bowls of relishes, mustard, dressings, etc., is an ideal late supper arrangement, for it can be prepared with the greatest of ease in a few minutes. Everyone can make his own sandwiches. The question of washing dishes after this type of party will be unimportant, too, for the only china required will be cups and saucers for cocoa, milk, hot cider or coffee, spoons and a few knives. Serve a plate of Christmas cookies, too, to satisfy those who have a sweet tooth.

Eggs Suggested.

If the sandwich idea does not appeal to you, you might have a mess of scrambled eggs, broiled sausage links or crisp bacon, and plenty of hot buttered toast and coffee or milk. Have a bowl of fresh fruit in the center of the kitchen table, too, and let the guests help themselves.

If this is to be your only party of the holiday season, you may prefer a more dressed up affair. If this is the case, have your buffet table in the dining or living room. Dress it in Christmas style with candles and holly, poinsettia blossoms, or if flowers are not used, make it gay by using a table decoration of polished red and green fruit.

Service Simple.

If your table is so arranged as to afford enough room for all necessary silver, china and glassware as well as food platters and any possible electrical appliances that may be needed such as a toaster, a coffee pot or a chafing dish, you will find that serving as many as 12 persons single handed will be a simple feat.

For the more formal buffet supper you might plan to serve one hot dish that can be prepared right at the buffet table by the hostess. You might use your sandwich grill for this hot dish, your chafing dish or your waffle iron.

An electric grill can be used for many attractive dishes. If it is the type of grill that spreads open giving you two flat surfaces on which to cook, fried eggs and bacon can be cooked right at the buffet table. Each guest can cook his own egg to just the turn that he prefers. With this selection of refreshments the toaster will also be added to the table accessories. An electric coffee pot will find its place on the table too, but it is not necessary as coffee can be prepared in the kitchen and served from a heated pitcher by the hostess.

Rarebits Popular.

The seafood newburg dishes or rarebits are always popular if you wish to go to a little more trouble in preparing the refreshments for your Christmas Eve buffet supper. These are especially attractive when prepared right at the buffet table by the hostess and served piping hot from the chafing dish.

The chafing dish refreshment may be supplemented by a jellied fruit salad, toasted crackers and a hot beverage.

Following are several recipes that are especially suited to the Christmas Eve buffet party.

Oyster Newburg.

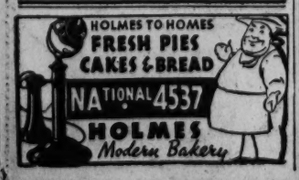
24 oysters with juice
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups medium white sauce
Salt and pepper
3 tablespoons sherry
2 egg yolks, well beaten.

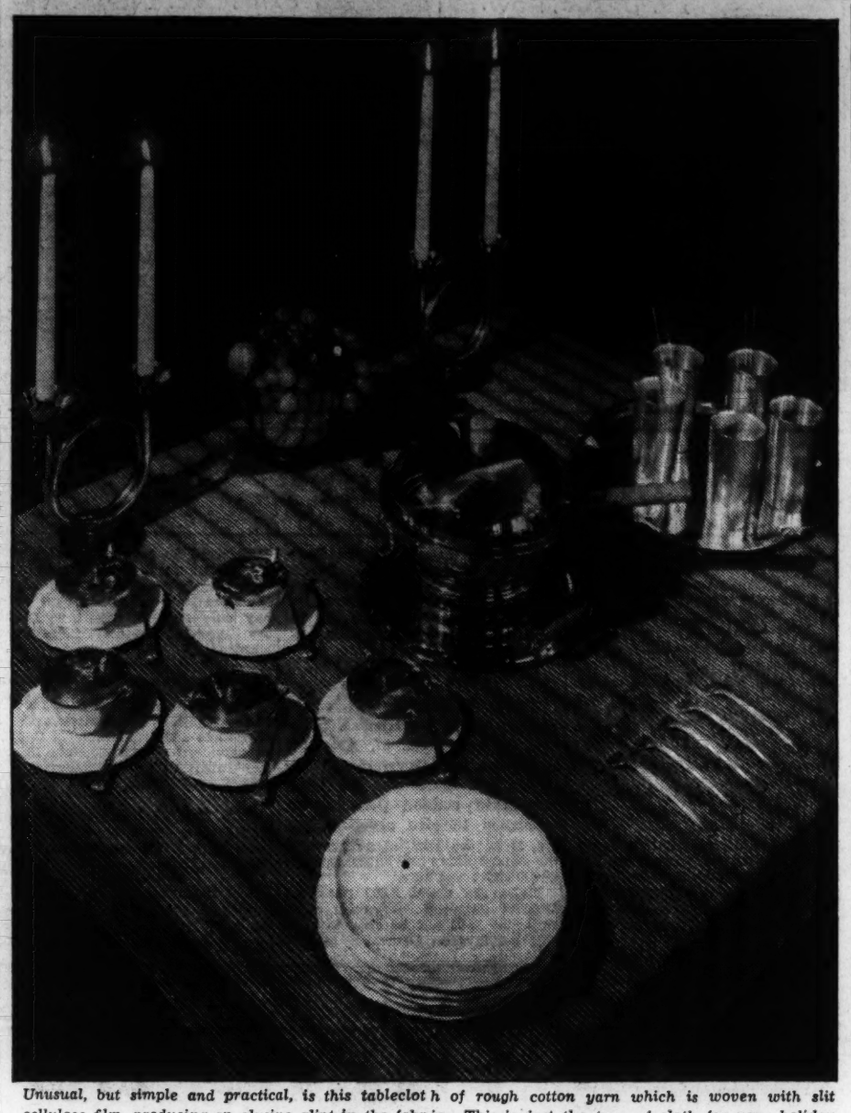
Put oyster juice in pan and let it come to boiling point. Skim off the froth. Put sauce pan over constantly boiling water, add oysters, and when they plump out and their edges curl, add white sauce; season and heat. Then stir in sherry and egg yolks and serve at once.

Welsh Rabbit.

1 tablespoon butter
½ pound soft, mild cheese, cut in small pieces
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon mustard
Few grains cayenne
1-3 to ½ cup ale or lager beer
1 egg, slightly beaten.

Melt butter and add cheese and seasonings. As cheese melts, add ale or beer gradually, while stirring constantly, then egg. Serve at once or as soon as thoroughly heated.





Unusual, but simple and practical, is this tablecloth of rough cotton yarn which is woven with slit cellulose film, producing an elusive glint in the fabric. This is just the type of cloth for your holiday buffet table for its glittering sheen has a Christmasy twinkle.

Today Is Best Time for Yule Marketing

Wise Woman Will Lay in Supplies Before Last Minute Rush.

MONDAY will be the final shopping day for all perishables used for the Christmas dinner, but it is a wise woman who will do some of her marketing today and thus avoid the rush at the beginning of the week. Lay in as many of the canned products and less perishable fruits—oranges, grapefruit and tangerines, fruit juices, soups, plum pudding, cooking products, candy and nuts, as you can before the things that you will need are out of stock. You might let your grocer know on Saturday just what size turkey, goose or ham you will want Monday.

Your last-minute purchases can be made on Monday then; things like meat, fresh fruits and vegetables, and any of the little things that you have overlooked on Saturday.

Your Sunday dinner tomorrow should be simple to prepare, inexpensive meal if you are planning to have a great feast on Christmas day. This will lessen the strain on your purse for one thing and also make you feel more ambitious about getting the unusually hearty dinner ready for Christmas day.

It might be well to plan a meat for the Sunday dinner that can be served for the main Monday meal as well. The meat loaf suggested for tomorrow in the accompanying menus, for example, can be served with a tomato sauce the first day, and the leftover portion sliced and served cold on Monday evening. Or if there is enough essence for gravy, this can be saved and the gravy made on Monday. If this is the case, the meat slices can be warmed in the gravy.

If there is not enough essence for gravy and you prefer the leftover meat hot, rather than cold as already suggested, slice the remaining portion and fry each slice lightly in butter, turning each slice frequently until each side is a golden brown and the meat is heated throughout. Serve the meat with pimiento sauce, a medium white sauce to which a little chopped red pimiento has been added.

Steamed rice and escalloped tomatoes will be ideal as inexpensive and easily prepared accompaniments for the leftover meat loaf for Monday's dinner. To keep your menu simple, add a plain green salad, raw carrot sticks, or celery stalks, bread and butter, a beverage and canned or stewed fruit and bought sponge cake or sugar cookies.

Meat Loaf

1½ pounds chopped beef
2 eggs
1½ cups bread crumbs
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
½ teaspoon pepper
2 teaspoons salt

Additional seasonings to suit, such as chopped celery or onion, poultry seasoning, a dash of thyme, savory, sage, etc.

Chop the steak, using food chopper, or have butcher grind it. Mix it thoroughly with the unbeaten eggs, bread crumbs, chopped parsley, pepper and salt. Place in a bread pan and press firmly until it is molded to the shape of the pan. Run a thin knife blade around the loaf, turn into a roasting pan, place in a moderate oven (350 degrees to 375 degrees F.) and bake for about two hours, basting every quarter of an hour with hot stock.

The meat may be cut in thin slices and served with horseradish instead of tomato sauce. This amount will serve six to eight.

Hard-cooked eggs may be molded in the loaf to show in rings when sliced.

Reheated Kale Needs a Sauce

LEFTOVER kale or spinach must be treated with a great deal of imagination or the results will not be attractive. After the vegetable becomes cold it does not look very attractive, but steaming in a wire rack over boiling water will revive it to its original appearance.

A cream sauce and hard cooked eggs either chopped and added to the sauce or used as a garnish are suggested for accompaniments for the reheated spinach or kale.

The chopped green after it has been steamed makes a delicious addition to a cheese souffle. If the spinach is to be served this way, it should be added to the souffle mixture just before the egg whites are folded into the other ingredients.

A baked dish of rice and the reheated spinach or kale is also attractive. Cook the rice in the usual manner. Mold it in individual custard ramekins and place a small amount of kale or spinach in the center of each mold. Cover the green with more rice. These molds of spinach or kale should then be baked or steamed until the mixture is thoroughly heated. Serve with mushroom sauce or chicken fricassee gravy.

Simple Meal Suggested for Sunday Preceding the Christmas Feast.

Oyster to Play Prominent Part As Yule Snack

'Pigs in Blankets' Become New Accompaniment for the Cocktail.

JUST how oysters have figured in the holiday menus is rather hard to determine but at least they do, especially in this part of the United States and we can feel certain that it is a good old American custom.

Here are some very alluring oyster hors d'oeuvres. You might serve them this week as an especially attractive evening snack when callers drop in to inspect your Christmas tree and to see if Santa has been as good to you as he was to them. They also make an excellent luncheon dish.

Pigs in blankets is the name of this choice oyster morsel, skewered with toothpicks, strips of bacon enwrap the oysters and thereby comes the unsurpassed flavor and enticing aroma of "the pigs."

Regardless of how the toothsome, bacon wrapped oysters got their name, they were a cardinal recipe of the early American kitchen. And the name has all the ring of corn pone, pine panels and pewter ware.

But a new use has arisen; cocktails require dainty tidbits—a need suitably fulfilled by the pigs in blankets but with a different tang than any of the other hors d'oeuvres usually served.

Another virtue of the blanketed oysters is that they do not cloy when they are served in the number—three to six—needed for a sustaining tasteful meal.

Pigs in Blankets.

24 oysters
12 slices of bacon
8 pieces toast.

Drain and dry oysters. Wrap each oyster half in a slice of bacon and fasten the ends together with a toothpick. Brown very quickly on all sides in a hot frying pan. Arrange three oysters on each piece of toast. Pour a little of the heated liquor over the toast and serve immediately while they are piping hot.

Oyster soups never have gained the popularity their flavor justifies, but an ideal oyster soup is tomato bouillon with oysters.

Tomato Bouillon with Oysters.

1 small bottle tomato sauce
1½ quarts bouillon sauce
1 tablespoon chopped onion
½ bay leaf
6 cloves
½ teaspoon celery seed
½ teaspoon pepper corns
1 pint oysters.

Mix all ingredients except oysters and boil 20 minutes. Strain, cool and clear. Add oysters which have been cooked in their own liquor until plump and the edges curled and serve in bouillon cups.

Holiday Colors Add To Candle Holders

Candle holders for a holiday table will look more festive if decorated with Christmas colors. The flat candle holders may be dressed with crepe paper ruffles. For each ruffle cut a strip of red crepe paper 6 inches wide and 24 inches long. Fold it through the center lengthwise, gather it with needle and thread and tie it around the holder. If you have a pair of pinking scissors, cut the edges of the ruffle with these.

Sprigs of mistletoe or holly may be tied with narrow red ribbon to the tall crystal or silver candle holder just below the cup that holds the candle.

Sugar on Biscuits.

Half a cube of loaf sugar soaked in orange juice and pressed into the top of a biscuit before baking makes a pleasing flavor addition in the final product. Grated orange rind may also be added to the biscuit dough before it is rolled.

Use a Moderate Oven To Roast Brazil Nuts

To roast Brazil nuts in the shell, arrange the nuts in the shell on a baking sheet and bake 20 to 25 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.). Remove from oven and crack with Amazon nut cracker.

Shelled nuts require only 10 to 12 minutes in a moderate oven. As soon as they are roasted, remove from oven and sprinkle generously with salt.

Excellent Starter.

Chilled avocado balls or cubes served in cocktail cups with a seasoning of salt and a dash of lemon juice or lime juice make an excellent starter for a meal. A sprinkling of paprika will enhance the appearance of the fruit.

On the Air Today

WHEN Harry Reser and his Cliquot Club Eskimos return to the air tonight it should stir up some fond radio memories—unless your listening days date back a relatively short time.

The Reser Eskimos program made its debut back in 1925 with much barking of dogs, jingling of sleigh bells and twanging of Reser's banjo for what was then something different in the way of sound effects and feature soloing. And although the "Eskimos" have been off since 1933, their new series premiere tonight will be welcomed by thousands of old friends.

The new series is scheduled for Saturday nights at 8, WJSV.

Wallace Beery is presenting his 4-year-old daughter, Carol Ann, before leaving the "Chateau" in favor of Al Jolson. Little Miss Beery has the distinction of appearing on tonight's hour with a lady of 74—Mme. Schumann-Heink. Carol will sing a Christmas carol and undergo an interview on the most popular child's subject in the world—Santa Claus. Other guests include Joe Penner and Sidney Jarvis, long a portrayer of Santa in Hollywood.

* * * *

Which reminds me. If you are not favorably disposed to carols, more carols and carols in daily repetition, you may as well start now for the backwoods where radio is still unknown. The van appears today, and by Tuesday I suspect a perfectly good outlay of Christmas songs should be well on the road to ruin in precisely the same fashion a popular song is wrecked in a few brief weeks. There's one nice thing about Christmas songs, though: you're ready for them next year.

Word trickles through from Chicago that Art Kassel and the Mills Brothers (Campus Revue) will end their series December 27. Just a rumor, as it were.

Billy Mauch, 10-year-old dramatic actor, heard on the N. B. C. "White Rabbit Bus" program, is getting a leave of absence from radio to go to Hollywood, where he will play the boy Anthony Adverse in the forthcoming picture of the celebrated best seller. Billy has been heard in the "Court of Human Relations," "Lady Next Door" and "Beauty Box Theater" programs recently.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

A SEVEN PER CENT increase, or 46,345 persons, in the civilian personnel of the executive branch of the Government in the fiscal year ended June 30 is noted in the annual report of the Civil Service Commission.

BAKER.

The commission lists 673,095 employes in the executive branch on June 30, 1934, and 719,440 on June 30, 1935. On last June 30 there were 610,141 employes in the permanent and emergency class and 109,299 in the temporary class. It is emphasized that these figures are strictly confined to the executive branch of the Government and do not include thousands of Government employes in the judicial, legislative and military branches.

The commission's legislative program of nine points recommended in the report has received wide approval. The recommended program involves chiefly the extension of the scope of the civil service to include the recently created New Deal agencies and retirement benefits for Government employes.

Miss Marjorie O'Brien (P), popular welfare worker, and Miss Winifred Hager (C), both of Adjutant General's Office, War, are reported to be recovering from injuries received in an automobile accident recently.

So Christmas week again is here
With holly, trees and mistletoe—
With all which gives the season cheer
On every side where'er we go.
And still—though Christmas may dawn bright
With sunlight's gleam on shaft and dome
Yet eyes will dim and throats feel tight
Among us far from folks and home.

Radio Group Appointed.

Chairman Anning S. Prall, of the Federal Communications Commission, has announced the appointment of a committee of 40 to promote a "co-operative arrangement" between educators and radio broadcasters.

The committee is headed by Dr. John W. Studebaker, commissioner of education, and includes Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Dr. Walter Damrosch, William Green and Dr. George F. Zook. The commission believes that the committee may work "to eliminate controversy and misunderstanding" among educators and the radio industry in the use of radio.

Printer Appointed.

William Smith, of New York City, has been appointed assistant production manager at the Government Printing Office, Public Printer A. E. Giegengack has announced. Smith was employed by the Oak Press, New York, for 15 years as foreman and later as superintendent.

To Ask Holiday Pay.

William F. Franklin (P), of the District Water Department, president of Lodge No. 87, American Federation of Government Employes, has announced his lodge intends to petition Congress for legislation to give per-diem employes of the District government the same holiday privileges as regular District workers.

There are about 2,300 per-diem District employes, Franklin says, and they will not be able to take half holidays on December 24 and 31 granted to regular District employes unless they do so without pay. Franklin said per-diem workers have been given time off with pay only once in recent years—at the time of the funeral of President Harding.

City-Owned Garages Held Parking Cure

'Mass' Transportation Situation Is Serious, Says Roberts.

Points to Large Tracts Already Tied Up by Automobiles.

Declaring the Government now has nearly $10,000,000 invested in land used for parking of private automobiles in the downtown section, William A. Roberts, People's Counsel, yesterday urged the Public Utilities Commission to bring about municipally constructed parking garages as a necessary major step toward improvement of mass transportation.

Parking of private automobiles and the consequent vehicular congestion, causing many vehicles to be driven and to stop on street car tracks is a major deterrent against speedy and satisfactory mass transportation, he said.

The proposed municipally built parking garages would be self-liquidating, would afford adequate and sightly parking facilities for thousands of privately owned machines and would relieve congestion and would return to other uses and thereby increase taxes on land now used for parking.

Street Ban Approved.

The plan of the People's Counsel was advanced at the close of another day of hearing of complaints against street car and bus service from several witnesses, one of whom, James D. Secrest, who resides at 4959 Chesapeake street, West Chevy Chase, Md., said he could ride on a train to Baltimore in less time than he could to his home from The Post building.

Proposals to ban street parking without providing space for the machines which would be driven from the streets were not practicable, Mr. Roberts said.

The District, he said, now has an investment of $1,238,020 in its land along curbs where unrestricted parking is permitted in the downtown area. This estimate was based on the assessed value of adjoining property. The figure did not take into account taxicab stands, the value of the property given over to them being $1,220,415, Mr. Roberts said.

Between John Marshall place and Nineteenth street, and Constitution and Massachusetts avenues, he said, there are 89 separate parcels of land used for parking lots. The assessed value of these was $8,905,211, he said.

Parking Lots Unsightly.

"The lands are bare, are visible from the public streets with their masses of parked cars throughout the day, in many instances are unfenced or otherwise unprotected, and in all instances have one or more driveways which cross the public sidewalks and which are not in the area stated. The total improvements upon these lands at the present time consist of minor shacks for the protection of the employes conducting the operation. Their present assessed value is $20,700. This is a matter of the utmost consequence.

"Upon these lands, not more than three years ago, there was $1,099,000 worth of improvements taxable by the District of Columbia at the usual rate. The destruction of these buildings has resulted in an annual loss at the present tax rate of $15,000 per annum to the District of Columbia. The total area of downtown land so occupied is 773,911 square feet, an average of approximately 8,000 square feet per lot.

"It is obvious that a continued development in this direction is decidedly uneconomic. In the first place, the average value of the land so used is $11 per square foot."

High Rates Required.

The high land value requires operators to charge high rates for parking. He derided the use of the Grand Plaza, fronting the Commerce Department, by an unsightly parking lot rented out by the Federal Government. In all the Federal and District governments own land used for private parking totaling 552,310 square feet, with a "present value for the naked land alone of $3,919,244," Mr. Roberts said.

"The parking requirements," Mr. Roberts said, were shown by analysis" to be constantly growing, that there is every indication of a permanent need for parking not less than 15,000 vehicles a day for which compensation can be secured, and that the relief of the streets from parking is absolutely essential to any improvement in the mass transportation system."

Modern construction and design, he said, would permit construction of inclosed garages at a cost of not more than 18 cents per cubic foot to house 6,000 to 10,000 cars each.

A new basis for controlling loading of buses has been decided on, Riley E. Elgen, commission chairman, announced after hearing additional complaints against overcrowding. Fred A. Sager, commission chief engineer, has been instructed to prepare at once a load limit for each type of bus. As soon as this has been done the commission will change the past scheme of fixing overloading by percentage and fix the maximum number of persons.

Approval of such a plan was voiced by John H. Hanna, president of the company, who said he believed it would enable the drivers better to control numbers of passengers.

The hearings were adjourned until January 2, when the company will begin presentation of its side of the case.

Federal Workers Head for Home In Gigantic Christmas Exodus

Rosemary O'Connor, 2 years old, is one person on the way home for Christmas. Her mother, Mrs. Florence O'Connor, is holding her up to get the ticket from E. W. Moran at Union Station.

Trains, Buses, Airplanes Taxed to Capacity by Yule Travel.

Washingtonians—those who came from the States to work for Uncle Sam—are going "back home" for the holidays.

The annual Christmas exodus has started. So great is the number of travelers that train, bus and airline traffic is swamped. Transportation officials agree this year has seen—and will see for the next five days—the greatest homeward trek in history.

It began yesterday. Thousands of Government workers, taking advantage of week-end leave, jammed Union Station, bus terminals and Washington Airport. Reservations were at a premium. Extra trains, buses and planes were hurried into service.

Travel increased hourly. Those who failed to get tickets in advance stood in long lines at Union Station, last night.

Trains Add Extra Cars.

Over the week-end, the Pennsylvania Railroad plans to press all available equipment into service. At least 500 extra cars—Pullman and day-coaches—will be added to outgoing trains.

"It is the biggest Yule season we have had in five years," a Pennsylvania official declared. "More persons are leaving Washington for the holidays than I have ever seen."

Special Christmas travel rates on the Pennsylvania Railroad went into effect yesterday. This, it is believed, stimulated the sudden exodus. For the first time in recent years, the Liberty Limited to Chicago was operating in three sections. The Congressional Limited ran in two sections.

Extra service will continue through Christmas Eve, officials said.

Although special trains are also running into Washington from points North and West, the influx of visitors is not expected to compete with the holiday exodus.

A 50 per cent travel increase over last year was reported by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. Leaving Washington on regular schedules, beginning last night, the Capitol Limited ran in three sections, and the Royal Blue in two sections. Other trains operated on similar schedules.

Most Travel to West.

B. & O. officials reported that travel was mostly to the West. The Eastern rush is expected tomorrow.

The Southern Railroad also reported "unusually heavy" traffic.

Reservations for the next several days on the Greyhound bus line showed an increase of 100 per cent over last year. Greyhound dispatchers estimated that 20,000 travelers would leave Washington by bus during the next 48 hours. Travel, they said, is equally heavy in all directions.

The Short Line bus company reported traffic increasing hourly. Twenty-four extra buses are being used. Their travel, however, is mostly to the North. Business has increased 25 per cent over last year, officials said.

Preparations were being made by the Great Eastern bus line last night to handle the "heaviest crowds in history." Extra buses will run to the South and West.

Air Travel Runs Heavy.

Commercial aviation is ready to fly the largest holiday loads since planes began regular passenger service, according to William Briggs, of Eastern Airlines. Reservations on Eastern Air are "sold out solid for ten days," he said.

Pennsylvania Airlines is sold out for every scheduled flight. Planes are running in sections.

A transportation clearing house in New York estimated that 50 per cent more persons are going home for the holidays this year than in 1934.

All in all, it lookes like a great Christmas in the Nation's array of "Homevilles."

Countess Given 15-Month Term In 'Re-sentence'

Countess Grace De Benque will have to serve three concurrent 15-month sentences for the larceny of money aggregating $5,000 from Miss Louise Maret, co-proprietor of the fashionable Maret School on Kalorama road northwest, Justice Joseph W. Cox, in the District Supreme Court held yesterday when he "re-sentenced" her after an illegal sentencing two years ago.

The Countess and George Gormley were convicted of stealing money from Miss Maret. Both were sentenced and within a few months Gormley sought his release on the theory that since he had been sentenced illegally under the "indeterminate sentence" law he was entited to his freedom. His motion was overruled and he was re-sentenced.

The countess obtained temporary refuge from Lorton when she filed in Norfolk Va., a petition for a writ of habeas corpus claiming she was detained unlawfully. She was ordered released, but was given into the custody of deputy United States marshals to be brought here for a formal sentence. Originally she had been given a sentence of from 2 to 4 years.

Although she has served more than 27 months, Justice Cox yesterday said he would give her a sentence that would meet with his original exactments. Thus, he said, a 15-month sentence now would meet with the maximum requirements of what he intended when he passed sentence.

The countess and Gormley were convicted of having stolen money from Miss Maret after she had been lured into taking an automobile ride with Gormley in 1931.

Lawyer Who Lost Ring Robbed of $25 Tie Pin

Rutherford B. H. Lyon, attorney, reported to police last night that a tie pin worth $25 had been stolen from his apartment at the Shoreham Hotel.

Only last week Lyon lost a diamond solitaire ring, valued at $1,500, somewhere between the Washington Elks Club and his hotel.

Bill Proposes Small Courts Home in D. C.

District Drafts Plan for a Direct Loan From Treasury.

Uniform Narcotics Act, New Lending Measure Also Are Drawn.

Construction of a small courts building, enactment of a so-called uniform narcotics law, amendment of the pharmacy laws, material strengthening of the small loans law and provision for official recording of liens against automobiles are provided in five bills, drafting of which was completed by District officials yesterday.

The measures are to be submitted by the Commissioners to Congress next month. They will comprise the major part of the legislative program to be proposed by the Commissioners, aside from appropriations, relief, and fiscal matters.

Two other measures are under preparation. One is the bill to enlarge the powers of the Commissioners. This has been stripped of the features which aroused controversy. The other would amend the law defining Federal and District jurisdiction over streets.

Loan Contemplated.

A Federal loan of $3,500,000 is authorized for construction of the small courts building under the measure completed by E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, and indorsed by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

The $3,500,000 loan would be advanced out of the Federal Treasury and would be repaid at the rate of $1,000,000 a year after the District had completed repayment of loans made by PWA. Congress last session authorized PWA to loan the same amount for this purpose, but Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, PWA administrator, refused to approve the loan.

The proposed uniform narcotics law is the same which has been enacted by 29 States. It is necessary, Prettyman said, because the Harrison narcotic act and the existing District narcotic law do not equip the District with an adequate law.

Prescription Required.

The proposed amendment to the pharmacy law would prohibit sale of hypnotic or somnifacient drugs, except on prescription of a licensed physician, and would empower the Pharmacy Board to fix standards of technical equipment for pharmacies.

The small loans law would be amended to make the "interest" on loans include "all charges of whatsoever nature made or received" for the loan; would make the procurer a party with the lender; would make one loan sufficient evidence of a lending business; would bar suits to recover on usurious loans; forbid advertising by lenders and empower the Commissioners to make governing rules and regulations.

The other measure would set up in the office of the Traffic Director machinery for formal recording of liens against automobiles.

Civitan Club Is Host At Christmas Party

One hundred and one boys, from 8 to 16 years of age, were guests at the annual Christmas party of the Civitan Club, given at the Central Y. M. C. A. last night for the Civitan Garden Club, its boys' organization.

They found bags full of presents around a large Christmas tree. A program of vaudeville and music was given. The Rev. Arthur P. Wilson, pastor of Columbia Heights Christian Church and international Civitan chaplain, told stories of the Australian bush. Ashby L. Leeth, Civitan president, was in charge.

Teachers Are Queried On 'Red' Literature

Ballou's Questionnaire Provides Final Flare-up in School Textbook Inquiry; Yuletide Vacation Begins.

Schools closed for the Christmas vacation yesterday, with one last flare-up on the communism issue as a new questionnaire threw teachers into confusion.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, dissolved the agitation late in the afternoon by saying there had been no intention of prying into the teachers' private lives.

The questionnaire, announced orally by school principals before the school employes started to collect their pay, asked teachers to list:

All magazines which they had used in class work.

All patriotic observances in the schools.

Some teachers understood the magazine request to apply to all periodicals they might have brought into school buildings, including those for their own reading, and although all said they answered the question truthfully, some confessed embarrassment about listing certain fiction and true story magazines.

Dr. Ballou, however, explained that the request only referred to magazines specifically used in the classes, and to no others. The list of patriotic observances is being compiled at the request of the Board of Education's special textbook committee.

Closing of schools yesterday meant an extra day's vacation for 93,000 District pupils who, in other years, were excused only on December 24 to start their holiday. While Monday's vacation will reduce only slightly the $66,000 daily cost of operating the school system, in economies on paper and other materials, it will mean a Christmas present of from $5 to $7 for the teachers and other employes who will collect pay without having to work that day.

The day ended a week's program of Christmas plays and pageants in the schools, and several groups of carolers, including some 50 Macfarlane Junior High School pupils, in peaked caps and blue-and-tinsel capes, serenaded administrative officers, Dr. Ballou among them, in the Franklin Building.

Motorist Robbed By Two Gunmen

Two colored gunmen held up an autoist and a taxi driver in a succession of robberies last night. A pedestrian was the victim af another colored holdup crew.

Willard J. Hill, 1707 Bay street southeast, was stopped in his auto by two colored men at Thirteenth and Riggs street northwest and forced at gun point to surrender $25.

The same robbers, police believed, got into a taxicab operated by Carl H. Doney, 105 Sixth street southeast, at Fifth and O streets northwest, and forced Doney to turn over the cab and a small amount of change at Seventh and K streets southeast.

Sam Oshinsky, of 546 Columbia road, was made to hand over $20 to a colored gunman while he was walking in the 600 block of Columbia road. The man ran down an alley and was joined by a confederate.

Janitor Rescues Woman From Gas

A janitor who sawed through the chain holding her apartment door saved Mrs. Nancy Lamie, 83, from almost certain death in her gas-filled suite at 1126 Eleventh street northwest early last night.

The gas was escaping from jets in the kitchen stove which Mrs. Lamie apparently believed she had turned off before going into the living room to rest while she awaited the return of her daughter, Marion Lamie, 25.

Miss Lamie smelled gas when she came home about 6 p. m. She found the door locked from the inside by a chain. She called the janitor, who sawed the chain in two so a fire rescue squad crew was able to revive her aged mother with oxygen.

Mrs. Lamie was taken to Emergency Hospital for treatment. Her recovery was expected.

An Indoor Circus Adds Novelty to a Week of Film Bills Attuned to the Holidays

Fox Innovation Is Clever Xmas Touch of Color

Elephants Parade Aisles; Earle Has Jane Froman; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"CHARLIE CHAN'S SECRET." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of an original story by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan, adapted to the screen by the authors and Joseph Hoffman, starring Warner Oland, with Henrietta Crosman, Astrid Allwyn, Herbert Mundin, Frances Ford, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Gloria Roy and Rosina Lawrence. Directed by Gordon Wiles. Reviewed Friday night.

The shrewdest bit of showmanship that has been disclosed in the National Capital in many months is the presentation at Loew's Fox Theater this week of a Christmas innovation in the form of a circus, practically complete save for the canvas "big top" to take the place of the theater's more substantial roof.

With the orchestra-floor lobby converted into a miniature menagerie—Shetland ponies, dogs, elephants, rabbits and whatnot—the atmosphere of the circus is assertive from the moment the front door of the playhouse is passed.

The entrance to the arena—and that, of course, would be the stage—is through the center aisle of the auditorium.

Yes, elephants, ponies and all the human participants in the show march down the center aisle and up to the rostrum over a specially constructed ramp. There, awaiting them, sits Prof. Phil Lampkin, mounted in the Paul Whiteman manner of "Jumbo" on a white charger—or, as we say around the animal tent, a rosin-back. He couldn't fall off if he tried!

Yacopis Troupe a Marvel.

The circus is opened by the grandiose announcements of Will Hill, ringmaster, in the grand manner, and the Great Yacopis Troupe of gymnasts from the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus. They perform feats that you wouldn't believe, even if this feeble "Elsie Smith" had the words with which to describe them adequately. A five-person bridge is one of them—a double somersault, meaning ground man and mounter, is another. Nobody else in the show business is quite equal to these extraordinary stunts.

Then there are the Hannefords, greatest of the sawdust equestrians, Alf Loyal and his Arabian Stallions, Picard and his almost human trained seal, Wilbur's Dog and Pony Circus, Martin & Martin, aerialists, and a whole flock of clowns, eight of them, I think, all together.

For this reporter the evening was made complete by walking smack into the company of Melvin D. Hildreth, Washington's walking encyclopedia of circus lore and legal representative of most of the tent shows; Dr. Mann, curator of the National Zoological Park, Ringmaster Hill and one or two others who know their way around the animal cages.

They were genuinely interested spectators at an indoor circus that approximates the summertime canvas exhibits with exceptional completeness and fidelity.

There is also a picture on view at Loew's Fox this week, but in the Christmas hurrah it will be a matter of minor importance in the eyes of all future audiences, particularly those of younger years.

Warner Oland Again.

It is "Charlie Chan's Secret," another fable of crime detection based on the Earl Derr Biggers formula, but not written by him. The story was contrived, as you will learn from the small-type paragraph preceding these remarks, by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan.

Warner Oland repeats his many successes in the name part, which has come to be almost exclusively identified with his histrionic efforts. He is surrounded by an able cast, whose names also will be found in that small-type paragraph.

The Fox Movietone News, "Ye Olde Toyshoppe" and Prof. Lampkin's orchestral contributions to the program round out a bill on which nothing matters but the novelty of the indoor circus.

That is a stroke of genius, no less.

"MISS PACIFIC FLEET." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Frederick Hazlett Brennan, adapted to the screen by Lucille Newmark and Peter Milne, with additional dialogue by Patsy Flick, featuring Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell, Hugh Herbert and Allan Jenkins, with Warren Hull, Eddie Acuff, Minna Gombell and Guinn "Big Boy" Williams. Directed by Raymond Enright. Reviewed Friday night.

I suspect that I have never seen my good friend Hugh Herbert so funny as he is in this nonsensical subject.

He is cast as a big business executive by the name of Mr. Freytag. This Mr. Freytag is a very able fellow, except when his blonde and domineering spouse, impersonated in her best cast-iron manner by Minna Gombell, takes matters into her own hands.

When she does this—which is most of the time—Mr. Freytag shrinks visibly both physically and mentally. Left to his own unimpeded devices, however, he is quite a fellow. So much so that you will laugh inordinately at his clownish antics.

The best thing he has done since "Convention City," in association with practically the same cast of principals.

Probably the story of "Miss Pacific Fleet" has some basis beyond the pastiming of Mr. Herbert and his associates, but at the moment it is a little difficult to discover precisely what, or why, it is. Something to do with electing a prize-winner, "Miss Pacific Fleet," when 83,000 of the Navy's stalwarts put into San Pedro harbor.

The two runner-uppers, of course, are the struggling young concession operators at an amusement park, impersonated with their usual red-blooded and bluff skill by Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell. Allen Jenkins is a gob in whom at least two of these young women are interested and it is through him that one of them lands in jail.

Makes No Sense—Only Fun!

It all doesn't seem to make sense, does it? Well, "Miss Pacific Fleet' as a matter of cold fact, does not add up to any appreciable degree of intellectual ponderosity, but it is a deal of fun and nicely attuned to the carefree spirit of the Yuletide.

The stage bill also is nicely within the spirit and temper of this gala week, returning several old friends to local boards and introducing a new star, in person, whose success last evening was sure and triumphant.

This would refer to Jane Froman, the mezzo songstress of last week's picture, "Stars Over Broadway," who creates a far more interesting and flattering impression in persona propria than in shadow form on a silver sheet.

Miss Froman's voice, projected through a microphone seemingly unnecessarily, gains rather than loses during the course of her personal appearance. It is a vocal organ of fine quality and strength that seemed to be at its best in such selections as "I'm In the Mood for Love," "Foolin' With Me," "You Let Me Down," from last week's picture, and "Little Man, You've Had a Busy Day," which made up her delightful program.

Here From Florida Sun.

Nicely tanned by a recent Florida sun, Miss Froman comes to the Earle direct from the Pancoast Hotel at Miami Beach—or so I am informed by that amiable publicist for the sub-tropic sunshine, Miss Agnes Grant, former resident of this city.

Others on the Earle's current vaudeville bill include Carl Emmy and His Mad Wags, probably the best dog act in captivity; Earle Lavere and his competent feminine assistant, with their singing, accordianing and Scotch jokes, and Jane Moore and Billy Revel, two of the most original dancers to be seen in these parts these many moons now.

The newsreel, Freddie Clark's orchestra and the usual house features round out a bill that seems admirably joined together for the particular purposes it is supposed to serve this holiday week.

This Gentleman Has a Secret

By this time Warner Oland, that admirable character actor, effectively pictured above, almost has come to be indistinguishable from Charlie Chan, the Earl Derr Biggers fictional creation, whose role he has assumed so many times on the screen. His latest essay at the part is in "Charlie Chan's Secret," currently on view on the screen at Loew's Fox Theater, but slightly overshadowed by the circus that is causing gasps of astonishment and a great deal of honest amusement as a Yuletide innovation.

RKO-Keith's

"ANOTHER FACE." RKO-Radio picturization of a screen play by Garret Graham and John Twist, adapted to the screen from an original story by Thomas Dugan and Ray Mayer, featuring Wallace Ford, Brian Donlevy and Phyllis Brooks, with Molly Lamont, Alan Hale, Oscar Apfel, Inez Courtney and Ethel Wales. Directed by Christy Cabanne. Reviewed Friday morning by Sally Stroud.

"Another Face" is yet another facet of the gangster-has-his-face-made-over story.

It boasts the slap-dash Wallace Ford up a notch as a movie publicity director to whom the sky is the limit. Phyllis Brooks is his pet, a blonde star whom his dizzy schemes have lifted to a place of eminence in the world of cameras. She appears to be a carbon of Bette Davis—made from the second or third sheet, I should say.

It is Ford who dominates the scenes, even with the advent of a live gangster. He even uses the gangster for news copy, trading on the gat-slinger's self-delusions concerning his acting ability and the charm of his made-over countenance.

Brian Donlevy, the underworlder, has some chuckle-inducing scenes on Ford's movie lot . . . they are deliciously hammy and bring forth loud groaning from Assistant Director Eric Rhodes—who is capital entertainment, with or without his accent, which is missing this time.

"Wolf" Fooled 'Em!

Alan Hale is production manager of the company, and much endures he at the merciless hands of Ford. So often had the latter howled "wolf" for publicity purposes that when he did have a scoop on his lot, both Hale and the police thought it all another joke, for which they were to stooge.

There is something likeably intelligent about the face and acting of Molly Lamont, who is drawn into the mad fracas because she was the nurse who officiated at the face-renovating of Donlevy.

It might be that Donlevy is a gentle satire on the great, woolly Baer; the cut of his clothes, his swagger and his pompous conceit suggest it.

Emma Dunn appears briefly as the mother of the blonde-thatched Phyllis Brooks. And there is a short, ludicrous scene where the gangster falls into the artistic clutches of Auntie, who understands Art because she teaches it in the high school in her home town back in Iowa.

It is pretty good entertainment; there are some funny lines, droll situations, a chase and a neat minimum of billing-and-cooing. Comes somewhere between "good" and "fair."

The Supplementaries.

Glimpses at record-breakers for the year 1935, ranging from bobsledding and ski-jumping to track and field events, including tennis, wrestling, boxing, football, rowing and baseball; "The Feminine Invasion," a treatise on how woman can hold her own in sports which require skill and co-ordination, rather than sheer muscular strength; some hilarious shots of fat ladies trying the scissors-hold; Hollywood Snapshots, edited by Harriet Parsons, really valuable for the views of Will Rogers playing his last game of polo on the Uplifters Club field in California, the name of which has now been changed to the Will Rogers Field; "Mickey and His Kangaroo," all about a boxing kangaroo which gives out beep! beeps! leads with a smart one to the button and carries a substitute in what, for lack of a better term, might be called a kangaroo's rumble seat. Pluto, the dog, is there, ingratiatingly dumb, still adoring his master, Mickey—which most of us are guilty of, likewise.

Prince Omwah, Mystic, Held as Theft Suspect

Los Angeles, Dec. 20 (AP).—Joseph Apherson, known as Prince Omwah, Hollywood mystic, was arrested today for suspicion of grand theft. Police said five women complained he obtained a total of $10,000 from them on promises of marriage.

Metropolitan

"MAN OF IRON." Warner Brothers-First National picturization of a story by Dawn Powell, adapted to the screen by William Wister Haines, featuring Barton MacLane, supported by Dorothy Peterson, Mary Astor, John Eldredge and John Qualen. Directed by William McGann. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

The Metropolitan must figure that everyone is too busy buying last-minute presents for Aunt Susie to go to the cinema, anyhow. For here is a 100 per cent words-of-one-syllable movie.

It might have been the story of a man, or a story of iron, but it isn't either. It is merely a series of cheap, little "quickie" incidents, strung together and spelled out laboriously in really atrocious dialogue for the cash customers.

The first line tells you right out that Chris is "a good fellow, who knows machinery and never fires a man." A few lines further along, if you're still listening, you'll learn that he is to be promoted to the front office and will have an assistant who wants his job and who smiles on the side of his face when he leads poor Chris astray. It's as simple as that—simpler.

Is Napkin-Tucker.

Chris is not innocent, he is just dumb. Moreover, he is big and noisy and given to remarks about "hooch" and "grub," and would tuck his napkin in his dress shirt if there were a party to which he would wear a dress shirt. And there is.

Being in a holiday mood, after shopping for hours in that 80-mile gale, the only thing that aroused our ire was the fact that there might have been some grand photographic shots in the ironworks, and there isn't even one.

Mr. Barton MacLane hasn't been a bad gangster lately, but judging from this exhibition he is not an actor. He does talk loudly.

No one in its matters except Dorothy Peterson, who seemed to be really trying, and John Qualen, who always does a great deal with little or nothing.

Shorts Excel.

However, in that aforementioned Christmas spirit, we rush to report that there are two very superior shorts on view here.

First, there's Fifi D'Orsay, who is fun in "Katz Pajamas," and the whole short is crammed full of talented people who can dance and sing and be amusing.

The other nice item is a survey of this country's natural wonders from Endless Caverns to Yellowstone—fine photography of which there could be more.

The newsreel completes a bill, in which the feature falls far short of being a feature.

Columbia

"THE GAY DECEPTION." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of an original screen play by Stephen Avery and Don Hartman, with additional dialogue by Arthur Richman, starring Francis Lederer, with Frances Dee, Benita Hume, Alan Mowbray, Akim Tamiroff, Lenox Pawle and Ferdinand Gottschalk. Directed by William Wyler. Reviewed Friday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

The Christmas lull is upon the theater—a breathing spell the cinema palaces take almost every year to prepare for the holidays' superlative attractions. So, we have a picture such as "The Gay Deception," an innocuous piece of motion picture entertainment.

Through Tuesday night next, then, this picture will hold forth, presenting a mildly entertaining yarn of a masquerading prince and a girl living the life of Riley as a result of winning a $5,000 sweepstake grand prize. Laid in New York's Waldorf-Plaza Hotel, with the grand, milk-fund dinner and ball as the pivotal episode. "The Gay Deception" runs its course to a conclusion not entirey foreign to the audience's divinations.

It is entertainment, after a fashion; but in the Yuletide season, no one seeks, or expects, too much in its screen fare, so the end of this particuar opus are quite satisfactorily met.

Lederer Shines.

Perhaps of greater interest than the play itself is the reappearance here of the distinguished Francis Lederer. Not a role greatly to enhance his histrionic stature is this prince-bell hop deception, but his quiet manner, his soothing voice and his pleasing personality are sufficiently manifest to make his part the outstanding one.

Assisting, as the other gay deceiver, is Frances Dee, whose idea of really "living" is spending the $5,000 in New York and at the swankiest hostelry. She is pleasing in her work.

Others in the cast include Benita Hume, as a society girl; Alan Mowbray, as an English lord; Lenox Pawle, as the consul general, and Ferdinand Gottschalk, as the hotel's second in command.

The supplementary program includes "Little Sinner," an Our Gang comedy, with Spanky playing hookey from Sunday school; "Hooray for Rhythm," with Johnny Johnson's orchestra, Joan Abbott and Patsy Riley, and a release of the Metrotone News.

U. S. Group Sends Protest to Hitler

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 20.—A cable to Adolph Hitler protesting the putting to death of Rudolph Claus, formerly treasurer of the German International Labor Defense, convicted of high treason, was dispatched tonight by the National Committee for the Defense of Political Prisoners.

Signing the message were John Haynes Holmes, Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Julius Hochman, Lincoln Steffens, Norman Thomas, Upton Sinclair, Arthur Garfield Hayes, Waldo Frank, Sherwood Anderson and others.

Evangelist of Air Faces Tax Charge

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Dec. 20.—Ethel Duncan, evangelist known on the radio as "The Good Samaritan of the Air," surrendered today to face a Federal indictment charging failure to file an income tax return in 1931, although she allegedly made more than $86,000.

China Is Selling Silver to U. S., Official Admits

Nanking Regime Seeking Reserves to Bolster Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Dec. 21 (Saturday).—For the first time since the nationalization of silver, a government official admitted today that direct shipments of silver were being made by Chinese Government banks to the United States.

A spokesman said silver was being sold by the banks to the Chase National Bank and the National City Bank of New York "in order to provide additional reserves (foreign exchange) for exchange stabilization."

A large shipment of silver was reported aboard the President Lincoln leaving for the United States tonight

The amount of silver shipped was reliably estimated to be about $4,000,000.

Silver Smuggled.

Reports to the Commerce Department yesterday told of quantities of silver smuggled from China to Japan and resold later in the world markets, which the Treasury recently abandoned as a source of its silver purchases.

In one informed quarter it was hinted simultaneously, that the Treasury's shift in policy might have aimed in part at this practice, since such smuggling would thereby be less profitable.

Making no explanation, Treasury officials, meanwhile stood by their decision to confine future silver acquisitions largely to direct transactions with the governments of nations which themselves produce the metal.

Trade Promotion.

Seeking the meaning behind the change in methods of carrying out the silver program, informed Washingtonians advanced the possibility that in this way the Treasury was seeking to promote the New Deal trade program by buying from countries with which reciprocal tariff treaties may be negotiated.

In this connection it was recalled that an official of the Bank of Mexico, the entire production of which country the Treasury has acquired this year, recently proposed tariff concessions in exchange for a higher price on the silver purchased by the United States.

These developments shared interest yesterday with disclosures that:

Despite contrary predictions as to the result of the silver purchase program, American exports to China for the first nine months of the year were scarcely half the total for the same period of 1934.

Conference Opposed.

That Treasury officials were frowning upon proposals for the assemblage of an international conference to straighten out the present confused silver situation.

That silver continued to pour into the United States from Great Britain after the Treasury abandoned the London market as bullion previously purchased reached these shores.

Commerce Department figures on trade with China showed a 10 months drop from $60,540,000 to $31,667,000.

The department's weekly summary of silver imports showed receipts of $13,761,000 in silver for the week ended December 13, of which $10,180,000 came from the United Kingdom. The total compared with $10,250,000, $22,815,000 and $13,069,000 in the three preceding weeks.

Reports to the department, meanwhile, showed that in the first nine months of this year, Japan exported silver to the value of 144,000,000 yen as compared with 7,000,000 yen in the same period of 1934. September exports were 21,000,000 yen this year and 1,000,000 last year.

This was said to be far out of proportion to the known stocks of silver in Japan, or its recorded imports.

Weather

during the day. Baltimore, as well as Washington, reported flurries early yesterday. Snow and colder weather were reported for New England.

In the mountains of western Maryland the snow banked to a depth of 3 feet. Similar measurements were made in northern West Virginia, though the average fall was but a foot.

On the Eastern Shore one death was attributed to the snow last night. Luther Towers, 55, of Trappe, was killed by an automobile on the Trappe and Choptank Bridge.

Out on the Great Plains the temperature sank below the zero mark. Sub-zero readings were general over eastern South Dakota. Iowa's lowest was 14 degrees below at Spirit Lake.

By the Associated Press.

The threat of snow drifts on the highways of the Shenandoah Valley was met by the determination of State highway workers to operate scrapers all last night if necessary, as Virginia braced against one of the coldest snaps of the winter.

At Winchester, B. G. P. Bozel, resident engineer, ordered his foremen to keep roads open for the heavy pre-Christmas travel. A high wind that whipped the flakes into drifts, promised however, to sweep the sky clear of clouds as well.

Strasburg reported an inch of snow on the ground early in the night, with the temperature at 18 and falling rapidly. Similar conditions prevailed at Harrisonburg.

Richmond faced the coldest morning so far this winter, with the weatherman hinting at a 17 degree minimum. The previous low was 20 degrees on December 5.

This Giddy World.

New York, Dec. 20.

FOR most of the world, Christmas cheer is in the air . . . But the "At Liberty" ads in the stage paper, Billboard, indicate that some performers need a Santa Claus . . . I like best this ad: "At Liberty: Fire act, Blow Torch in eyes and mouth, on Face. Mold lead in mouth. Sealing Wax on tongue. Several other fire tricks. Iron Tongue Act with Cannon. Lift weights with eyelids. Go any place" . . . In an adjoining column is this ad from a musician: "At Liberty: Alto Sax. Read and hot jam plenty. No dope. Write only truths. Merry Christmas."

Ranking second only to Charlie Chaplin, and at times outclassing him, is Harpo Marx, and the evidence at hand is "A Night at the Opera" . . . The difficulty of comparing Chaplin and Harpo is the extent of the difference in their technique . . . They are alike only in that both are mute . . . From that point on, they diverge in method, for Harpo is an impish underdog who believes in the grim equity of an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth . . . Chaplin's mournful eyes are forever peering ahead to a mirage which reveals the meek inheriting the earth . . . Not for Harpo the Chaplinesque resignation to the slings and arrows of fortune, nor for him the Chaplin formula of fashioning your tears into a backdrop for comedy . . . Belabor Chaplin and the little man will grimace forlornly, tip his derby humbly and take off with a hop, skip and jump that flutters his baggy trousers . . . If someone so much as touches the brim of Harpo's ludicrous hat, rest assured that immediately thereafter Harpo will hit that person heavily on the skull with some blunt instrument . . . There are no ifs, ands or buts to qualify Harpo's retaliation . . . It is so written . . . Therein he and Chaplin differ in technique as widely as the poles.

• • • •

But if both are mute, Harpo's advantage is that he is amazingly articulate through the medium of his harp . . . This is what gives his performance shade and tone, for it is the one instrument which seems entirely too ethereal for this ruffianly mute . . . He could have mastered a piano, or a violin, or an accordion without changing his comic status, but the unexpectedness of a harp responding to his fingers gives depth to slapstick . . . Chaplin, playing his violin left-handed, can't quite match Harpo in musical equipment . . . In wardrobe, Chaplin has the advantage . . . His baggy trousers and large shoes have been taken from burlesque wardrobes, but he raised them to high estate . . . His derby hat, his bow tie, his cane and his violin case are big-timey, for he has symbolized in them all the generations of middle-class respectability, which he represents . . . Harpo's broken down opera hat, his cane with a horn attached to it, his overcoat and his incongruous curls are excellent, but not so excellent as Chaplin's wardrobe and accessories . . . But I'd say that Harpo ranks closest to the Britisher in any all-time listing.

Arts Commission Pleased by Span

The Fine Arts Commission yesterday afternoon inspected the Calvert Street Bridge formally opened Thursday night, and expressed itself pleased with the finished span, according to H. P. Caemmerer, secretary. It also approved the progress in the development of the Mall in accordance with the L'Enfant plan of 1792 as modified by the McMillan Commission of 1901.

Earlier the commission inspected a proposed site on Rock Creek Parkway for a memorial to the former French Ambassador, Jules Jusserand, and gave its general approval to a model for the large western entrance to Arlington National Cemetery.

"Behind this figure is a flying winged youth, carrying a warrior's helmet to a higher realm, the spirit of immortality."

'Expenses' Granted To Mrs. Vanderbilt

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 20. — Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt's request for an allowance of $197.10 for expenses of each week-end her daughter, Gloria Laura Morgan Vanderbilt, spends with her, was granted today by Surrogate James J. Foley.

The order issued also permits guardians of the child's $4,000,000 estate to pay $3,000 next year in monthly payments of $250 to Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, mother of Mrs. Vanderbilt, who testified against her daughter in the custody suit which resulted in Gloria's being sent to live with her aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, for five days of each week.

In addition the order sets aside $1,500 for Gloria's medical, surgical and dental needs. In her petition to the surrogate last Tuesday Mrs. Vanderbilt asked only the $197.10 weekly allowance in lieu of the $48,000, including a personal allowance of $9,000, received this year for the support and maintenance of herself and Gloria.

Alley Authority Offers to Sell Land Holdings

Right to Rule on Proposed Development Retained by Agency.

Real estate holdings of the Alley Dwelling Authority were placed on the open market yesterday.

John F. Ihlder, executive officer, told the West End Citizens Association that the ADA would be glad to receive offers from responsible parties. The association recently criticized the authority's slum clearance and land development program on the west side of Washington.

Ihlder's announcement was in the form of a reply to a letter from Charles L. Norris, chairman of one of the association's committees, quoting a resolution asking the ADA to state its terms for sale of two squares which formerly contained sub-standard dwellings.

Before selling, however, the authority would wish to know what the proposed redevelopment would be, said Ihlder.

"If, for example," he advised Norris, "it is proposed to develop a site for an apartment building, and this proposal is accepted, the authority may wish to impose certain restrictions as to land occupancy, etc., in the public interest. It could not release this land to a possible exploitation by simply announcing a sale price and then selling to anyone irrespective of the use to be made of it."

Offers should be made publicly, said Ihlder, promising that if any or all of them are rejected the authority will publish its reasons.

"If an offer is made by a governmental or a quasi-public agency," he continued, "whose use would be more in the public interest than would private development, the authority reserves the right to sell to such agency at a price that will merely cover costs of acquisition.

"Or, if it believes the public interest will best be served thereby, the authority may retain and itself develop and manage the property. Nevertheless, the authority always welcomes offers by responsible parties and is ready to revise its plans up to the time of definite commitments if any of these offers propose something better than it has in view."

Woman's Slayer Says 'She Made Face at Him'

Port Angeles, Wash., Dec. 20 (AP).—Because Dora Andrus Reimer, 27, made a funny face at him, Tom Coppas, 46, shot and killed her, he testified today at his murder trial. But he added he "would always love her."

Coppas pleaded insanity. He told the jury he once was engaged to Miss Reimer, a waitress, but the engagement had been broken.

Silver, Bereft Of Bids, Slides 2 Cents Lower

Price Here Off to 51¾; London Quotation Set at 48.29.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 20.—Imported bar silver declined 2 cents to 51¾ cents an ounce in New York today, the lowest price since October 10, 1934. Today's quotation, posted by Handy & Harman, leading bullion dealers, was fixed without the benefit of a London price, the second time this week that such a rare occurence has taken place.

Reports from London to New York metal circles indicated no letup in the chaotic conditions that have prevailed in the world's silver center since December 9, when the United States Treasury temporarily withdrew its support.

Shortly after the New York price was posted, announcement was made in London that silver dealers had agreed upon a price of 21¾ pence, seven-sixteenths of a penny less than Thursday's figure. The United States equivalent is 48.29 cents an ounce.

Dispatches from the British capital indicated that sales of silver were prorated on the basis of 8 per cent of the offerings, with the United States Treasury again the principal taker. London dealers estimated that there were 15,000,000 ounces of silver in that market awaiting disposal.

McLellan Stores Co. today announced resumption of dividends on the preferred stock with a declaration of $2 a share. The dividend is payable February 1 to stock of record January 24. It is conditional, the company stated, upon consummation on or before January 24 of the company's plan of recapitalization.

The previous payment on the old preferred shares was ordered in April, 1932.

Washington Rapid Transit Reports Gain

Operating Income for 11 Months Up $25,373 Over Last Year.

The Washington Rapid Transit Co. in a statement filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission reports for November operating revenues of $40,072.69, which compares with $34,989.97 in November last year. Expenses and taxes also increased for the month, the figures being $34,175.53 this year against $31,069.39, in 1934. Net November operating income was $5,897.16, which compares with $3,920.58 a year ago, again of $1,976.58.

Operating revenues in the first 11 months of this year totaled $415,204.66, an increase of $44,149.34 over the like period a year ago. Operating expenses and taxes called for $358,117.97, an increase of $18,775.76, but far below the gain in operating revenues and leaving operating income of $57,086.69, an improvement of $25,373.58.

After all the usual deductions from gross the bus line reported a total net income of $37,753.44, in comparison with only $8,431.55 in the comparable period in 1934, or a jump of $29,321.89 over last year. In making this striking gain in net revenues the company carried 4,106,361 passengers during the 11 months.

Court Refuses Writ To Enjoin Dividend

Paterson, N. J., Dec. 20 (AP).—Vice Chancellor Vivian M. Lewis denied today a preliminary injunction to Alexander Guttmann, of Long Beach, L. I., who sought to have the Republic Steel Corporation restrained from declaring an inital dividend of $1.50 on its new cumulative prior preference, Series A stock.

The Vice Chancellor in a memorandum ruled that "the bill of complaint may be retained in this case until the further order of the court and both complainant and defendant can be heard at a regular hearing."

Nickel Plate Ordered To Cash 44 Bonds

New York, Dec. 20 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice John L. Walsh today ordered the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Co. (Nickel Plate) to cash 44 $1,000 bonds for two owners, who were refused payment when the bonds fell due on October 1, last.

When payment was not made October 1, the owners carried the claim to the State courts. The railroad first resisted on technical grounds and when that was overruled, a general denial of the charges was entered, but admission was made that the two plaintiffs had not been paid.

The Market

Demand for Air Stocks and Mild Revival in Metals and Motors Marks Dull Day.

New York, Dec. 20.—The holiday spirit of lethargy and lack of speculative enterprise was in the air, and although the turnover in stocks was slightly larger than that of yesterday, it failed to come up to the 1,500,000 mark. Prices were irregular, without marked trend, but with the tone moderately steady. Some of the best type of stocks, notably American Telephone, had to absorb liquidation, which unsettled the market a little. Bonds were dull. Silver was down and May wheat dropped one-eighth of a cent, to 99⅛ cents a bushel.

Money markets were colored by the preparations for the holidays and the income tax date financing. Temporarily an answer was given to the excess reserves question by the reduction of $600,000,000 this week, brought about largely by the heavy cash payments made by the banks to the Treasury for the December 15 loans and the income tax collections.

Meanwhile gold holdings rose another $30,000,000 to a new high record, but the immediate effect on excess reserves had an offset in the rise of $61,000,000 in currency circulation. Circulation probably will expand further next week. It is now $315,000,000 higher than a year ago, but commodity prices are higher and business is more active, especially in the consumption industries.

Easy Money Ahead.

It may require some time for the current loss in excess reserves to be made good, but it would make not the slightest difference in the money market if that never were done. Excess reserves still would be at an extremely high level. The seasonal demand for business money is running out, brokers' loans are not increasing to speak of (aside from borrowings by dealers in Government bonds) and January always sees an influx of money into this center.

Money rates are certain to be low for a long time, probably until the budget has been balanced, business has returned to a genuine prosperity basis, and the stabilization of the leading currencies has helped to bring about a redistribution of the gold now held here.

Anxiety over francs continued and the quotation barely held above the price at which gold shipments from Paris once more would be profitable. In the past week the Bank of France regained a little gold, but it is unlikely to rebuild far its reserves. However, the gold supply at the Bank of France is ample for all needs, so long as other flights of capital do not come too frequently or last too long. The outlook for the franc on gold was obscure enough when viewed simply from an economic standpoint; but it has become increasingly a political question, and the Italian dispute has worsened matters.

Silver currencies, so-called, were quiet in the face of a continued decline in the price of foreign metal. Th day's fall was 2 cents in silver, bringing the price here down to 51¾ cents an ounce. Silver is getting close to what might be called the proper relative price with other commodities, and the decline should not go much further before meeting with natural support; but whether in view of the vicissitudes to which silver has been subjected it ever will regain the old prestige in the Orient as a currency medium, remains to be seen. Certainly, it can't stand much more monkey business, and even Senator Thomas at long last is beginning to realize, although vaguely, as might be expected, something of the sort.

Speculators in the silver shares kept their courage, raised yesterday by hints from the Treasury that metal would be bought from those countries in which the leading mines are to be found. Cerro de Pasco rose a point. Smelters was firm. Other mining stocks advanced. Nickel recovered more than a point. Homestake gained 5 points, but Howe Sound dropped 2 points.

Airplane issues continued to gain height. Douglas was the best climber. Along with United it reached a new high price. Bendix rose a point. A few of the motor issues came to life. Chrysler was notably strong. General Motors moved up after early indecision. Most of the steels hardened fractionally, as did the rails. Oils were shoved along at a slow pace. Chemicals were mixed, leading to rumors of investment selling in the leader. Irregularity was the rule for the foods, utilities, equipments, merchants and mail orders.

Puts and Calls.

Employes of the Curb Exchange will be given a Christmas bonus through the contributions of individual members. The amount of the bonus has not been determined. Stock Exchange employes, it appears, in spite of the greater prosperity of their organization, will have to carry their positions over to another year . . . With two exceptions in the last ten years, industrial share prices have been higher on January 10 than on December 20. Some of the present buying is based on the belief that this year will conform to the rule . . . In semiofficial quarters it is insisted that no recapitalization plan for Radio will be announced at the next directors' meeting, to be held December 27, but confidence is high that something is coming soon for the B shares and the common stock. In almost any brokerage house the immediate goal of the common stock price is said to be 20 . . . SEC's latest object of inquiry is Louisiana Oil.

Financial Notes.

Fundamental Investors, Inc., of which Mackubin, Legg & Co. are national distributors, has declared a dividend of 6 cents a share payable January 2 to stockholders of record December 19. Investments at market prices of December 17 exceeded cost by $828,377.44.

The Columbia National Bank has declared a quarterly dividend of $1.50 per share payable January 2 to stockholders of December 31.

In the Western district alone, loading of live stcok for the week ended December 14 totaled 10,754 cars, a decrease of 2,780 cars below the same week in 1934.

Ore loading amounted to 5,921 cars, an increase of 225 cars above the preceding week, 2,832 cars above the corresponding week in 1934 and 2,490 cars above the corresponding week in 1933.

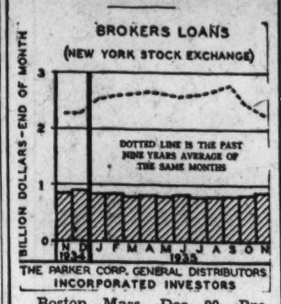
All districts reported increases for the week of December 14 in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight compared with the corresponding week last year. All districts also reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1933.

Rise in Stock Values Rests on Cash Basis



Boston, Mass., Dec. 20.—Brokers' loans increased slightly during November, but were only 2½ per cent greater than a year ago. The value of all stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange increased 33 per cent, and the trading gained 175 per cent over a year ago. This condition shows that there still is relatively little borrowed money used in the purchase of stocks.

Advertising Gains 8% Over Year Ago

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 20.—Newspaper advertising lineage in 84 cities last month registered a gain of slightly less than eight per cent over November, 1934, the Publication Advertising Age reported today.

Led by automotive advertising, which increased more than 100 per cent over last year, newspapers covered in the magazine's survey reported an increase of 12,717,767 lines over November of last year. The total lineage reported was 171,895,149 lines as compared with 159,177,382 for November of 1934.

Retail and general advertising, the publication said, were also above last year's November total. Classified lineage, which Advertising Age said reflected a more active employment situation, increased 2,610,588 lines over 1934, making the 1935 total in this classification 24,573,090 lines.

Magazine advertising for December of this year declined approximately 0.5 per cent.

London—With the political outlook being thought of as more favorable, prices on the stock exchange today recovered most of Thursday's losses, gilt-edged securities improving even further. Transatlantic issues held firm, although business was restricted because of the approaching holiday. The market closed steady.

Paris—Financial circles viewed the international situation as slightly less acute, prices rallied on the bourse today. Rentes, bank stocks and industrials regained some of their losses and international issues were mostly stronger. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—The boerse closed dull today after a quiet session, wherein prices moved irregularly.

Building Activity Near 5-Year Peak

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 20.—Building construction awards during the current week will aggregate $86,817,000, the highest figure in almost five years, the Engineering News Record announced today. Acceleration of public works projects was mainly responsible for the heavy increase.

This type of work accounted for $81,117,000 of the total and private awards for the balance of $5,700,000. Public awards were made up of $34,580,000 Federal projects and $46,537,000 of State and municipal works. The largest individual undertaking was the $29,000,000 by Tennessee Valley Authority forces.

Wheat Rallies As War Clouds Grow Darker

Estimated Increase in Winter Yield Checks Upward Move.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 20.—Reported fresh warlike moves in Europe, although at first ignored today as a grain market influence, led later to 1⅜ cents rally of wheat prices. The Washington official figures on domestic winter wheat seedings and crop condition were construed as somewhat bearish, but came too late to be a factor in today's market.

Wheat closed irregular, ¼ lower to ½ higher than yesterday's finish, May 99@99⅛, corn ⅛ off to ½ up, May 59⅝@59¾, oats ⅛@½ advanced, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to 5 cents gain.

Jock McAvoy Knocks Out Babe Risko in First Round at Garden

Briton Sends ChampDown Six Times

Batters the Middleweight King, but Title Is Not at Stake.

Risko Is Easy Target; Counted Out While Sitting on Floor.

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Jock McAvoy, the sturdiest son of Old England to reach these shores in many a day, tonight knocked out the middleweight champion, Babe Risko, of Syracuse, N. Y., in the first round of a bout scheduled for ten rounds in Madison Square Garden. McAvoy, who weighed 168½, knocked down Risko, 161¼, six times before the American was counted out.

Risko's title was not at stake as the result of both fighters entering the ring above the middleweight limit of 160 pounds.

McAvoy rushed from his corner at the opening gong to floor Risko with a right-hand smash to the jaw. Risko bounced up without a count, but the nervous Briton, slugging from all angles with a ferocity not in keeping with the custom set by many of his predecessors, rushed in again, set up the American with a looping left and then sent over another crusher. Risko, his eyes dazed, stayed down for the count of six this time, before struggling to his feet on wobbly legs.

He was game to the core, this Risko, but the Briton, having got the jump on him, refused to allow him to get set. He strafed him with lefts until he lifted his chin, then rifled over rights. They looped over Risko's shaking guard and found their mark on the side of the jaw.

Down for Third Time.

Risko went down the third time, under that looping right, and it was doubtful if he had any record of proceedings after that. He staggered to his feet at the count of five this time, getting up because that's what fighters are supposed to do, but he was a sorry picture as he backed away from the white-faced Englishman who followed him around the ring, always curving in that left to straighten him up for the kill.

On Rubbery Legs.

Risko, who gained his title from Teddy Yarosz about three months ago, went down the fourth time from a light blow that pushed him backward. His rubbery legs refused to carry him and he sagged to the floor, a trickle of blood on his lips. He took a count of three this time before again crawling to his feet to meet the onslaught of leather that the Briton was rushing across the ring to mete out.

Risko backed away, holding up a feeble left hand to ward off the inevitable right hand that was coming over. The punches were sweeping aside his guard and throwing him off balance when they failed to make a clean hit on his chin. The Englishman dropped him the fifth time for a count of eight and again Risko staggered up, tried to back away and keep on his feet, but McAvoy, holder of the British middleweight and light heavyweight crowns, cornered him on the ropes, then dropped him for the final count. Risko took the count sitting on the floor, oblivious to proceedings. The time of the knockout was 2 minutes 48 seconds.

In the semi-final, staged after the main go, Solly Krieger, 159¾, New York, floored Jack Ennis, 161, Asbury Park, N. J., four times in the first round before Referee Billy Cavanaugh stepped in to save Ennis from further punishment.

The paid attendance at the bouts was 4,164. Gross receipts were $10,135.

One stroke back in second place were Earl Glandt, Glendale pro, and his amateur partner, Jack Holbrook, with 65. Tied for third were George Hine, Santa Monica pro, and Deitrick Kohlsaat, of Glendale, and a pair of amateurs, Bob Wood, of Glendale, and Bing Crosby, the motion picture star, with pars of 66.

Rudolph Wins, Clinches Tie For Title

Defeats Kelly, 125 to 35; Taberski and Natalie Also Triumph.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, clinched at least a tie for first place in the world's pocket billiard championship tonight by defeating George Kelly, of Philadelphia, 125 to 35, in a 27-inning match.

Rudolph, winner of the 1934 tournament, gained his seventh victory in eight starts at the expense of the national champion. He still has to meet Jimmy Caras, sensational young Wilmington (Del.) player, in the final match tomorrow.

Caras, idle today, has won six matches and lost two. If he should beat Rudolph tomorrow a tie would result and a playoff for the title would be necessary.

Neither Rudolph nor Kelly had the fine edge tonight that is supposed to mark championship play. The high runs were clusters of 22 by Rudolph in the tenth and fifteenth innings. Kelly's high was 20 in the second frame.

Two More Games.

The other games on today's program cleaned up the tournament schedule, except for two games and the possible playoff, which will be held Sunday night if necessary.

Frank Taberski, Schenectady, defeated Marcel Camp, of Detroit, 125 to 117, in the first afternoon clash, lasting 17 innings, and Pasquale Natalie, of Chicago, beat Willie Mosconi, of Philadelphia, 125 to 103, in the second, a 31-inning duel.

Kelly and Mosconi finished in third place, each with five victories and four losses. They will play off for the position and third-place deadlock with Charles Seaback, Astoria, N. Y., and Bennie Allen, Kansas City, while Camp, Taberski and Joe Prochita were deadlocked for the cellar berth.

Sets World Swim Mark.

Moscow, Dec. 20 (AP).—A new world record for the 100 meter breast stroke swim was claimed today for the Russian, Boichenko, a former sailor. Boichenko was clocked in 1:08 for the distance.

The listed world's record for the 100 meter breast stroke swim is 1:12.4 set by J. Cartonnet of France in 1933.

Dream True! Al Delaney Climbs

'I'll Have Great Fighter,' Mitchie Once Said; Now He Has.

D. C.'s No. 1 Sensation to Meet Mitchell in Latest Test.

By Bill McCormick.

IN Al Delaney, Washington's No. 1 fistic sensation who fights Terry Mitchell at the Turner Arena next Monday night, is embodied the realization of a dream by a former Washingtonian.

Billy Mitchie, a construction engineer, is the one who dreamed and his dream was that one day he would have a good fighter. Not that he ever had managed a fighter—a construction engineer has plenty to do just sticking to his constructing—but he was a rabid boxing fan and always had visions of someday pulling the strings on a perfect pug just for the fun of it.

As a boxing fan, Mitchie was a frequent dropper-in at Ye Olde Shirtee Shoppe of Mons. Goldilock Ahearn—as what boxing fan isn't?—and almost always he would turn the conversation around to his ambition.

Great Fighter.

"Lissen," he would inform Mons, Goldilocks, "Some day I'm going to have a fighter Not just an ordinary fighter, mind you, but a great fighter"

So it went until Mitchie's duties took him to Detroit. One night at the ringside a big, handsome kid climbed through the ropes to do six rounds of preliminary fighting.

"Otto Borchuk, substituting for Kid Driftwood, or somebody," announced the announcer.

Mitchie liked the looks of the big kid immediately. Borchuk hit the canvas nine times in two rounds—and Mitchie still liked his looks. In the third round, Borchuk got off the floor once more, swung a haymaker and knocked his opponent flatter than Mahatma Gandhi's stomach.

Signed Him Up.

Mitchie really liked him then—so much so that he signed him up.

"Borchuk's a helluva name for a fighter," was about the first thing Billy told Otto. "Let's think of another."

"My mother's name was Delaney," volunteered Borchuk.

"Shure, an' tiz a great auld Oirish fightin' name," Mitchie agreed, relapsing into the vernacular in his excitement. "From now on you're Al Delaney."

The fighter and manager have been practically inseparable since that time. Realizing he lacked the knowledge of the devious boxing game necessary to give his boy all the breaks, Mitchie approached one Dave Sonnenberg—one of the better fight managers.

"I gotta heavyweight I'd like you to take a piece of," Mitchie told Sonnenberg.

Backed Eddie Mader.

"I've got all of the best heavyweights in the ring," answered Dave, referring, of course, to his Eddie Mader, generally considered No. 1 white hope.

"Come take a gander at my boy in the gymnasium and see what you think," insisted Mitchie.

Dave took his gander at Delaney and immediately accepted a piece of him.

Bergman Denies Seats For Bowl Battle Gone

Published reports that all seats have been sold for the Orange Bowl game in Miami New Year's Day were denied yesterday by "Dutch" Bergman, director of Catholic University, whose football team will be one of the contestants.

"Local fans who want to make the trip with the team have been calling on the telephone all day to ask why we didn't reserve a bloc of seats," Bergman said. "I want them to know that we do have a section reserved and anybody from Washington desiring to see the game will be assured of getting a reserved seat if they will communicate with the Catholic University athletic office immediately."

The Cardinals will leave for the southland next Saturday, arriving a day in advance of the game.

Marshall Sues Mat "Trust" for Million

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 20 (AP).—Everett Marshall, a claimant to the heavyweight wrestling title, charged six sports promoters with forming a "monopoly on wrestling" in a suit filed today asking a million dollars damage.

One of the promoters, Paul Bowser, of Boston, termed the suit "just a publicity stunt." Bowser, at Boston, denied Marshall's charge of a monopoly in wrestling and said Marshall failed to "take" with Boston fans.

Another, Tom Packs, of St. Louis, admitted there was "more or less a gentleman's agreement" among the six promoters but denied the agreement constituted a "wrestling monopoly."

"We had to organize to protect ourselves and to get talent," Packs said at St. Louis. "When we are organized, managers and wrestlers can't dictate to us."

Marshall, who makes his headquarters here, declared in the suit, filed in Franklin County Common Pleas Court, that a partnership formed by the six promoters barred all outsiders and used only wrestler managed by the various partners.

Besides Bowser and Packs, he named as defendants Jack Curley, of New York; Joseph Mondt, of Los Angeles; Edward hite, of Chicago, and Ray Fabiani, of Philadelphia.

Marshall named the Curtis Publishing Co., of Philadelphia, as another defendant, alleging that the firm conspired with the promoters to "belittle" Marshall's ability and to "destroy his standing as a heavyweight contender" through an

Mitchell Gets Gallaudet Grid Post

Appointment Confirmed; Denied That He Will Be in Full Charge.

WALLY KRUG, head coach of football at Gallaudet College, last night acceded to the request of his gridmen, 25 strong, and officially confirmed the appointment of Orrel Mitchell, Gonzaga High School mentor, as assistant coach for the 1936 season.

Appointment of Mitchell, who is extremely popular at the Kendall institution, was demanded at a mass meeting of students and athletes earlier in the week. The Post, in an exclusive story, announced that he would be offered the position, and that he would accept.

Krug, however, denied that Mitchell will be given a full rein with the squad, but admitted that he will have plenty of work to do. The youthful Mitchell long has been a deep student of the game and the thoroughness of his technique was reflected in the success of his Gonzaga teams.

Oosterbaan Seen As Toledo Coach

Williamson Is Reported Likely Successor.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Dec. 20.—The Detroit Free Press said tonight a realignment of the football coaching staff at the University of Michigan appeared imminent, with the likelihood Bennie Oosterbaan, assistant line coach, would become football coach at Toledo University, suceeding Jim Nicholson, who resigned some time ago.

The papers said it also had learned from authoritative sources officials were considering Ivan Williamson, assistant Yale coach and former Michigan end, or Jack Blott, football and baseball coach at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., as the probable successor to Oosterbaan.

"Williamson is the most likely candidate to be sought in the event Oosterbaan, three-time all-American end, and Toledo University come to terms," the Free Press said. Blott formerly was a line coach at Michigan.

Shifts in the Wolverine coaching staff otherwise are not expected, the paper said, except as Oosterbaan's departure might affect the basketball staff, on which he is assistant coach.

Roosevelt Five Trims Forest Park, 18 to 15

Roosevelt High School's fast-traveling basketball team won its sixth victory of the season in eight starts yesterday, defeating Forest Park High of Baltimore on the Roosevelt Court, 18 to 15.

The Rough Riders staged a Garrison finish to pull the game out of the fire after trailing until the last two minutes of play. Roosevelt took a 14-13 lead at this point only to have the Marylanders take the lead again a few seconds later.

It was the last game of the year for Roosevelt.

Detroit Lions to Play All-Stars at Denver

Denver, Dec. 20 (AP).—The Detroit Lions, national professional football champions, will play an all-star National League team here New Year's Day. The Denver Post said today a fraternal organization probably would sponsor the contest.

Evans to Rule Sox's Farms, Is Report

Also Is Rumored in Line as General Manager of Dodgers.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Speculation still is rife concerning the baseball fate of Billy Evans, deposed business manager of the Cleveland Indians.

All that stood in his way to becoming president of the American Association was a matter of $7,500 in salary differences. He loomed large to warm the cold and empty chair of Bob Quinn as business manager of the National League Dodgers in Brooklyn.

Today there was a story gaining credence that he is to take charge of the Red Sox minor league interests. The Red Sox already have a business manager to spend the Yawkey millions in the person of Eddie Collins. But the club is slowly gathering a brood of farm clubs, and a man like Evans is needed to take charge of the chain as Branch Rickey handles the St. Louis Cardinals' outlying interests.

Perhaps the knowledge that Evans is dickering with the Red Sox may speed up a Dodger offer for his services. But Brooklyn couldn't bid against the Yawkey bankroll and the former American League umpire is still a high-priced executive despite his Cleveland showing.

Barney Oldfield Injured in Crash

'Going Just 40,' He Says; Hurts Are Slight.

By the Associated Press

"Just easing along at 40 miles an hour," the 57-year-old ex-king of automobile racers said in describing how his car overturned after being sideswiped by a truck.

After a delay of three hours, he continued westward for California to spend the Christmas holidays.

Hugo Schmitz, Jefferson City youth who drove the truck, assured Oldfield, "I'm mighty glad to have met you, but I'm sorry it had to be this way."

Junior, Boys Tennis Drawings Are Made

New York, Dec. 20 (AP).—Donald Leavens, of Northwestern University, and Isadore Bellis, Philadelphia schoolboy, today were placed at the top of the draw for the national indoor junior and boys tennis championships opening at the Seventh Regiment Armory, December 26.

Leavens heads a list of ten seeded for the junior competition, which has attracted a field of 85, including last year's boys' champion, Henry Daniels, jr., of Choate School. Bellis was placed at No. 1 on the list of eight players seeded for play in the boys' division. The latter has drawn a field of 69.

Chiseler Is Found With Conscience

Wake Forest, N. C., Dec. 20.—Al Dowtin, graduate manager of athletics at Wake Forest College, has found an erstwhile chiseler with a conscience.

Creavy Tops Nassau Golf With 65

Albany Pro 3 Under Par, Taking 2-Stroke Lead in $5,000 Open.

Horton Smith, Runyan in Tie for Second; 54 Holes Remain.

By the Associated Press.

NASSAU, Bahamas, Dec. 20.—A smartly played round of 65 that slashed three strokes from par figures, jumped Tom Creavy, Albany, N. Y., into the early lead today in the annual $5,000 British Colonial Open golf turnament.

Creavy's spurt pushed him past Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill., winner of the $2,500 top prize in the Miami Biltmore Open this week. Smith's card was 67.

With Smith in second place was Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., who had six 3s and three 4s for 30 on the par 34 out nine, only to slip slightly coming home.

Cleavy Out in 33.

A new course record, Creavy's sub-par score got its start when he chipped into the cup at the fifth for a birdie 3, finishing the first nine in 33.

He was dead to the pin with his tee shot at the eleventh for another birdie 2, rang up a birdie 3 at the thirteenth and a fourth birdie at the par 4 fourteenth.

One stroke back of Smith and Runyan, with 68's, were Tommy Armour, Boca Raton, Fla., and Willie Macfarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y.

Cruickshank in 69 Group.

Bunched at 69 were Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond, Va., last year's winner; Ted Turner, Pine Valley, N. J.; Leo Mallory, Noroton, Conn., and Ralph Beach, Baltimore, Md.

Still another shot back with 70's were Denny Shute, Chicago; Lou Waldron, Chicago; Terl Johnson, Winter Haven, Fla.; John Revolta, Milwaukee, P. G. A. champion; Mike Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y.; Clarence Doser, Rochester, N. Y., and Ralph Stonehouse, Indianapolis.

The field of 79 will play 36 holes tomorrow and the final 18 Sunday.

C. U. and G. W. Play Ole Miss. in 1936

Colonials Hosts, Cardinals to Visit Southerners.

Catholic University and George Washington University, the District's outstanding football rivals who abandoned their own series a few years ago, will have a common foe in the University of Mississippi eleven next season, an Associated Press dispatch reveals.

Catholic, which will meet "Ole Miss" in the Orange Bowl game at Miami New Year's Day, will journey to University, Miss., to meet the Southerners in their homecoming game the latter part of the esason. George Washington will tackle the enemy at Griffith Stadium, October 10.

The local schools are two of three new schools on Mississippi's schedule. Temple, which will be met in Philadelphia October 3, is the third newcomer. Marquette, one of 1935's outstanding teams, also appears on the list.

Risko Is Ordered To Battle Yarosz

Faces Possible Suspension in Pennsylvania.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 20.—The athletic commission said it notified Babe Risko today that he would be barred indefinitely from Pennsylvania if he was not ready to fight a return bout with Teddy Yarosz in Pittsburgh by January 1.

The commissioners held Risko violated the spirit of a contract under which he agreed, before winning the world middleweight boxing championship, to meet Yarosz again.

The commission reinstated Wrestlers Danno O'Mahoney, Ernie Dusek and Chief Little Wolf, and lifted suspensions on all except two of the other boxers and wrestlers who had been barred from appearing in Pennsylvania.

The exceptions, Mickey Walker and Lou Polster, were suspended for what the commission described as an "off-color" bout in Philadelphia.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

I AM taken to task, and not mildly, by Mr. Francis Stirling Wilson, of 6510 Summit avenue, Chevy Chase, who was sufficiently stirred by this department's approval of the Southeastern Conference's plan to countenance open subsidization of athletes to write:

POVICH.

"I read with great interest, to say nothing of disagreement, your remarks last week on the subject of subsidizing athletes in colleges. Conceding the sincerity of your attitude without question, may one be permitted to say you are entirely wrong? . . . The sportswriter's angle in ballyhooing college football is obvious and natural, but it is my sincere belief that sports writers who are attempting to professionalize college football are doing it irreparable injury. . . .

"If I understand correctly, the purpose of higher education is to equip men and women to live and contribute something to the rest of mankind. If that is true, I contend that not one penny should be paid to an athlete merely because he is an athlete, so long as there is a single young man or woman alive who is capable of making a better use of education than an athlete, and who needs such help.

"This is not to say that athletic ability and intellectual powers may not be found in the same person, because we know that the contrary frequently is true, but when the combination occurs, financial support should be afforded on the basis of intellectual capacity and not for athletic ability. If an athlete has no intellectual capacity, he does not belong in an educational institution. . . ."

SUBSIDIZATION, it seems, would, in after life, seriously affect the loyalty of graduates, Mr. Wilson holds: "My own college, it happens, is dependent to a considerable extent for financial support and for the perpetuation of certain worthwhile traditions, upon its alumni. I do not believe that the kind of alumni loyalty which calls for some sacrifice for a college would be forthcoming from an alumnus whose loyalty might be measured by the amount bid for his services in competition with other bidders.

"Looking ahead a bit, it seems a foregone conclusion that there would, under the system you advocate, be no amateur sports at all, but merely professional teams with no essential relation to the colleges whose uniforms they wear. The excellence of the team would be in direct ratio to the endowment of the college which could be diverted to salaries for the teams.

"Little Haverford College, a small Quaker institution near Philadelphia, which I am told has a large endowment, could easily buy the best football team in the United States. Whether the faculty, the alumni and the trustees would consider a winning football team of paid players a fair exchange for the distinction the college enjoys through its educational standards and cultural accomplishments, I seriously doubt.

"You and other sports writers frequently stress the fact that college football is a business and that the ballyhoo pays for the bowls and the stadiums. That is arguing in a perfect circle. Ballyhoo builds stadiums which require ballyhoo to fill them, to get money to build more stadiums to be filled by more ballyhoo . . . but if it is necessary to pay college players in order to maintain college football on such a grandiose scale, I believe it would be better to abolish the game."

WELL, I guess that makes both of us wrong. Maybe I didn't make myself clear last week, but I never did advocate professionalism as the solution to the college football muddle. I did approve subsidization, open and above board, as voted by the Southeastern Conference by a margin of 13 to 1. It seemed to me to be the lesser of two evils—the choice between a sorry sham at amateurism and open bidding for the prep school stars.

Football, as it was being conducted in the colleges, was contributing nothing in the molding of character which I had always been led to believe was the primary function of an institution for higher learning. Ideals that professors were attempting to inculcate in students in the class room were shamefully prostituted on the football field, where the colleges were represented by a collection of athletes procured through various and unethical forms of surreptitious subsidization.

And another thing: the Southeastern Conference's action with which I fell in so heartily did not provide for outright bidding for and payment to the football stars. It simply attempts to control a practice that has gotten far out of hand and which all attempts had failed to cure. Repeal of the prohibition law rid this Nation of a deal of its hypocrisy and a mild form of subsidization for football players is simply another step in the same direction.

Stock Clerks Beat the Cops, Uphold Prestige of Exchange

By Jack Diamond.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—It may be I am carrying my research into amateur sport too far but I attended the baskketball game between the New York Stock Exchange quintit and the cagers of the New York Police Department.

My scholarly curiosity was whetted. I wanted to know if a broker, keyed to the tumultous trading pitch of the "pit" could play as good basketball as a homicide squad detective, trained to stalk down dark alleys with pistol drawn in search of a murderous maniac.

But the influence of one's vocation on sport seems to be unimportant. Donna Fox, America's bobsled champion, is a mortician.

The Wall Streeters were a dashing looking lot and I am not at all sure that I do not agree with the distinguished gendarmes—they lost, 37-25—who muttered after the game that the brokers were only ex-college stars, recruited as legitimate stocks-and-bondsmen to save the basketball prestige of the New York Stock Exchange.

The bluecoats were more sturdy looking, because, after all, there usually still is something left of a policeman when you strip him of his star, gun, belt, holster and Can't Blame Louis Men for Canceling Battle in Havana.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Comes the revolution, Mr. Joseph Louis Barrow and his entourage do not wish to be in Havana, Cuba, for which I do not know that I blame them, because the Cubans are notoriously careless in the conduct of their revolutions, though you would think that by this time they would be sufficiently used to them to carry them on without interfering with business. But they do seem to have them in a careless manner, heedless of life and limb. And inasmuch as the entire Louis crowd might be mistaken for certain types of Cubans, which statement will certainly get ME shot the first time I set foot there again, when the firing begins Louis and company aim to be elsewhere, which just goes to show what an empty honor it is to be tagged as the greatest prize fighter in the world. One drunken soldado with a Mauser pistol could in a couple of shakes change Louis from the greatest living fighter to the greatest dead one.

I have paid several visits to Havana, and find it a fascinating, romantic, but jittery city to be in. The American is tagged "sucker" from the time he steps ashore from the jolly-boat that ferries him in from his liner, and the gendarmes, I find, are very hard boiled in their attitude of sympathy toward the down-trodden cab driver or merchant when he is trying to bilk a tourist out of three times what his services are worth. It is no use going to one of those comic opera cops and complaining that you are being robbed, because that is an insult immediately to their national honor and you never know when one of them is going to be so touchy that he will out with his sneezer and take immediate steps.

Almost anybody in Cuba with the price can decorate the inside of his pants pocket with a knife or pistol of some sort, and there is always the danger that you will be standing behind them or to one side when the shooting starts. That is nearly always fatal.

I DID NOT see any revolting or shooting when I was in Havana, but then that was in the heyday of prohibition here, when the winter tourist was sacred and anyone starting a revolution was promptly shot by both sides for interfering in the more important industry of selling Ron Bacardi and Maracas to suckers, not to mention getting their dough at the Casino and the race track and the Jai Alai frontons.

However, with repeal the tourist trade went flat and they tell me you could hunt deer at 3 o'clock in the morning at Sloppy Joe's, which same cafeteria ordinarily was packed right through until dawn. The season for revolutions was immediately declared open and the bag limit canceled. In one shindig, the beautiful Hotel Nacional, overlooking the sea and the harbor, was turned into a hastily improvised fortress, besieged, defended, shot and shelled, giving considerable shivers to all Americanos who at one time or another stopped there and sipped their Daiquiris out of long ice-filled glasses in the veranda bar downstairs.

It is impossible to do this comfortably either there or at the Floridian bar—where they have the greatest Daiquiri manufacturing team in the world, four men working on your drink—while they are occupied in blowing generals out of bed.

THEY are, I believe, holding their elections on or about January 11, and I believe that Mr. Michael S. Jacobs, the great promoter, was careless to schedule his prize fight involving Joe Louis and one Gastanaga shortly prior to that. Mr. Jacobs in his promotorial enthusiasm forgot the strenuous nature of a Cuban election in which votes are cast with six shooters, rifles and machine guns, the survivor being considered elected until the boys can go back up to the hills and dig up fresh ammunition, and I think he also neglected to figure the natural timidity of all prize fighters to gun fire.

Nor is it a timidity arising from a craven nature but merely from a regard of the value of their own skins. Jack Blackburn, Louis' teacher, is no stranger to the happy bark of the talkative Roscoe, and they tell me that he might be capable of cleaning out the island by himself with a gun in each paw, if his ire were brought sufficiently to the surface. But the hide of Joseph Louis Barrow is today worth several millions of potential dollars, but only if animated by the peculiar person that he is. Sufficiently punctured, whether by Federalists or rebels, its value except for dime museum exhibition purposes would be zero. The boys are quite right in feeling a little diffident to exposing this precious cuticle to aimless shooting.

The status quo at present seems to be that Mr. Jacobs will postpone the fight to February 2, or after the revolution which gives you a general idea of the decadence of that fiery little republic. In the old days, when it was properly operated, they would have postponed the revolution until after the fight and the last boat load of visitors had steamed past old Morro Castle, homeward bound.

Five Straight Favorites Beaten

Jockey Ritz Rides Confidently and Well to Win Tamiami Purse.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Dec. 20. The Tamiami Purse, a 1-mile test for 3-year-olds and upward, resulted in a Chicago triumph for Mrs. Emil Denemark when Brown Feathers, a $6.60 for $2 second choice, stepped past the judges two lengths clear here today. Thruster, in William Woodward's Belair Stud silks and coupled with James Fitzsimmons' Foreign Legion, took second money from T. Malone's Miss Rainbow by three parts of a length.

Brown Feathers, making her local premiere, sped the 8 furlongs in 1:38 4-5 under Jockey Frank Ritz. Plucky Baby was installed a slight favorite over the winner but her high turn of early speed faded in short order.

Ritz rode confidently and well on the winner. He was content to lay back behind the leaders for nearly six furlongs. Plucky Baby showed the way to the far turn, where Miss Rainbow and Thruster spurted and swarmed over her. Thruster drew to the front after turning for home, but Ritz had Brown Feathers in full stride on the outside and closing ground fast. The daughter of Brown Bud asserted her superiority halfway through the home lane and won well in hand.

It was a typical Tropical Park afternoon, with five favorites biting the dust in five straight events.

Wayne Wright was in a fair way to win the third race astride Pompeius in the stretch run, but his mount weakened and the horse finished a close third. Uppercut, paying $58.10 for a $2 ticket, came up on the outside to prevail in the blanket finish, beating Wedding Ring by a nose. Pompeius was a scant head farther away. Wedding Ring, Pompeius and Dornoch vied for the lead until Nick Wall charged with Uppercut in the final drive.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Tropical Park, Dec. 20.

Dear Al:

Clocker Mike put over another of his "good things" today and, what's more, he played him. Mike noted Regula Baddun's No. 1 post position and allowed as how the High Time gelding would never be headed. The clocker was right and he collected a $22 mutuel to prove it. I had a hard time squeezing a single winner across the line. After seeing four of my choices run second (two beaten by noses and another losing by a head) I had to send Mike and Trainer Joe down on the rail to root Jezreel home in the last. Both the mutuel play and the crowds continue to rise here, and the prediction that Florida will have the biggest year since 1929 seems right. The installation of the American "tote" has added to the popularity of this track, which now has virtually everything offered by the modern courses in the Nation, including a homey atmosphere. Apprentice Jackson is the new riding hero here. He specializes on a driving finish and many oldtimers are picking him as a future first-flight jockey. Speaking of finishes, the veteran Wall put up a couple today that would have made Snapper Garrison jealous. BILL.

First race—Cicary has proven a hard-luck juvenile. Finished second twice here and would have won both races but for going wide entering the stretch. Seems excellently suited here. Peace Move has worked well and deserves respect. Mad Dash to take care of the others.

Second race—Screen may surprise in this company tomorrow. That last was a bang-up effort and this plater may have been in need of a tightener. Picks up only one pound, while Prince Drake, recent winner, carries four additional pounds. General A. may awake to be third.

Third race—Herowin just missed taking a purse the other day and an effort back to that performance would make this one hard to beat. Personally, I'm going to string along. King's Pleasure and Bonanza for the place and show. Orinoco is going to awake very soon, if not tomorrow, according to Clocker Mike.

Fourth race—Speed is a fast thing and this abbreviated route may suit. I cannot find a workout by the one-time Vanderbilt sprinter, but I'm going to take a chance and shoot for the price. Don Creole, winner here opening day, is the one to beat. Empty Bottle to take care of the show.

Fifth race—Gift of Roses, Dancing Doll and Rock X is the way I prefer them in this sprint. To my mind this is the toughest race of the day and there's hardly one of the seven entries which doesn't rate consideration.

Sixth race—Unencumbered can do a lot of running when the right cash is down. The fact that Wright has been named to do the riding leads me to believe that a crackdown will be made. Taunton and article published in the Saturday Evening Post.

The wrestler charged that his drawing power was hampered by the magazine article and by the "shut-out" activities of the alleged combine.

He said the combine had rejected his offers to meet the recognized champion, Danno O'Mahoney, whom he described in the suit as "a second-rate wrestler of mediocre caliber."

Bowser Offers Marshall Chance at Title

Boston, Dec. 20 (AP).—Paul Bowser, Boston wrestling promoter named in Everett Marshall's $1,000,000 suit, tonight said it was filed by the wrestler's manager, Billy Sandow, for publicity purposes.

"Marshall is managed by Billy Sandow, who was formerly manager of Strangler Lewis," Bowser said. "The nearest thing to wrestling monopoly existed when Lewis was wrestling with John Pesek as his policeman.

"If Marshall is sincere in his desire to wrestle Danno O'Mahoney, I will give his his opportunity to prove his ability in a Boston ring. I have half a dozen wrestlers in mind, any one of whom would be able to give Marshall a real test. If he were able to win from the men I would match him with, I would be glad to sign him for a match with O'Mahoney. But I am quite sure Marshall will not come into Boston for.mat contests."

10 of Squad To Be Lost In 1936

26 Freshmen Are Given Numerals at Annual Sports Banquet.

TWENTY-THREE men who battled through mud and rain in more than one game, spent their spare time in the drudgery of after-dark practice and denied themselves pleasures their schoolmates enjoyed to help bring prestige to the University of Maryland, on the gridiron, received their reward last night, a gold-colored flannel "M."

But for them it was sufficient, and probably meant more than a costly gift. The presentations were made at the annual athletic banquet held in the university dining hall.

Those winning "M's" were Bernie Buschel, Lou Ennis, Vic Willis, Blair Smith, Carl Stalfort, Charlie Callahan, Johnny Birkland, Tom McLaughlin, Ed Minion, Mike Surgent, Bill Wolfe, Ed Fletcher, Bill Garrott, Frank DeArmey, Harry Gretz, Bill Guckeyson, Charlie Ellinger, Charlie Yeager, Johnny Gormley, George Sachs, Jack Stonebraker, Coleman Headley, Ed Daly, Bob Beall, varsity manager, and Charlie Whiteford, freshman manager.

Ten Men to Be Lost.

Ten of the group, virtually all linemen, will be lost by graduation. They are Ennis, Buscher, Stalfort, Callahan and Minion, all regular lineman, and McLaughlin, Gretz, Garrott, Sachs and Yaeger, reserves.

Varsity men, accompanied by friends, later were guests of the Rossbourg Club at its annual Christmas dance in the gym-armory.

Twenty-six freshmen who were awarded numerals are Leroy Witzke, John Plum, Jimmy Peurack, Ed Egnell, Wade Wood, E. K. Sweeney, Jimmy Forrester, George Knepley, Nick Budkoff, Johnny DeArmey, Cable Starlings, Joe Burk, Harvey Machen, Al Cooke, Haskin Deeley, Johnny Page, Al Males, Charlie Weidinger, Jim Meade, Griffith Jones, Lou Gianoly, Homer Tyler, Moir Fulks, Robert Benbow, F. Sports Arena Seen At Fredericksburg

Portion of Fair Grounds May Be Taken Over.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 20.—The possibility that Fredericksburg will have a long-needed sports arena for football, baseball and boxing by spring was seen today as local sports promoters went forward with plans to rent a portion of the fair grounds from the Fair Association.

Under the proposed plans a section of the grounds would be taken over, including two grandstands with a seating capacity for 2,000 persons.

At present Fredericksburgers are forced to drive 5 miles to witness any local athletic contest.

W. K. Sweetser, secretary of the Fair Association, today said the idea met with the approval of all fair directors and that the plan no doubt would be approved when presented to them.

Champ's Pilot Raps Dempsey

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Joe Gould, manager of James J. Braddock, heavyweight champion, is angry at Jack Dempsey. He let out a verbal blast at the old champion today. Gould has taken exception to Dempsey's announcement that he will dig up a white hope to fight Joe Louis, and he reminds the old Manassa thumper that he was not so good himself when they wanted him to meet Harry Wills.

"Where does Dempsey get off, when he says he will get a white hope to fight Joe Louis?" was Joe's complaint. "Who and what does he think Jim Braddock is? Isn't Braddock the champion? And isn't he ready to fight Joe Louis for the title when the time comes? I think it is an insult to Braddock for that bird to go around saying he will soon have a white hope candidate to meet Louis. Braddock won his title on the level. It was not a gift, and he will prove himself a real champion when he faces Louis."

Sonnenberg agreed and what Delaney did to Godwin made history. After the bout Mitchie, who had until then remained in the background, walked over to Ahearn.

"I told you I'd have a great fighter some day," he reminded Mons Goldilocks.

"Who have you got?" Ahearn queried in all innocence, thinking perhaps Mitchie was managing a preliminary boy.

"Why that Delaney's my boy," Billy purred triumphantly. Mons Goldilocks swooned—and that was the realization of a dream for Billy Mitchie.

The Big Ten records gave Pincura credit for hurling at a .552 percentage clip, completing 37 out of 67 heaves.

Richards 1936 Roosevelt Captain

Halfback to Lead Eleven; Beamer, Star, Honored by Alumni.

A 16-YEAR-OLD sophomore, Paul Richards, has been elected captain of Roosevelt High's football team for next season. Election of the 140-pound, fast-stepping halfback became known yesterday when Francis Beamer, co-captain, and outstanding member of the 1935 Roosevelt eleven, was honored by alumni of the school for his brilliant play during the past season.

Beamer was awarded a football statuette by Robert I. Silverman, president of the Roosevelt Alumni Association, who made the presentation during the half-time intermission of the Roosevelt-Forrest Park High basket ball game.

Beamer qualified for the award by being unanimously chosen by his team-mates, Coach Lynn Woodworth and Birch E. Bayh, head of the physical education department of the public schools, as the most valuable player on the team.

Eleven members of the 1935 team were presented with letters by Principal Allan Davis. Coach Lynn Woodworth spoke briefly. Those receiving letters were Beamer, Spiro Kolius, Frank Witt, Lou Hayman, Gus Papanicolas, Lloyd MacDonald, Julius Lewis, Dick Grant, Loyal Grimm, Robert Kollmyer, Richards and Manager Dick Schmidt.

All except Grimm, Kollmyer and Richards will be graduated in June. The three remaining regulars are sophomores.

Richards was one of the Rough Riders' better ball carriers this fall. Beamer's passing, punting and defensive work made him one of the outstanding players in the interhigh series.

Thelma Todd's Former Spouse To Be Quizzed

Summonses for Ex-Husband and Beauty Issued in Death Inquiry.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Dec. 20.—Pat Di Cicco, stage dancer who sprang into prominence when he married Thelma Todd, tonight was thrust by grand jury investigators into a major role in the strange drama of his former wife's death.

Two summonses were issued by the district attorney's office, both centering the grand jury inquiry on the dance man's movements during the last night the comedienne was known to have been alive.

One summons went to New York, informing Di Cicco—who boarded an eastbound plane the day after Miss Todd's body was found in the front seat of her car—that the "hasty departure raises numerous questions concerning your former wife's death."

Beauty Summoned.

The second summons was issued for Margaret Lindsay, brunette film beauty and the dance man's partner at a Trocadero cabaret party during the hours just before Miss Todd died.

The subpena for Miss Lindsay was issued by Deputy District Attorney U. U. Bablock. He explained the actress would be questioned on "incidents she may have observed last Saturday night, which may have a bearing on our inquiry."

Bablock said other members of the party which Di Cicco attended—held at the same place, but not the same party at which Miss Todd spent her last known evening alive—also may be summoned to "determine how long various guests remained at the cafe, and what their movements were subsequent to the party."

Two Lines of Attack.

The investigation tonight centered on two lines of attack, which Grand Jury Foreman George Rochester believes will reveal beyond doubt whether Miss Todd's death, supposedly by carbon monoxide poisoning in a garage near her home, was accidental or otherwise.

The first will involve movements of the two key persons most closely associated with the actress—Di Cicco and Roland West, her business associate and intimate friend, who occupied quarters in a set of rooms in which Miss Todd lives above her seashore cafe.

The second will involve statements of six persons—all in widely varied walks of life, and four of whom did not even know Miss Todd—that they saw the beautiful comedienne at times ranging from 12 to 20 hours after her supposed death.

Ex-Chorus Girl's Fall Was Suicide, Jury Holds

San Francisco, Dec. 20 (AP).—A cororner's jury decided late today that Olga Steck, former Ziegfeld Follies star, committed suicide by leaping from the twelft-story hotel room of her former husband, Thomas Matkins, after a drinking party Wednesday. Matkins witnessed the death plunge.

"She had twice spoken of committing suicide," Matkins, father of Miss Steck's two sons, told the jury.

He said a quarrel over money preceded the leap.

U. S. Gates Open to Kagawa On Insistence of Roosevelt

Japanese Is Granted Entry If Accompanied by Doctor, Nurse.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Dec. 20.—A few hours after President Roosevelt expressed a "personal interest" in the case, immigration officers granted Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa, Japanese pacifist and Christan Socialist, a special permit today to enter the United States.

The officials, who had detained the noted social worker at quarantine here because of a health regulation, said he would be released from the Angeles Island Detention Hospital upon receipt of formal instructions from Washington.

The Immigration Board of Review at the National Capital announced its special entry decision after President Roosevelt asked the Secretaries of State, Labor and Treasury at a Cabinet meeting to speed action.

The board decided to permit him to spend seven months in this country as a visitor.

"The President," a statement released at the White House said, "has taken a personal interest in the case of Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa, Japanese Christian leader, who has come to the United States to deliver a series of religious addresses under sponsorship of the Federal Council of Chuches of Christ in America, and whose admission to this country has been questioned by immigration officials in California." The statement said the President had urged prompt action.

Dr. Eugene W. Potter, president of the Ministerial Alliance at Springfield, Mo., charged that "capitalistic and militaristic elements" were behind asserted efforts to bar Dr Kagawa.

The Immigration Board of Review ruled that Dr. Kagawa, suffering from chronic trachoma, an eye affliction which he contracted during years of social work in the slums of Japan, must be accompanied by a physician or nurse while in the United States.

Dr. Kagawa, scheduled to speak at an Interdenominational conference on Consumers' Cooperatives at Indianapolis December 30 and 31, was taken from a Trans-Pacific liner yesterday.

Ex-Slave, Firing Squad Survivor, Dies at 90

Warrenton, Va., Dec. 20 (AP).—Funeral services today for Daniel Nelson, 90, former Negro slave who boasted that he escaped unscathed from a Yankee firing squad, were held at Hurleytown, Negro settlement in lower Fauquier County. He died Wednesday night at Weston, home of the Misses Charlotte and Constance Nourse, who had taken care of him for the last five years.

Born in slavery on the Robert Martin estate in the neighborhood of Casanova. Nelson went to the battlefields in the Civil War as body servant to his master. He said he was captured near here by Union soldiers, who stood him against a tree and took potshots at him.

Public Enemy List Revived In Two Slayings

Deaths Bring the Total of Killings in Chicago to 7 Since Nov. 14.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 20.—The original public enemy list was dug up again today as authorities sought connecting links in the torture death of an unidentified man and the shotgun execution of an Al Capone lieutenant.

The two slayings, raising to seven the number of deaths attributed to gangland's resurgence since November 14, moved officials to act quickly to sustain their recent statement that Chicago was rid of organized mobs and that no revival of their feuds would be tolerated.

Investigators brought out the public enemy roster first issued in 1928 in seeking solution of one killing.

Two Arrested.

Deputy Detective Chief Walter Storms ordered the arrest of James Belcastro and Rocco Fanelli—public enemies Nos. 5 and 7—for questioning in connection with the killing of public enemy No. 26—Joseph "Pepe" Genaro, who was shot down in a tavern last night.

But they were stalemated in attempting to find a single clue in the mystery which followed the finding of a battered body three miles from where Genaro met a gangster's end.

The victim was found in a vacant lot, his skull smashed and his chest crushed. He had been stabbed. Burns on his face indicated he had been tortured. His legs were bound.

Had Been Bludgeoned.

Lieut. Otto Erlanson said he apparently had been bludgeoned with an iron stake and stabbed with an ice pick. The body was clad in a sweater, trousers, shirt and shoes. An overcoat later was picked up a mile away. A white substance on the garments led investigators to believe he may have been connected with the illicit alcohol cooking racket.

They sought to determine if Genaro, aid to Capone in the old liquor-vice-gambling syndicate, had entered that traffic and if the two killings were connected.

Dorinda E. Rogers Dies in N. Y. State

Miss Dorinda E. Rogers, socially prominent Washingtonian, died yesterday after a long illness at a sanitarium in Clifton Springs, N. Y. Until she entered the sanitarium six months ago, she made her home at the Rochambeau Apartments, 815 Connecticut avenue northwest.

She was regent of Mary Washington Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution,' for several years, a member of the Washington Club and attended the Church of the Epiphany. For many years Miss Rogers kept house for her brother, the late Walter F. Rogers, former president of the Washington Patent Lawyers Association.

Roosevelt Calls For Conference On Wild Life

Group Will Discuss All Phases of Preservation, Use of Land.

President Roosevelt announced yesterday he had called a conference on preservation of wild life to meet in Washington February 3 to 7. He asked each State to send twice as many delegates as they have Senators and Representatives, bringing the attendance to 1,064.

The President said that conservation of all forms of land, water and forest wild life would be considered. He indicated that representatives might be present from Canada and Mexico.

Among the subjects to be considered will be stream pollution control, better utilization of impounded waters, reservation lands, national parks and eroded lands. The conference will be conducted by a committee headed by F. A. Silcox, chief forester.

In calling the conference the President followed the suggestion of J. N. "Ding" Darling, noted cartoonist, who recently resigned as chief of the Biological Survey Bureau. Mr. Roosevelt said that Darling's public plea for conservation of birds, fish and game had given impetus to plans for the conference.

The President said he did not expect the conference to result in any legislation but that he hoped it would bring closer co-operation between interested groups and the Government.

Jail for Alimony Threatens Hartung

Justice Jennings Bailey, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday ordered William K. Hartung, real estate operator, of the Westchester Apartments, sent to the District Jail for 30 days for contempt of court. The charge against Mr. Hartung was that he failed to obey an order of the court that directed him to pay his divorced wife alimony.

The wife charged, through Attorney Raymond Neudecker, that her husband was $875 in arrears. She said he had remarried, occupied an expensive apartment, belonged to a fashionable club and frequented expensive night clubs and hotels.

Countering, Mr. Hartung said his remarriage was a financial asset, that since the institution of the contempt proceedings he had paid $300 and that the entertainments complained of were at the cost of his friends. Justice Bailey, in ordering him sent to jail, indicated he could purge himself by paying the arrearage.

U. S. Tax Liens Against Hopson Up $3,000,000

Government Claims Upon Utility Empire Put at $62,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 20.—The Federal Government today boosted by another $3,000,000 its tax claims against the utility empire of Howard C. Hopson, bringing to more than $62,000,000 the total liens filed against Hopson associates and affiliates.

Liens for $3,142,543.93 were filed by Internal Revenue Collector James J. Hoey against John I. Mange, Hopson's associate in reorganizing the Associated Gas & Electric Co., and three utilities affiliates of the company.

The Government claims were made after a recent check of the corporation's tax report.

The largest lien filed today was against the General Public Utilities Corporation and covered income taxes for 1932 amounting to $2,159,886.30. The lien against Mange was for $221,544 for 1929, 1930, 1931 and 1933.

The other two affiliates named were the National Public Utility Investing Corporation and the Public Utilities Investing Corporation.

Yesterday the collector of internal revenue at Newark, N. J., added $5,500,000 to the Government's demands against Hopson and Associated Gas & Electric.

The amount covered $1,521,604.13 against Hopson personally for income taxes for the years 1929 to 1933, and $3,898,058 against an undesignated New Jersey unit of the associated system.

Tax Commissioner Mark Graves likewise disclosed that New York State also was studying Hopson income tax returns for possible State action. Hopson maintains homes both in Scarsdale, N. Y., and Montclair, N. J.

Previously, Hoey filed a lien for $48,551,845 against the Associated Gas & Electric for additional taxes from 1927 to 1933. On Tuesday of this week another $2,410,318 was claimed for unpaid taxes in 1927 and 1928. A lien of $2,497,927 also has been filed against the Associated Securities Corporation, an affiliate, for taxes due in 1929, 1930 and 1931.

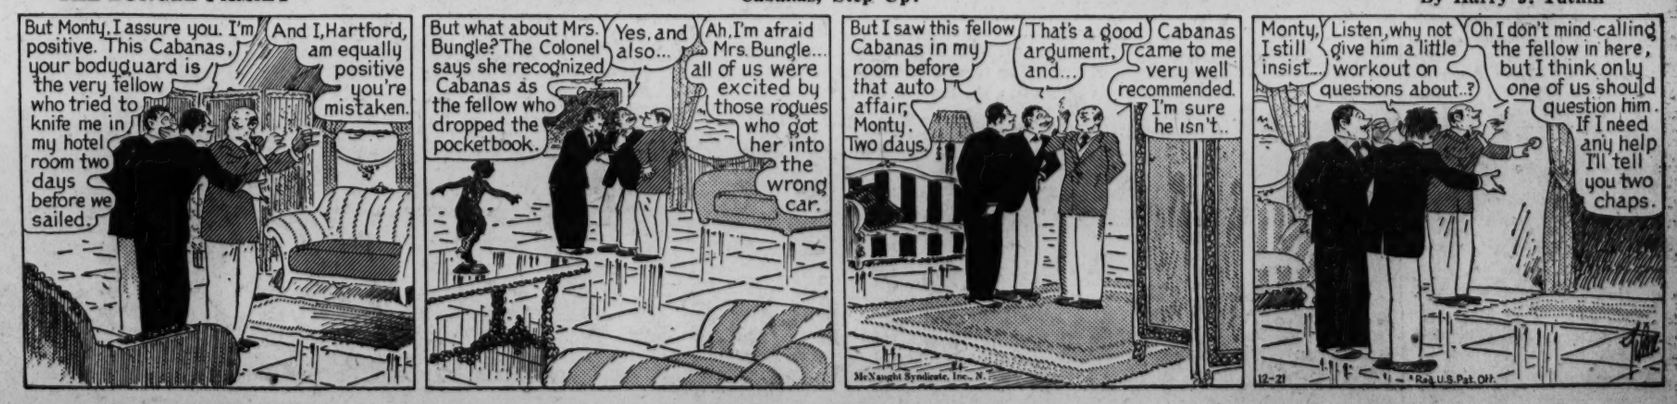
THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Cabanas, Step Up!



But Monty, I assure you. I'm positive. This Cabanas, your bodyguard is the very fellow who tried to knife me in my hotel room two days before we sailed.
And I, Hartford, am equally positive you're mistaken.
But what about Mrs. Bungle? The Colonel says she recognized Cabanas as the fellow who dropped the pocketbook.
Yes, and also...
Ah, I'm afraid Mrs. Bungle... all of us were excited by those rogues who got her into the wrong car.
But I saw this fellow Cabanas in my room before that auto affair, Monty. Two days.
That's a good argument, and...
Cabanas came to me very well recommended. I'm sure he isn't..
Monty, I still insist...
Listen, why not give him a little workout on questions about..?
Oh I don't mind calling the fellow in here, but I think only one of us should question him. If I need any help I'll tell you two chaps.

Cross-Ruff vs. Suit Establishment.

I always have to smile when I see players, faced with a difficult hand, launch themselves blithely, even enthusiastically, into a cross-ruff. It is so obvious that they are enjoying themselves hugely, ruffing away the opponents' honor cards with insignificant deuces and treys How easy at is, and how pleasant—until the moment of reckoning! For it is a sad truth that almost always the cross-ruffing process comes to an abrupt halt with an overruff by an opponent, and from that point the declarer often becomes a defender, with the erstwhile defenders in the driver's seat.

Cross-ruffs are thrilling, perhaps, but almost always short lived. In few hands have the declarer and his dummy all the high trumps, down to the nine or eight, with the requisite number of entries to each hand. A far better plan of play usually is sidesuit establishment. Witness today's hand:

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH
♠ J 10 8 4
♦ K J 8 7 5 3

WEST
♠ K 6 3
♥ J 10 9 3

EAST
♦ A Q

SOUTH
♥ A Q 5
♦ 10 2
♣ A 5 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 diam.	Pass
2 no tr.	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 spades (final bid)

West opened the jack of hearts, which was won by South's queen. South promptly laid down the ace of hearts and the ace of clubs, getting rid of dummy's two clubs. Now a club was ruffed in the dummy, and a high trump led for the finesse. West laid off with his king and, on another trump lead, East showed out so declarer went up with the ace. Another club ruff used dummy's last trump. Now there was no way to avoid the loss of two diamond tricks, one heart and the high trump.

Had declarer, after winning the first trick, started right after the diamond suit, no defense could have availed. With both diamonds out of his hand, the final plan of play could have involved the setting up of the diamond suit or an eventual cross-ruff, with equal success. The plan used was neither fish nor fowl.
